Welch's

QUALITY FRUIT JAMS

THIS line of pure fruit jams is a real money-maker. A full pack of all fruits, and all packed with pure sugar bought at a favorable price. You offer your customers Welch Quality at a moderate cost—without sacrifice of profit.

Back of this is Welch co-operation based on experience. It includes extensive advertising throughout the Dominion, strong window displays, and other direct sales-helps.

Every advantage is yours. Goods now ready for immediate delivery. The advertising is running. The more you use it the more good it will do. The more goods you display the more you will sell. Welch-Quality are buy-words.

From the fruitlands of Niagara come Grapelade, Peachlade, Plumlade and other pure Welch jams. All are rich with the goodness of the fruits. All are attractively packed in 15 oz. glass jars, and in 4 lb. tins. Ask your wholesaler to quote you prices now.

An All-Year Seller

WE do not know where the idea originated—but it is a fact that some merchants regard Dye Soaps as "Season Sellers"—a proposition that "goes big" only in the Summer.

Whatever may have been the case heretofore, there is now at least one Dye Soap that refuses to be classed as a mere "warm weather friend."

Aladdin is going big the whole year through. Your customers require this most wonderful of Dye Soaps for their blouses, underwear and household draperies—just as much to-day as in the month of July.

Aladdin is advertised as strongly to the public in January as in any other month. All it needs is a place on your counter—it will swell your January sales and profits if you give it a fair chance.

The Rich, Creamy Milk that Improves all Baking and cuts the cost of Cooking

Borden's intensive advertising has been, and is now, telling the people of Canada (hundreds of them are customers right in your locality) that Borden's St. Charles Milk gives an improved, rich, creamy flavor to all baking in which it is used and that because it is so wholesome and rich in butter fats, less butter is required and a smaller quantity of St. Charles is needed than ordinary milk since St. Charles is rich, pure milk, with the cream left in.

During the cold weather and the holiday season your customers will be doing more home baking and candy-making. Co-operate with Borden advertising and speed up your sales by getting up a good Borden window display. Everybody knows St. Charles Milk—let them know you stock it—the results will reward you.

Write for free recipe booklets and display cards.

Keeps Dust Down--

IMPERIAL
FLOOR DRESSING

Imperial Floor Dressing comes in one and four-gallon lithographed sealed cans, and in half-barrels and barrels. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for prices and a demonstration.

Dirt is bound to accumulate in busy stores. But it can be kept from settling on your stock and shelves in the form of dust if you use Imperial Floor Dressing.

Customers will be attracted by the absence of dust in your store, by the neat appearance of your merchandise, by your "spick and span" displays and bright show cases.

One application of Imperial Floor Dressing cleans and preserves floors and prevents dust from rising. One gallon will treat upwards of 700 square feet and does not need renewing for weeks.

Imperial Floor Dressing is non-evaporating and non-gumming. It catches and holds the dust on the floor where it can easily be swept up and disposed of. It is the most sanitary and satisfactory dressing you can buy—or sell—for floors, linoleum or oil cloth.

Its effective use in your own place of business creates a big market for floor dressing among your customers. Talk to the Imperial Oil salesman about it.

She will ask you for Blue Ribbon Peaches do you know Why ?

"Our Great National Advertising Campaign will bring the Housewives to You for Blue Ribbon Peaches"

You are going to have numerous calls for dried peaches in packages under the Blue Ribbon Brand. Are you prepared to supply this demand?

The women of America prefer BLUE RIBBON PEACHES in packages because they differ from the ordinary dried peaches in that the fuzz and much of the peeling has been removed by a thorough washing and brushing process which leaves the fruit bright in color and attractive, as well as wholesome and economical.

You Save Five per cent Shrinkage

When you buy dried peaches in packages, you save the five per cent shrinkage that occurs when fruit is exposed in bulk. You also save time, string, bags and labor. You supply your customers with dried peaches at their best when you sell them BLUE RIBBON PEACHES in packages.

Mr. RETAIL MERCHANT: Would You Like to Employ an Expert Bookkeeper at $10.00 a Month?

Without any further trouble on your part than making out your sales slip when your customer makes a purchase, would you like this bookkeeper—

I. To give your customer, with each purchase, without offending him, a statement of the full amount he owes you to date?

GROWERS BRAND PRUNES are California-quality prunes grown and packed "up to standard." Yet, they're priced a little lower than you'd expect to pay. Most of the prunes packed under Growers Brand run to the medium and smaller sizes; but frequent tests have proved that they are richer in flavor, have a higher sugar content and contain a finer grade of meat than the larger-sized prunes.

Ask your jobber!

GROWERS BRAND PRUNES are packed in three ways to meet every need: in the regular 25-lb. and 50-lb. wooden boxes [all sizes]; in a special 5-lb. Growers Brand carton containing medium-sized prunes [60-70's]; and the same-sized carton containing a blend of the smaller-sized prunes [70-80's and 80-90's]. Grown and packed by California Prune & Apricot Growers Inc., 5471 Market Street, San Jose, Cal.

THE aim of the MacLean Publishing Company is to give our readers the finest type of editorial service—the best market service, and the most up-to-date methods and ideas as aids to better merchandising.

We are confident you will want to renew your subscription for 1921—for, as many men have expressed it in renewing, they would not want to continue in business if the market information of MacLean business newspapers were not available.

Every dollar saved in renewing subscriptions means just one dollar more that we can devote to bettering our editorial and market services. The large majority of merchants realize this and when they do not renew promptly—it is due to an oversight. We feel in bringing the plain facts to their attention they will not, in their own interests, permit us to waste money in persuading them to renew when they intend doing so from the first.

In the present indefinite state of markets and prices you will not wish to be without a single issue—which will happen if you do not renew promptly.

If you will help us in this way we can serve you better and to serve our readers better is the daily effort of every member of our staff.

Grocers' Stocks Show Decrease

Reports From All Over the Country Received by Canadian Grocer Are That Stocks Are Twenty and Twenty-five Per Cent. Less Than at Same Time in Preceding Year—1920 Business Will Show an Increase

STOCKS of grocery commodities carried by retailers are considerably less than at this time in 1919, according to letters received by Canadian Grocer from merchants in all parts of the Dominion. Few merchants are heavily stocked with any one line, and with possible the exception of sockeye salmon they will shortly be in a position to buy practically all lines. Merchants report business in 1920 as showing an increase of ten to thirty-five per cent. over that in 1919. The amount of unemployment is considerably less than the public is led to believe by the reports that have been appearing in the daily press from time to time. This would indicate that the outlook for business for the balance of the winter months is anything but a gloomy one. The following are a few of the letters received from merchants in the towns and cities as indicated:

Saskatoon, Sask.—"Stock is about the same as in 1919. We have very little jam and are buying just in small quantities as we require them. In fact, we are not heavily stocked in any line and are buying practically everything in small quantities. Customers are buying as usual and business is keeping up satisfactorily."

Another merchant in Saskatchewan writes:—"Stocks of general groceries are twenty-five per cent. less than in 1919. Have fairly heavy stocks of salt but not heavily stocked in other lines. Jam stocks will last about two months. Customers are holding back purchasing to a certain extent. Grocery sales average well up with last year, but dry goods and boots and shoes considerably less."

Stock 20 Per Cent. Less

Marbleton, Que.—"My stock is twenty per cent. less than last year, not heavily stocked in any one line. Light stocks of jams and canned goods. Will probably have to buy before the end of the season. Customers have not been buying as freely as in the past, mostly because they are expecting lower prices and partly because of unemployment. For the first nine months of last year our business showed an increase but the last three months was a little under."

Lindsay, Ont. — "We are carrying about one-third less stock at this time than we were a year ago. We are fairly well supplied with jams and salmon. Some of these jams were bought at this year's high prices and the balance at last year's prices. Will probably have sufficient stock of canned vegetables to carry us until the end of April. Business compares very favorably with last year, although customers are buying in smaller quantities. There is little unemployment here. Our delivery costs are just the same as last year as we use the co-operative delivery system."

Watford, Ont.—"Stock is much lower than last year and we are not heavily stocked on any one line. Jams have not been selling very freely on account of the high price, but as our stock of jams is small, will be ready to buy just as soon as prices are low enough for customers to again buy freely. As our business is practically all farm trade, we find that the farmers are only buying necessities as they claim that owing to the fact that they are getting lower price for their products, they are losing money. Our business increased ten per cent. last year."

Not Heavily Stocked on Any Line

Guelph, Ont.—"We are carrying about $8,000 less stock than at this time last year. Generally we are not heavily stocked on any special line, although we have enough jams and sockeye salmon to carry us over the season. These jams were bought at last year's low figure. In canned vegetables, our stock will last until the middle of March. Other lines we are buying in small quantities. Customers are not buying as heavily as in the past, they seem to think that all prices are coming down. Our business increased last year fifteen per cent. There is very little unemployment here, and as far as our business is concerned we have not made any cut in the wages of our staff, nor do we expect to do so."

Stratford, Ont.—"Stocks of all lines are lighter than last year. Jams are especially light and have been buying in small quantities just as I need them. Have enough canned vegetables to last until about the end of January. Customers have been buying carefully expecting prices to be lower. Business for 1920 will run about the same as 1919.

Soo Business Shows Increase

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.— "Carrying twenty-five per cent less stock than last year. Have about two months supply of jams. Have fairly heavy stock of sockeye salmon. Other lines are low and we are buying as required. There is practically no unemployment and customers are buying regularly. Our business shows an increase of thirty-five per cent over 1919."

Burk's Falls, Ont.—"Stock is not quite so heavy as last year. Not heavily stocked with jams and will have to buy shortly. Fairly well supplied with canned vegetables and best grades of salmon. Other lines we are buying in small quantities as required. Our turnover in 1920 has increased ten per cent. Very little unemployment."

Cardinal, Ont. — "General stock is twenty-five per cent. less. Not heavily stocked in any line. Have just about enough jams to supply regular trade until spring. Have fairly heavy stock of sockeye salmon. Buying canned goods from week to week as required. Everybody has employment and customers buying regularly. Business in 1920 well ahead of 1919."

Little Unemployment in Brantford

Brantford, Ont.—"Our stock is about twenty per cent. less than at this time in 1919. Not heavily stocked in any one line. Stock of jams is light, will probably be in the market about the first of February. Fairly good stock of peas but other canned vegetables are light. Also a fair supply of the better grade of salmon but other lines are not heavy. There is very little unemployment and business has been good. Our increase in 1920 is eighteen per cent over 1919."

Sturgeon Falls, Ont. — "Stocks are about the same as in 1919. Not heavily stocked on any line and buying in small quantities just as required. A small stock of jams and will be in a position to buy very shortly. Unemployment is more noticeable, but customers appear to be buying regularly."

Coaticook, Que.—"Our general stock is fifteen per cent less than in 1919. Will probably have sufficient jams and canned goods to carry us for the season. Other lines are light. There is little unemployment and customers are buying about the same as in 1919. Sales show a satisfactory increase."

Misrepresentation in Vinegar Sales

Four Retail Merchants in Vancouver, it is Claimed, Are Selling Distilled Brown Vinegar And Representing it as Malt

VANCOUVER (Special)—In conversation with Mr. Rickey, the Dominion Pure Food Inspector in Vancouver, it was learned that there are four retail merchants due for summonses now for this offence: "Selling distilled brown vinegar and representing it as malt vinegar."

Mr. Rickey states that the barrels are labelled distilled brown and the invoices describe the vinegar as distilled brown, yet the four samples on which he bases his convictions were handed to him for malt vinegar.

This inspector says also that there are some merchants who sell compound for pure lard; also claiming that in both these cases the retailer knows what he is doing.

The Case of Maple Products

Canadian Grocer discussed the question of maple products. This subject of prosecutions for adulterated maple syrup comes up at every R.M.A. convention, but Mr. Rickey explained that by the Act of June, 1920, provision is made whereby the retailer, if summoned for any such infraction of the Food & Drugs Act may take oath that the goods were sold by him in exactly the condition received from his wholesaler, produce invoices showing that he sold the goods as described in his invoice, and bring in the wholesaler into the case. The case would then include both the retailer's and the jobber's testimony, and the merchant could clear his good name, and avoid prejudicial publicity. Or if the merchant felt that he had been wrong, he could in most instances, if he satisfied the inspector that it was not deliberate, settle the matter out of court. The inspector said, however, that few merchants availed themselves of this leniency.

Condemned Salmon Brought to Vancouver From Seattle

But the Co-operation of the U. S. Pure Food Authorities and the Dominion Pure Food Department Prevented It Being Consumed in This Country

VANCOUVER (Special)—The Vancouver papers gave prominence to an article which stated that two scow loads of canned salmon which had been condemned in Seattle had been brought into Vancouver with the expectation of feeding it to the Canadian public. This fish was unlabelled.

However, the United States pure food authorities and the Dominion pure food department co-operate very well, and advance notice of this little shipment was sent to the Dominion Pure Food Branch in Vancouver. The goods are now in bond in Vancouver. The owners are profuse in their declarations that such fish was not suggested at all as Canadian food, but was destined for Australia or some other place.

Whether the Australians or any other British Dominion will be flattered to receive this shipment, which should have been destroyed, is another matter, but the Vancouver officials state positively that this lot will not be permitted for consumption in Canada.

Besides this incident being reassuring, in that the interests of the Canadian consumers are being effectively safeguarded by the Government it is well for the trade to note the advantage of the Canadian law which does not permit the importation of unlabelled canned goods. It is of utmost importance that every can bear a full description of its contents, together with the name of the firm or individual who is sponsor for it, before it gets into Canada.

New Style Food Building Is Now Proposed

Toronto, Jan. 5. (Special)—The Executive Committee of the Food Products Association met with representatives of the Canadian National Exhibition in the offices of the latter on Wednesday afternoon. One of the purposes of the meeting was to go over a contract form which the Exhibition officials had drawn up and which will be used by the Food Products Association in getting food manufacturers to take exhibit space in the new building. This form was gone into carefully by both the parties and some amendments were made.

The Executive also viewed a new proposal for a food building in the form of a miniature cement building. This was prepared by architects selected by the Exhibition to go over the exhibition grounds and make proposal for a rearrangement of them. This building would be only about twelve feet or so in height and would have grass open courts throughout, in which people going through the building could sit down from time to time. The building would be supported with cement pillars and the open court yards would mean plenty of fresh air for those attending the exhibition and for the visitors throughout the building. Such a building the architects point out could be erected for considerably less money that the one that has been proposed somewhat similar to the present transportation building.

Atlantic Sugar Refineries Are Again Operating

Montreal, Jan. 5.—(Special) — The Atlantic Sugar Refineries have commenced refining granulated sugar again after having been closed for about three months. This is the third of the big four refineries to re-open their plant. It is stated that 1,000 men appeared at the plant asking for work and the number that were taken on were given work at 30 cents per hour, which is a reduction in wages from the previous rate of 42 cents per hour. This is some indication of the present labor conditions.

A fire, which for a while caused considerable alarm and later much amusement, occurred in the grocery store of Mrs. Lucy Upchurch, at London, Ont. When the firemen arrived they found the rear of the premises filled with dense smoke and on making their way through the premises to locate the origin of the blaze, they discovered that a fine roast of beef which had been intended for dinner, was burning itself into an unrecognizable mass. No other harm was done.

Big Turnover in Standard Remedies

Sells $200 Worth of Proprietary Remedies—T. D. Schiller, Cooksville, Ont., Builds Big Business in These Lines in Spite of the Fact That There is a Drug Store in the Village—Sold Twelve Dozen Bottles of a Certain Cough Syrup in Five Weeks.

"ONE of the biggest selleds we have in the drug section is —— Cough Syrup," stated T. D. Schiller, general merchant, Cooksville, Ont., to Canadian Grocer. "Some time ago a traveller for a wholesale drug firm offered me a special discount on this line if I bought twelve dozens. I was not in need of cough syrup at the time, having in stock quite a supply of the various brands I was selling. Finally I decided to try a dozen. In due time the order arrived, and I commenced to push it by placing a couple of bottles on the counter and talking it up to the customers. The first dozen sold so well that I immediately bought a twelve dozen lot and got the discount. I made a window display of it and told everyone about it when they made purchases of other medicines. In about five weeks I had cleaned up the lot and I made fifteen cents on every bottle."

Sales $200 Monthly

Cooksville is just a village about twelve miles from the city of Toronto and reached by both steam and electric railroad. In the village there is a drug store carrying a full line of drugs and also doing dispensing. Despite this fact, however, T. D. Schiller manages to sell large quantities of proprietary remedies. His average purchases for a month amount to two hundred dollars, and his sales run considerably over this amount.

Display is a big factor in stimulating sales of remedies in the Schiller store, and as with groceries and other lines, the goods that are displayed most prominently are the seasonable ones. During the fall and winter months, cough syrups and remedies for colds and effervescent salts are shown, and in the spring, tonics and cod liver oil. There is one special brand of cod liver oil upon which Mr. Schiller concentrates his selling efforts and says he has steady demand for it the year round. During the summer months pain killers are brought to the front, because as Mr. Schiller said, "The kids will eat green apples." Talcum powders are also given attention and sales on these are quite large.

Studies Large Stores

As mentioned above, Cooksville being a small country village, does not necessarily mean that some of the methods of merchandising as adopted by the merchants in the large city cannot be applied to the business of a general store. In this instance, Mr. Schiller has proved that it can be done. When he goes to the city he spends an hour or two visiting the large stores studying their selling methods, absorbing ideas for display and watching out for new articles that he might the better be in a position to meet the competition of mail order houses and keep the home trade in his own village, for it must be remembered that the big stores in Toronto make deliveries by motor truck twice each week to Cooksville.

A Forceful Selling Power

T. D. Schiller is a strong believer in window display and has proved by his own experience that a well dressed window is a forceful selling power. He trims his windows, not only with the idea of catching the local business, but keeps in mind the fact that hundreds of automobile tourists pass through Cooksville during the summer months. He recalled instances when he gained several regular customers who were attracted to the store by the appearance of the windows. These people, having automobiles, had been in the habit of going to the city for their supplies, but now they are regular patrons, buying groceries, standard remedies, auto tires and other articles which this store handles.

Can Always Sell Another Brand

The section of the store devoted to standard remedies occupies a generous space near the front entrance. He not only stocks the usual lines, but dozens of lines are to be seen on the shelves and in the show-case, in fact almost as great an assortment as is usually carried in a small drug store. To this one fact alone Mr. Schiller attributes his success in selling remedies. He believes in carrying an assortment large enough to meet all demands. "Of course it is almost impossible to stock every brand," said Mr. Schiller, "but I carry a brand or two of each line. If I have not the particular brand asked for I can usually sell another."

MANITOBA FISH CATCH TO TOTAL 7,500,000 POUNDS

Lake Winnipeg's winter fish catch exceeds that of last year and will total between 6,500,000 and 7,500,000 pounds, H. M. McGinnis of the Riverton Fish Company, Lake Winnipeg, stated.

Mr. McGinnis said the first supply of this season's catch will be on the Winnipeg markets about January 10.

Points in the far north, where most of the whitefish are caught, have not been heard from yet, but the main catch, consisting chiefly of tulibee, will contain a fair portion of whitefish.

The warm weather of the early winter interrupted fishing operations to a great extent, Mr. McGinnis said, or the catch would have been even larger. As it is the results are very satisfactory, he declared.

Keep the Window Clear of Frost

Merchants in all Parts of the Country are Now Confronted With One of Their Worst Annoyances—Every Precaution Should be Taken to Do Away With "Freezing" of One of the Most Valuable Advertising Assets the Store Has.

NOW that the winter months are at hand grocers in all parts of the country are faced with the old trouble of window freezing. As this is one of the worst annoyances the grocers have to contend with in the winter every precaution should be taken. Windows that are covered with frost are as bad as no windows at all and, realizing this, a number of merhcants in different parts of the country have asked Canadian Grocer for pointers on the art of keeping the windows clear. Herewith are presented some tips which the grocers who is troubled with frosted windows might find useful:

The methods usually advised to prevent the deposition of moisture and frost on window-panes are the employment of double windows, or the coating of the glass with some one of the various liquids which have been recommended for the purpose. Another very efficient measure is said to be a small fan, and so placed as to blow directly upon the glass.

Some years ago a correspondent of the "Scientific American" reported to that journal a number of experiments he had made to remove ice or congelation of water from window-panes. He placed the efficacy of the remedies he employed in the following order:

Remedies Tried and Tested

(1) Flames of an alcohol lamp; (2) sulphuric acid; (3) aqua ammonia; (4) glycerin; (5) nitric acid; (6) hydrochloric acid; (7) benzine; (8) hydriodic acid; (9) boric acid; (10) alcohol (11) cobalt nitrate (12) infusion of nutgalls (13) tincture or solution of ferrous sulphate.

Some years ago H. F. Ruhl, of Manheim, P., read a paper before a State association in which he declared that the only really effective way to avoid window frost was to have the window properly constructed in the first place, and to use suitable methods of heating and lighting in the second. He had remodelled his window in accordance with his particular ideas. To quote a portion of Mr. Ruhl's paper:

"It is a well-known fact that where illumination is produced by kerosene, gas, or gasoline, the condensation of moisture on the glass is worse at night. This shows that illumination has something to do with the frost on the window. Heat supplied from a stove, a hot-air furnace, or a steam boiler also causes more or less condensation of moisture.

"In the writer's store the window is left open at the back, except that a mirror back is used; this is 30 inches high, is hung on a Pullman car spring sash balance, thus permitting it to be raised or lowered at will. At night, when the temperature ranges somewhat lower, the mirror back is raised, thus admitting warmed air to the bottles of the window and entirely preventing frost during the night. The store is heated with a hot-water heater. With this heat the radiating surfaces do not become so hot as with stove or steam heat and there is no doubt that hot-water heat is a strong factor in preventing frost on the window. The store is lighted with electricity, and this, because of the absence of an open flame, is without doubt another factor in preventing frost.

"'The proof of the pudding is in the eating,' and here's the proof of the store with the frost-proof windows: The writer's windows were entirely free from frost during the past winter, while the windows of the other stores in town were covered with frost for months at a time."

Results of Research

Quite a formidable list of glycerin and soap mixtures are employed for the purpose of preventing the condensation of moisture on the screens and windows of motor cars. During the war one of the Research Committees of the United States investigated the subject anew with the object of finding out the best "anti-dimming" preparation for gas-respirator eye-pieces. The official formula is as follows:

Sulphonated castor oil (85%)	100 parts
Sodium hydroxide	15 parts
Water-glass syrup	5 parts
Paraffin oil (heavy)	5 parts

The following two formulae are improvements on the above:

(1) Sodium salt of 65% sulphonated rape oil containing 35% water	100 parts
Sodium hydroxide	20 parts
Water-glass syrup	5 parts
Glycerin	3 parts
"Marine" oil	3 parts

Dried to form a solid stick when compressed.

(2) Potassium salt of 62% sulphonated cotton oil containing 38 per cent. water	100 parts
Sodium hydroxide	15 parts
Water-glass syrup	3 parts
Glycerin	3 parts
"Marine" oil	3 parts

Dried to form a solid stick when compressed.

The "marine oil" referred to is heavy paraffin oil. The surface of the glass is first polished until clean and dry, then a little of the composition applied, rubbed in with the hand, and polished off with a soft rag until the surface is clear.

Considers Window A Valuable Asset As Advertisement

"Kindly advise me," writes a grocer in Saskatshewan, "if you know of any method or solution that one may use in preventing the windows freezing over in winter. As my windows are a valuable advertising asset I am naturally anxious that they should be kept clear during the winter months."

This grocer is just one of many who are worried every year over the same matter. In spite of everything that may be done the windows WILL freeze, so that nothing that might help should be overlooked. As this grocer says, windows are a valuable advertising asset and should be treated as such.

CATCH OF FISH IN CANADA IS NEARLY ONE MILLION LESS

Ottawa, Dec. 31.—A decrease of nearly $1,000,000 in the value of the catch of sea fish in Canada during November, as compared with the same month a year ago, is shown by the monthly statement on seafishing issued by the Fisheries branch. The total catch of sea fish on both coasts of Canada this year for November was 382,208 cwts., with a value at the boat's side of $1,155,153. For the same month last year the catch totalled 441,650 cwts., with a value of $2,138,513.

There was a decrease of more than 30,000 cwts. in the aggregate catch of cod, haddock, hake and pollock on the Atlantic coast. The catch of salmon on the Pacific coast was 167,000 cwts. less than in November, 1919, while that of herring was 146,000 cwts. greater.

Halibut were taken in greater quantity by both Canadian and United States vessels, the latter bringing in more than two-thirds of what was landed in British Columbia.

EXPECT 1921 WILL PASS ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS

At the annual convention of salesmen of the H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, during the past week, much optimism was expressed as to the outlook for 1921, which is expected to outdo 1920 in business volume, although last year was a record breaker for the firm.

Compensation Act Should Include All Travellers

That travellers who represent wholesale and retail establishments as well as those who represent manufacturers directly should come under the Workmen's Compensation Act, was the opinion expressed at the recent annual meeting of the commercial travellers of Ontario. E. E. Starr, auditor of the Compensation Board, explained the operations of the Workmen's Compensation Act. It was felt by the convention that all travellers should be classed alike and that regulation 43, which excluded wholesale and retail establishments, should be struck out. It is expected that the officials of the association will take same action.

NEW TWINE COMPANY

The Sterling Twine Co., Ltd. of Walkerton, Ont., has recently been formed. They will manufacture commercial twines of all grades. The company is capitalized at $100,000, of which $75,000 is subscribed. George D. MacKay is the secretary.

An Electric Fan Going in Winter Draws Attention

Nothing retards sales so much as a window glazed over by "Jack Frost." First board the inside of the windows, or have tight-fitting sashes to prevent the warmer air of the store entering. Next bore a row of holes at the base of the window and a similar set at the top. This will permit a free flow of air to keep the temperature down. A simpler plan is to start an electric fan running first thing in the morning and keep it running all day. This keeps lowers the temperature so that frost the warm air on the move and will not have a chance to collect. The sight of an electric fan working in winter also will help to attract attention to the windows, especially if it be made to blow upon a small flag.

ELECTED TORONTO'S MAYOR FOR THE SEVENTH TERM

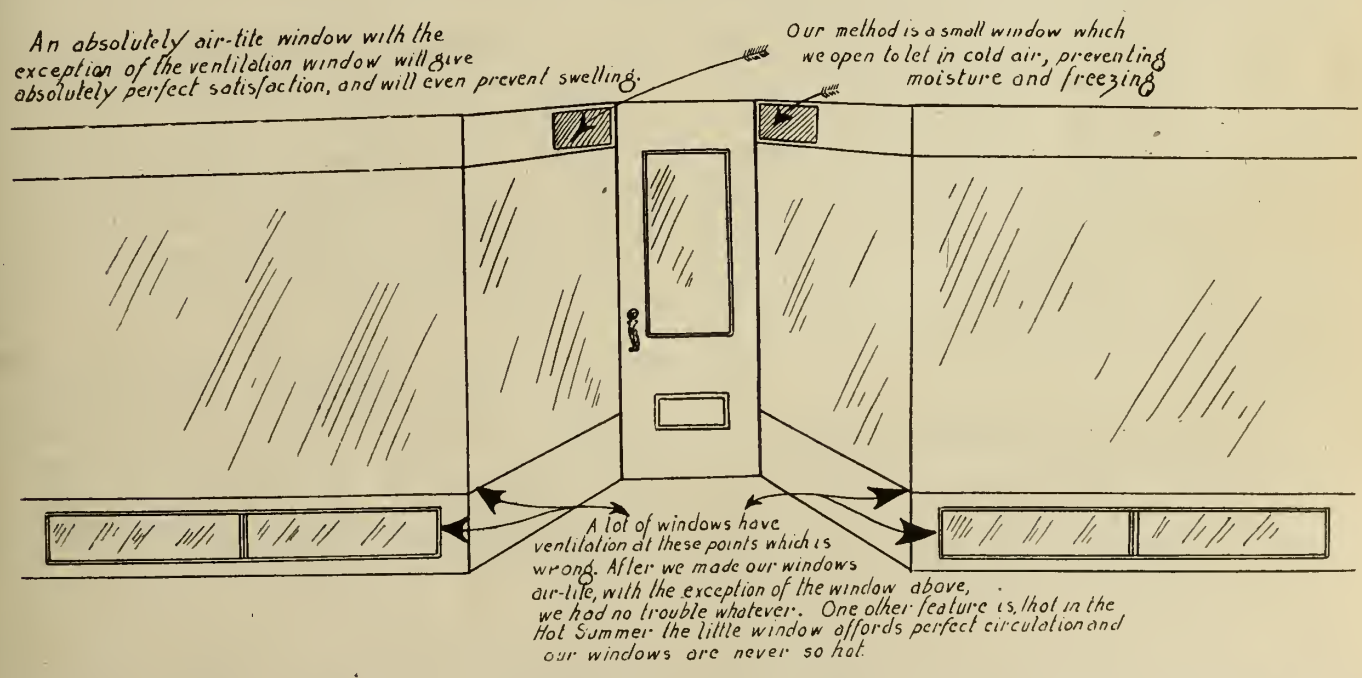
T. L. Church has been elected mayor of the city of Toronto for the seventh term. His majority on this last occasion was 15,993. Controllers elected were C. Alfred Maguire, W. W. Hiltz, Russell Nesbitt, and Joseph J. Gibbons.

Canadian Produce Association Will Meet in Montreal

The annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association will be held in Montreal on February 8 and 9. The executive officers of the association have been working hard for the past few months to make the convention this year the best ever held. Among those who will give addresses are Hon. F. C. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture; President Beattie, of the C. P. R., and E. C. Fox, president of the Wm. Davies Co., Ltd. The first day's session will be held in the Windsor Hotel, and on the second day a special train will convey the delegates to the McDonald Agricultural College. After a tour of inspection through the college, an address will be delivered by Dr. Harrison of the college, in the assembly hall, where the balance of the session will be held. A fuller program of the convention will appear in a future issue of Canadian Grocer.

Beginning the first of the year, the business of Maclure and Langley, Limited, is now being carried on under the name of Langley, Harris & Company, Limited. E. W. Langley is the president and J. G. Harris, secretary-treasurer.

An Effective Plan For Preventing Frosting of Windows



An absolutely air-tite window with the exception of the ventilation window will give absolutely perfect satisfaction, and will even prevent swelling.
Our method is a small window which we open to let in cold air, preventing moisture and freezing
A lot of windows have ventilation at these points which is wrong. After we made our windows air-tite, with the exception of the window above, we had no trouble whatever. One other feature is, that in the Hot Summer the little window affords perfect circulation and our windows are never so hot.

A great many plans have been tried out by grocers to prevent the frosting of the windows in the cold weather. A great many so-called solutions of the trouble have given relief when put into practice. Herewith is outlined a plan as adopted by the Mills Company, Hamilton, Ontario, which has proved very effective in overcoming this difficulty. The lettering fully describes the plan. Dealing further with this subject, May Bros., West Toronto, advise that an air-tight, dust-proof window will not freeze. The temperature in the windows of this store is about the same as outside. If, by accident, the door to the window is left open the windows become frosted.

CO-OPERATION OF ADVERTISING

"Now, I hold strongly that the best investment for surplus profits is to expend them on judicious advertising, wisely and carefully planned, and executed with originality and forcefulness. These same surplus profits invested wisely in advertising then become a real 'gilt-edge' security, and a solid reserve of strength to meet days of difficulty, and to overcome quietly, but surely, the most frenzied of competition, and the business thus provided with reserve strength stands four-square to meet and overcome every attack."

THUS spoke Lord Leverhulme, known the world over as the largest soap manufacturer, recently.

The retail grocer who is wisely using the co-operation of advertising to increase his sales, and keep his name constantly before his buying public, is, it is pretty safe to say, securing gratifying results. He is earning profits on an investment—not in the direct manner in which possibly certain gilt-edged securities might bring—but profits spread over a long period of time, more lasting and enduring.

A well-defined plan of advertising will materially assist the selling effort of the average grocer or general merchant at the present time. Specific mention of values available at his store is always advisable. Cutting prices to outdo your competitor is not necessary, but linking your selling talks with fair, unbiased announcements in your best newspaper medium will keep your stocks moving and generally lend activity to lines of slowly moving merchandise.

TAKE NOTE OF SALMON LABELS

IT has come to the attention of the British Columbia salmon canners that many lots of salmon are on the market that are improperly marked. The law in regard to properly labeling canned salmon is about to be rigidly enforced. All the reputable packers, jobbers and brokers have carefully complied with the law, but there are lots of salmon in the hands of the trade that have not sufficient description of the contents on the label. In some cases there does not appear the name of a packer, jobber, broker or anyone; stock labels being used, and nothing on the label indicating who is responsible for the goods.

The fact that a lot of salmon is low-priced does not argue that the salmon is inferior; it only necessarily indicates that someone has been forced to make a quick sale—needed ready money. But the retailers' protection is the name of a reputable packer; a responsible jobber, or an established broker. The law requires that someone shows his good faith by putting his name on the label.

Furthermore, British Columbia salmon is not sufficient description; not even if the word finest is added. It must be properly described as Sockeye, Cohoe, Redspring, Pink, Chum or whatever it actually is. Salmon has been seen for sale in retail stores, packed with a very attractive label reading, British Columbia Sockeye, with the word sockeye very carelessly smeared out with a rubber stamp, and no other description volunteered.

Canadian Grocer has it on good authority that the reputable packers have complained to the Federal Government and asked for protection for their trade. The Government inspectors will ACT and with the memory of the maple syrup inspections vivid in our memory we would recommend the retailer to scrutinize carefully his purchases; the inspectors have an unhappy faculty for making the retailer the victim of whatever action is taken.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF

PEOPLE with money to spend should not hesitate to give reasonable encouragement to merchants for the benefit of trade at this time, says C. A. Bogert, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association. It is an opportunity for merchants generally and grocers in particular to exert every selling effort to get these people to spend their money.

THE YEAR 1921 witnesses the 35th birthday of Canadian Grocer, the first paper, started by Col. J. B. Maclean, president of the MacLean Publishing Co. Canadian Grocer has grown with the years, and as the only weekly journal in Canada dealing with the grocery trade, is read by almost seven thousand grocers in the Dominion.

CANADA is still "all to the merry," and the people have the money. But they know now how to keep it, too. It is up to the grocer to get the people into the habit of buying again and in this way help to lift the Dominion out of the rut and up on the road of sound business again.

No Fears in New Year Outlook

Many Facts Apparent in Business Conditions at the Present Time Justify an Optimistic Viewpoint—The Buying Strike on the Part of the Public Only Temporary.

Written by C. J. MORRIS

A NEW year has been ushered in—one to which every man in the trade should be able to look forward without fear or misgiving, even if, owing to the temporary buying strike on the part of the public, the demand for goods has recently been less insistent than it has been during the last few years of easy sales and high prices.

Many keen business men claim that the newspaper press has been to a large degree responsible for the falling off in business which has occurred of late, and to some extent no doubt the forecasts given by the daily press of falling prices have caused many people to postpone making purchases in the expectation that by so doing they would be able to buy much more cheaply later on. Some, on the other hand, believe that the real cause of the quieter business conditions is to be traced to the fall in values of all kinds of agricultural products.

Tightens the Purse Strings

It is true that the value of the grain crops even at present prices exceeds the value of the smaller crops of last year, but when the farmer sees himself faced with the necessity of accepting a much lower rate for all his products than that on which he had been calculating, it is only natural that he should tighten his purse strings and keep in reserve against the proverbial rainy day that portion of his savings which, under different circumstances, he might have been inclined to spend. The opinion that this is what has occurred is supported by the fact that the savings in the banks in November, 1920, stood at a figure $154,000,000 higher than in November the previous year. This disinclination on the part of the agricultural community to make purchases has been reflected in the lessened demand for industrial products, resulting in a certain amount of unemployment, working on short time or reduced wages, and a consequent diminishing purchasing power of the industrial community.

The Foreign Situation

Looking still further for the primary cause of the fall in values, careful observers will see that the disorganization of the foreign markets resulting from the failure of a large part of Europe to return to pre-war conditions is the fundamental cause of the whole trouble. There would have been no surplus of wheat, cotton, wool, leather or copper, or indeed of any other commodity, if those in Europe who are in need of these products, who in fact are in grievous suffering for lack of them, were in a position to buy and pay for them. Wheat is down because those who need it have not the money wherewith to buy it. Owing to their failure to start reproducing they have nothing they can offer us in exchange for it. Those prophets who a year or two back foretold a world shortage and consequent rise in price of wool, leather, cotton, and other raw materials because the world could not produce sufficient to satisfy its needs failed to remember that to need something does not necessarily include the ability to pay for it.

Can Pay Only in Goods

The only way in which Europe can pay for what she needs is by sending us goods or products in exchange. To do this she must produce, and to produce she must get back to something resembling pre-war conditions of stability. Once she has set her house in order and devoted herself to production she will soon regain her purchasing power. Our surplus products will then again be in demand. This will restore the purchasing power of our people, with a consequent revival of domestic demand for our industrial products resulting in a return to prosperous conditions all round.

Apart however from these considerations, a considerable degree of optimism is justifiable with respect to Canada's business outlook for this coming year. Immigration promises to be exceedingly heavy, perhaps breaking all previous records. The exchange premium on U.S. money, while affecting our purchases there, gives us a great advantage as competitors in U.S. markets. Food prices show an undoubted tendency to gradually return to a normal basis which will be a large factor in alleviating labor unrest, and there is still a large amount of purchasing power in our own people which, though it has been lately held in restraint for one reason or another, is only dormant and liable to be revived as soon as prices show evidence of returning to a settled basis.

The retailer can therefore look forward with equanimity and confidence to the coming months, secure in the knowledge that though he may find a more extended scope and perhaps a greater need for the exercise of his selling ability than has of late been apparent, the business is here to hand, sufficient to make the year 1921 no less a successful one than that of its immediate predecessors.

B. C. Retail Merchants Want Small Debts Law Changed

Also Want Legislation Which Will Permit a Merchant to Hold a Customer From Leaving City Even Where His Debt is Less Than $100

VANCOUVER (Special)—The Retail Merchants' Association of British Columbia expect to pay a visit to Victoria shortly to take up several matters requiring legislative changes. One is the subject of the collection machinery for small debts; it is hoped that larger bills can be collected through the small debts court than is at present allowed. The merchants feel that they are put to too much expense to collect their larger accounts when they have to be taken through the District Court.

They are also hopeful of getting a change made on the "copias" proceedings which will permit a merchant to hold a customer from leaving the city, even where his debt is less than $100. At present, it is stated, a delinquent can "flit" leaving a debt less than $100, without the creditor taking action. The R.M.A. hopes to have a change made that will permit a merchant to stop a debtor leaving town, owing accounts of $25 or over.

They will probably ask for a change in the Garnishee Act. At present, in certain circumstances, the exemptions protect the whole salary, and payment of accounts cannot be obtained.

The R.M.A. expect to organize two branches on Vancouver Island in the near future, one at Ladysmith and one at Courtney.

The Cheerio Club, a social organization among the employees of the Christie, Brown Biscuit Co., celebrated the passing of the old year, and the advent of the new, with a big dinner party at the Walker House.

Believes the Worst of the Readjustment Period Is Over

W. G. Patrick, in Addressing Annual Convention of His Salesmen, is Optimistic in Regard to 1921 Business—Stocks Held Much Smaller Than Last Year

THE YEAR just passed has been a year of readjustment, of deflation, of coming back to more or less normal conditions!" said W. G. Patrick, of W. G. Patrick & Co., Ltd., Toronto, in his opening address at the firm's annual sales convention. "In the beginning of 1920 we were on the crest of the wave of prosperity. To-day we start in the hollow of the wave of depression and shall again ascend to greater prosperity before the close of the year 1921. We believe that as regards business conditions in the trades which we cater to, in spite of the fact that from outward appearance they are not as rosy or bright as they seemed at this period last year, fundamentally conditions are much better. A great deal of deflation in values has taken place. Goods are now being offered at their intrinsic value, and although there has been a wave of non-buying, both by consumers and retailers, this will soon pass. The wonderful Christmas business which the grocery trade has had must have taken away the pessimism which many felt. Stocks held by the majority of wholesalers and retailers are not heavy, and many lines being offered today cannot be replaced at what they are being sold for. After every condition we pass through, there is always a reaction. It has been a non-buying condition for the last few months, the reaction will come and there will be greater buying than ever.

"The opinion of many of our best business writers is that we have passed through the worst of the adjustment period. We, ourselves, endorse this opinion. The year 1920 has been the biggest year in our history. We have had heavy increases on all our principal lines. Last year we started off with a tremendous rush of business—heavy bookings for forward shipments had been made. This year this import business is considerably smaller, but to offset that, stocks held by our wholesale and retail friends are much smaller than last year."

"We can but feel most optimistic in the outlook for the coming year. Conditions abroad, although still somewhat unsettled, are gradually coming back to normal."

A Representative Convention

The convention lasted for three days, with two night sessions, thirty representatives being present from various provinces in the Dominion. The spirit of optimism prevailed throughout the entire convention and it was the opinion of all those attending that this was the most earnest and best ever held.

Among those present were: E. Thomas, Calgary, Alta.; W. Murray, Winnipeg, Man., W. J. Lafave, C. Rick, Montreal; G. Moffat and D. Cowan, Halifax, also the Ontario and city representatives.

Wm. Davies Co. Salesmen Are Confident of a Record Year

Sales Manager A. J. Burbidge is Recipient of Presentation From His Staff—President E. C. Fox and Vice-President F. O. Mitchell Address Convention

THE ANNUAL convention of the selling staff of the Wm. Davies Company, Limited, was held at their plant, 521 Front street east, Toronto, last week. All of the city salesmen and most of the outside representatives were present, the latter coming in from points as far east as the Maritime provinces. A. J. Burbidge, sales manager, acted as chairman.

President Addresses Salesmen

This convention was suitably opened by very appropriate addresses from the president of the company, E. C. Fox, and also the vice-president, F. O. Mitchell. Both addresses contained words of help and encouragement with which to start the new year, and which will enable each salesman to look forward with considerable confidence for a record 1921. During the convention the different department heads spoke to the salesmen in groups, each group representing the district from which they came. Then they were given practical demonstrations and instructions in the factory operations. The key-note of the convention was that the policy for the New Year would be to maintain all products at a high standard.

Some Presentations

At the noonday dinner on the last day the country salesmen made a presentation of a handsome travelling bag to their sales manager, Mr. Burbidge, after an expression of the high esteem in which he was held by the entire sales staff. A similar presentation was also made to W. J. Robertson, who has been associating himself with the sales manager for a number of years.

This very instructive and helpful convention was brought to a close by a dance and euchre held at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms on Thursday night.

Notable amongst those present were: Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Park, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Burbidge, Mr. and Mrs. F. Megan, Mr. and Mrs. L. Acton, Mr. and Mrs. J. Burt, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. W. Soper, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Vanstone, Miss G. Dimond, Miss S. Malone, Miss B. Russell, Miss F. Cooper, etc.

Suitable prizes were awarded for euchre games, these being won by Mrs. Joseph Burt, Mr. Tomlinson, Mrs. A. F. Park and Mr. R. Alsop.

Swift Canadian Mgr. Honored By Meat Packers

O. W. Waller, until recently manager of the Toronto plant, and Canadian manager of the Omaha plant of the Swift Canadian Company, was called to Toronto recently to attend a banquet tendered him by the Ontario meat packers at the National Club, Toronto. J. S. McLean, of the Harris Abattoir Co., acted as toastmaster. Tributes to the high esteem in which Mr. Waller is held and sincere regrets at his departure from Canada, were expressed by everyone present. Among those present were: E. C. Fox and F. O. Mitchell, of the Wm. Davies Company; James Harris and J. S. McLean of the Harris Abattoir Co.; Brig.-Gen. Gunn and F. M. Moffat, of Gunn's, Ltd.; T. F. Mathews and Jas. Law, of the Canadian Packing Company; J. W. Duval, of Armour's; W. G. Irvin, of the Whyte Packing Co.; T. C. Fletcher and F. W. Topping, of the Union Stock Yards, Toronto, and J. H. Tapley and F. E. Kaderabek, of Swift's Toronto office. As a token of their good wishes, T. F. Mathews, on behalf of the packers, presented Mr. Waller with a beautifully equipped club bag as a gift to Mrs. Waller.

Mr. Waller feelingly thanked his friends for their kind thoughtfuness and expressed his keen regrets at leaving the very pleasant associations in Canada during the past seven years.

Curtailment of Credits Is Advisable at This Time

Sales Staff of Eby-Blain, Ltd., Toronto, Meets in Annual Convention — Addresses by Hugh Blain, H. D. Eby and A. C. Pyke

ADDRESSING the sales staff of Eby-Blain, Ltd., wholesale grocers, Toronto, on credit conditions, H. D. Eby expressed the opinion that the present time was opportune to make curtailments in the extension of credits. The retail trade, too, he believed, was well advised to eliminate as much as possible credit accounts, and to conduct business for cash. With the possibility of some further declines in prices of commodities, the position of the retailer would be rendered somewhat easier because the amount of capital invested in a business could be considerably lessened. He should also see to it that he has less credit on his books.

The annual convention of the sales staff, together with the directors and heads of departments of the firm, was held at the National Club, Toronto, last week. H. Hardy, sales manager, presided, and addresses were given by the president, Hugh Blain, H. D. Eby and A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesaler Grocers' Association. Mr. Blain spoke optimistically of the outlook for 1921. He believed that there was no doubt but the depression in trade was lifting, and that better times were ahead. Any declines that had taken place, with the exception of sugar, or that will yet take place, have been and will continue to be slow and gradual.

A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, spoke on the work of the association, and the relation of the salesman to that association.

The gathering was entertained to luncheon at the National Club, and in the evening the entire party partook of dinner at the Cafe Florence, afterwards attending the performance at the Royal Alexandra theatre.

W. P. Eby was unfortunately kept away from the convention through illness.

Harold F. Ritchie Salesmen From Far Distant Parts Meet in Toronto

Convention is Being Held This Week With Seventy in Attendance—Representatives From China, Australia, and South America are Present

HAROLD F. RITCHIE, Ltd., salesmen and representatives from widely separated parts of the world are in convention at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, this week. Seventy are in attendance. Three organizations are represented, the British Harold F. Ritchie Co., London, England; the Harold F. Ritchie, Inc., New York, and the Canadian concern. Among the people present are E. K. Robinson, secretary of the British organiation, London, Eng. J. Ross Orr, from Sydney, Australia; J. L. Sheather, supervisor of sales in South America; D. C. Nixon, who has been sixteen months in China, Japan, and New Zealand; E. B. Thorbun, secretary of the Harold F. Ritchie, Inc., New York, and W. A. Armstrong, sales manager in New York. Mr. Armstrong brought a party of thirty-one salesmen with him. R. Hay is the Canadian sales manager.

The convention is in progress all this week, Mr. Ritchie presiding. Each day at noon hour at luncheons, various branches of the wholesale and jobbing trades interested in the products sold by the company, are being entertained. The entire gathering enjoyed a theatre party at Shea's, on Monday night, and on Friday night a concluding banquet was held at the King Edward, when an address on China was given by Mr. Nixon and also one on conditions in South America by Mr. Sheather.

Gunns' Salesmen Look for a Big Year in 1921

THE ANNUAL gathering of the salesmen of Gunn's, Limited, packers and provisioners, took place in the plant at West Toronto last week. Thursday being the last day of the convention, the salesmen were entertained at a dinner in the cafeteria.

A very snappy and enthusiastic meeting was then held in the smoking room, A. C. MacVicar, general sales manager, presiding.

Addresses, short and to the point, were delivered by the president, Brig.-Gen. J. A. Gunn, the managing director; F. M. Moffat; F. W. Boynton, manager car route sales department, and other heads of departments. A telegram conveying good wishes was sent to John Taylor, manager of the beef department, who is now in Pinehurst, North Carolina, recuperating after a serious and prolonged illness.

When the meeting broke up every man seemed to be imbued with the determination to make 1921 a greater and bigger year for himself and the company.

A bowling tournament was held in the evening, which was an enjoyable conclusion to the convention of 1920. Prizes were won by a number of salesmen, the most prominent being Sim. Peacock, Bert McDonald, Stan Douglas, R. H. Simmonds, H. A. McDougall and E. L. Durkin.

Paterson Biscuit Salesmen Meet in Brantford

Brantford, Ont. (Special)—The salesmen of Wm. Paterson Limited, biscuit manufacturers, met in convention at their factory here on Thursday and Friday last. Business during the past year was reviewed and prospects for the coming twelve months discussed. In this connection it was pointed out that the business had increased by 50 % during 1920, and the sales manager was looking forward to a similar increase during 1921. On Thursday evening a banquet was held at which some 150 sat down, including the heads of the firm, salesmen, heads of departments and a number of visitors. William Hamilton, sales manager, presided at the meeting and at the banquet. Other officials of the company were W. F. Paterson, the president, Morton Paterson, general manager and vice president, and Col. Cockshutt of the Cockshutt Plow Co., one of the directors. Morton Paterson had just returned from Ottawa, where he, with a number of Canadian confectioners, had interviewed the Minister of Finance in connection with the luxury tax on con-

Short Stocks, Salesmanship and Grit

Three Essentials That Worked for the Success of a Grocer in the North-West—Starting Under Adverse Conditions, Fred P. Manning Makes Good in the Grocery Business

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

IN 1891, a certain district in the north west was in a bad way. There had been a succession of crop failures. Many farmers had lost everything. Merchants had moved out, discouraged. The elder Mannining had suffered heavy losses in his farm machinery business and was "most broke."

That same year, Fred P. Mannining turned his 21st birthday and, with six years experience as a grocery clerk behind him, determined to open up for himself. Against everybody's advice, in the face of his own father's refusal to stake him, Fred rented a store for $15 per month.

It was not unusual for grocery jobbers to stake new merchants at that time. In fact, it was common for them to do it—"they owned all the merchants 'them' days" is what you are told by old timers. One of them staked Fred for his opening stock, amounting to $1,600.

That was a goodly stock thirty years ago, for groceries were cheap, but even so, Fred had to borrow the money to pay his freight bill. Both the region and Fred were at the zero point when he opened, September 1, 1891.

Luck and Pluck Pulled Together

It is said that often men who do not know a thing cannot be done go ahead and do it. Anyway, men who take a chance, backed by their own faith and hard work, often win out big. It was so in this case, for that fall saw the region garner the biggest crop ever yet produced. The crop was so heavy indeed, that much of it was not garnered but was snowed under and lost because of the insufficiency of workers to gather in nature's bounty. But the turning point came early in Mannining's career.

To offset his want of cash capital, Mannining had youthful strength. He is of towering physique, around six feet two and well proportioned. He had gone behind the grocery counter at fifteen, so had six years' apprenticeship experience. He was prepared to work any number of hours every day in the week, and he knew two fundamentals: one, that he must get a profit, and the other that he must have cash for his goods. As most farmers in the neighborhood owed the other merchants for a year or more, they avoided their old friends and came to new store where they paid cash. That is the way of human nature and it played into F. P.'s hands.

A "Crazy Advertiser" from the Start

One thing hit the old timers all of a heap. This was that Mannining used a page in the weekly—the only paper in the region at that time—when he opened, and continued to use that space in every issue.

His former boss, an old-fashioned merchant who "did not believe in advertising anyway, leastways not in any community of a few hundred people," said he'd "give Fred Mannining six weeks to peter out." He "jess knew such foolishness couldn't last. It would land Fred in bankruptcy sure as shootin'." But within a year or two this merchant went out of business and Fred bought the stock; and to-day Fred's former boss runs in almost daily and takes as much pride in Mannining's success as if it were all his own.

Manning's advertising went far toward supporting the local papers. After a time there came a daily and then the weekly changed to a daily. But that was more than the town could stand to advantage, so Mannining was largely instrumental in changing the weekly back to its primary status. To-day there is a good, healthy weekly and a strong daily in the town of around 5,500 people.

"Printer's Ink" Man's Lodestar

From about the beginning, the newspaper men, finding that Mannining was a stayer in the advertising end of the business, "played with him for keeps." They bought him "Printer's Ink" every week and he got his advertising education perfected thereby. He worked with the papers because he believed in them; and they worked with him to the limit.

This combination, plus constantly developing business education built on current experience, has resulted in the remarkable growth of his business. He added dry goods as his second department, then clothing, shoes, women's ready-to-wear, hardware, one department after another, and grew until he now turns out around $750,000 worth of merchandise a year.

This success is as remarkable as that of another firm of two brothers in the west. It may be even more remarkable, for the country in the first instance is much more sparsely settled than that in the second. Anyway, it is a wonderful showing.

The story has been told so often from the customary angles that I am merely filling in a few sidelights as I saw them.

From almost the beginning, Mannining had an accurate accounting system and a man to run it who knew how. Thus in 1893, two years after he started, he was burned out with nearly a total loss. But his books were in such shape that he was able to get an adjustment within a few hours of the arrival of the adjuster who came the day after the fire. He lost upward of $1,200, but that very fact sheds illumination on his methods.

For his basic principle always has been turnover. The first year in business, with only $1,600 stock as a starter, he did $23,000 business. That shows almost twelve turns, figuring on twenty per cent spread, and it is doubtful if he got such a margin on the average. He says he always aimed to get twenty-five per cent, "but I doubt whether I knew at that time the difference between figuring on the cost or selling price"—and his eyes twinkle as he makes the confession.

Bookkeeping System Helped a Lot

It was due to this habit of rapid turnover that he had a stock so light at the time of the fire that his loss was only $1,200. Had he been like most merchants who find themselves on easy street after a few years, he would have been carrying a stock several times heavier. Then his loss would have been proportionately larger.

But emphasis should be laid on his accounting system. His ability to show his affairs up clearly, promptly on demand, was a big factor in his obtaining a favorable adjustment. That is a point every merchant should heed, for fire is a calamity that impends constantly over all of us, and it gives no warning of its coming.

Think of it carefully: Because he could show his last inventory and had his purchase and sales properly entered daily, and because he knew his average gross margin, he was able to get an adjustment in thirty minutes after the adjuster had satisfied himself that Mannining knew what he was talking about.

Last year, Mannining did around $225,000 in his grocery department and he carries an average of between $15,000 and $16,000 stock. Allowing a margin of twenty per cent. all through—and Mannining will run close to that—we have here a turnover of between 11¼ and 12 times. Considering that much of his merchandise must come from far distant points, such a turnover is as remarkable as the rest of his story. No other single factor goes so far to account for his success as this one of

Laporte, Martin, Limitee, Montreal, Fifty Years Old

Montreal, Jan. 6.—Laporte, Martin, Ltd., celebrated on Friday, the 31st of December, 1920, the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation. The success of the firm is due to a spirit of enterprise, to constant effort, to the never ceasing work of its chiefs as well as to the intelligent co-operation of its personnel which counts 187 travellers, clerks and employees in the different departments.

The firm has an extensive import business, specializing in teas, coffees, wines and liquors, which are distributed throughout Canada.

Among those associated with Sir Hormisdas Laporte, in the success of this enterprise, Joseph Ethier, vice-president and managing-director, occupies a prominent place. He is ably seconded by H. Delorme, secretary, W. Imbleau, treasurer, J. Z. Langevin, sales manager and Jos. Laporte, advertising manager.

Presentation to President

The meeting of last Friday, held in the large offices of the company, proved a regular family affair. On this occasion the personnel of the house presented to its president, Sir Homisdas Laporte, a portrait in oils of himself, made by the celebrated artist Horne Russell, and to his son, Joseph Laporte, a tie pin set with diamonds. The firm also presented to each of its travellers a beautiful gold souvenir pencil, and to each of the other employees a group photograph of the employees of the firm, and a photograph of the general offices of the company. Sir Homisdas Laporte presented to each member of the staff a photographic reproduction of his picture in oils.

The employees of the firm of Laporte, Martin Ltd., enjoy among other benefits a life and sickness group insurance, and participate in the profits and in occasional distribution of bonuses.

Some Suggestions For Stabilizing Business Conditions

Editor, Canadian Grocer,—Manufacturers, wholesale grocers and retail merchants by common consent can stabilize business and put backbone into conditions without loss of prestige, causing the return to work of many now out of a job.

The recent "buyers' strike" by all classes is the root of our present troubles. The feeling that everything must become lower in price in the near future prevailed everywhere. Believing it is now over and a little co-operation by the three above named could buck up the trade and keep it so determines the writer to offer these suggestions.

Some Suggestions

(a) Establish firm prices on all goods by making all necessary price re-adjustments on the 1st of each month. No variations to be made until the 1st of following month.

(b) Retailers would thus be secured against day to day declines or advances and assured of a legitimate profit.

(c) Travellers representing wholesale grocers would have most reasonable grounds for pushing sales from 1st to 25th of month.

(d) Wholesale grocers would be safeguarded against heavy loss on staple stock.

(e) Manufacturers would be able to keep their factories running and employ the average amount of labor and avoid the serious danger of lack of orders and consequent shutting down.

(f) Banking, financing and credit men would most assuredly pronounce in favor of this mode of gradual adjustment to safe and sane levels.

Will Stabilize Conditions

Every manufacturer is asking: "Can I keep my factory running? Can I keep all my employees during 1921?" The answer is more often than not in the negative.

If any remedy can be evolved and the workers re-employed, steady, if not "war" wages paid them, a big step toward stabilizing conditions will have been made.

So without any idea of profiteering, but purely as good business for all concerned, let us make "locked-tight" monthly price adjustments, no matter which way the markets move. Every grocery line should be embraced, from laundry soap to fancy table delicacies, to stabilize the market, and in a few days the buying public would get into step with the arrangement.

The best type of grocery travellers enjoy the confidence of their customers; the travellers' advice is relied upon and the great majority of salesmen will fall into line with this proposal for it would have a wonderful steadying effect, to be able to assure a merchant there can be no change till the end of the month, if then. Given competitive prices, reasonably good quality goods and quick shipping, he could not fail to gain his quota of business on each trip.

Removes a Load of Worry

A clear knowledge that no price changes either way will take place for 30 days from the first of each month would remove a load of worry from a merchant's mind. He would make his purchase of staples right away, and could concentrate more attention on the selling end. A large amount of slow sellers could be brought out from the corners and turned into cash. The stock would become more valuable because of its saleability, its freshness. He could readily assure his customers that they could not make any bad bargains in buying a full week's supply. Should the market go up or down there would not be any change till the first of the following month and no merchant would be able to steal a run over his neighbor.—G.G.Y.

Editor's note.—Canadian Grocer would like to hear from others re this suggestion.

Kellogg Case Again Before Court

Expected That This Time it Will Be Concluded—J. L. Kellogg and a Number of Grocers Give Evidence

TORONTO, Jan. 5. (Special)—The suit of the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., of London, Ont., against the W. K. Kellogg Cereal Co., of Toronto, and Battle Creek, Mich., was resumed on Tuesday of this week before Justice Middleton here. The trade will recollect that the case was begun a number of years ago, was resumed last year, and it is quite likely will now be definitely concluded.

Mr. Tilley, K.C., is representing the London firm, and Mr. Hellmuth, K.C., the other. J. L. Kellogg spent a good part of Tuesday on the witness stand; also a number of grocers from Acton, Burlington and other towns. The evidence of W. K. Kellogg remains to be taken. On account of an accident he was unable to be present and it is quite likely his evidence will be taken in Battle Creek, Mich.

The purpose of the litigation is chiefly to determine which company has the right to use the term "Kellogg" on its cornflake package.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

THE markets for grocery commodities are quiet after the holiday season. A few price changes are announced, but generally speaking all lines have a steadier tone and with stocks fairly well reduced, buying will soon become normal.

MONTREAL—The grocery market is quiet this week with very few changes after the holiday rush. Most of the travellers for Quebec firms are off the road this week in view of the fact that another holiday breaks into this week on Thursday. Reports show that the business during the past two weeks caused an active movement of stocks, and, as a result, trade should be bright during this month. This week is expected to be quiet. The smaller offerings of hogs on the market has resulted in temporary higher prices being paid on live hogs. This has resulted in some higher quotations being made on smoked meats. Beef is strong for the same reason that the hog market is higher, but no change in prices are made. Butter and cheese are unchanged in price and quotations on fresh eggs are firm at one dollar per dozen for strictly fresh. The lard and shortening market holds steady at present prices and is given strength by the higher prices on hogs. The sugar market remains steady. Molasses and corn syrups are unchanged in price. Coffee and tea are still easy in primary markets. The demand for nuts during the past two weeks has cleaned out most of the spot stocks, particularly of shelled walnuts. It is expected that prices on the new supplies will be lower. There is no change in dried fruits except that currants are weak and the prune market shows no improvement. Higher prices are quoted on oranges this week although there are good supplies on the market. California and Florida oranges are about the only kinds left on the market. The vegetable market has had brisk business this week and the potato market is holding firm at prices quoted.

TORONTO—Refined sugar is holding steady at unchanged quotations. Raw sugars on the New York market have developed an easier tendency. Cuban raws were offered at 4¼ cents c. i. f., but buyers were showing no disposition to take them at that price. The harvesting of new crop Cubas is progressing very slowly under unfavorable climatic conditions. On December 27 there were 17 centrals grinding as against 104 at the same time last year, and 91 in 1918. There is now available for shipment at Cuban ports 13,049 tons of new crop sugar, and 193,197 tons of old crop. Cereals are holding fairly steady at unchanged quotations. Prices on canned goods are unchanged but there seems to be a better feeling in the market; prices are more stabilized and wholesalers report an improvement in the demand. Hallowee dates are quoted lower. Raisins are in a strong position, with prices in primary markets slightly higher. Prunes continue weak with a tendency for a shading in quotations. Shelled almonds are easy and prices will be lower on future shipments. French shelled walnuts in primary markets are firm and in strong demand. The first shipment of new crop shelled walnuts is due to arrive during the coming week. Unsweetened cocoanut is offered at a reduced price. Although prices on coffees in primary markets have reached almost pre-war prices, the increased cost on delivery in Canada practically offsets the reductions. A duty of 7½ cents per pound, an increase of about 50 per cent. on freight rates and the high exchange rate, have a tendency to hold coffee at present prices. Some reductions have been made on coffee during the past month, but in view of the above conditions it is not likely that any further reductions will be made to any great extent. There are indications that slight reductions will be made on spices in the near future. Messina lemons are offered at lower prices. Vegetables are quiet and unchanged. Reductions are announced on macaroni, peanut butter, biscuits and maple syrup.

WINNIPEG—There has been no change in general grocery commodities during the week, and trade is reported steady. Many retailers and wholesalers are showing more confidence and are looking forward to the future in a more optimistic manner, and as they are using their best methods to stimulate and maintain buying on the part of the public, business is showing a decided improvement. There is no change on sugar quotations. Bulk and package cereals show no change. Canned fruit and vegetables continue to show an improvement in the demand. The prune market is in a very weak condition and lower prices are quoted on evaporated apples. The coffee market continues dull. Tea market remains unchanged. Black pepper has shown a decline, but it will not affect the local market until the new arrivals which will be at least another three months.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 5.—There is very little to feature the market for general groceries this week. The trade seems rather quiet with prices holding firm. The sugar market remains unchanged at $10.50 per cwt., and a firm tone to the market is reported with a third refinery beginning operations again. Molasses and corn syrups remain unchanged. The coffee market is still on the decline with lower prices in the primary market. Black Ceylon tea is reduced from three to five cents per pound by a number of the local wholesalers on account of the declining market on tea. The supply of nuts on the market has been severely depleted by the big demand of holiday trade. It is stated that the prices on the new stocks will be lower than present quotations. There is no change in the market for dried fruits. Currants are very low in supply and prices are weak in view of the quotations on the new stocks expected. The prune market is still in its very weak condition. Slightly higher prices are quoted this week on California and Florida oranges. The supply on hand is very good but the higher rate of exchagne is affecting prices. The vegetable market is experiencing a very good market this week and prices are firm. Potatoes are still selling at around two dollars per bag. Onions appear to be a drug on the market and prices are very low, with but limited sales. The market in general is quiet with prices holding firm.

Sugar Market Holds Firm

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market is unchanged this week. The quotations given for granulated sugar at $10.50 per cwt. are holding firm with the opinion expressed by some that sugar is due for higher prices in the near future. The sales are more brisk with the steadier market and two of the refiners are now commencing operations again. One of these is refining the new sugar.

Molasses Market Unchanged

Montreal.

MOLASSES.—The molasses market remains unchanged at quotations given. Corn syrups are also quoted at prices which have held for the last month. Both of these markets remain firm and rather quiet.

Currants Are Easier

Montreal.

DRIED FRUIT.—There is no change this week in the quotations on dried fruit. Dried apples are rather weak and reports on the new supply of currants show prices to be a little easier. Sultana raisins are holding firm. The high rate of exchange is almost barring California dried fruit from this market and Smyrna is being called on for supplies. The local prices are unchanged. The prune market continues in its very weak condition.

Scarcity of Nuts Reported

Montreal.

NUTS.—The nut market, like many others, is very quiet this week with a severe depletion in supplies on hand. Shelled walnuts in particular are very scarce. Prices are holding firm at present but it is expected that the new supplies will be a little cheaper. Peanuts are in fair supply but the market shows a little more strength.

Lower Prices for Coffee

Montreal.

COFFEE.—The coffee market still keeps to its gradual decline which it has experienced throughout December. Reports from the primary markets show new low quotations which are much below average years. The local market is not directly affected, however, it is taking six weeks at least for the results of a decline to be noticeable in quotations to the trade. This depression is just the result of world-wide conditions affecting merchandise.

Canned Goods Trade Quiet

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—All quotations on canned goods hold this week. On account of the third holiday in two weeks coming in the middle of this week business in a wholesale way has been broken into again and the trade is rather quiet this week.

Mustard Slightly Reduced

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Some of the local wholesalers have made a reduction of five cents a pound on Keen's mustard. This reduction, a Canadian Grocer representative was informed by one of the Canadian agents of this firm, is entirely a result of the fluctuations of the sterling exchange and not on account of any lower cost of manufacture. As a result this reduction may not be permanent. There is an advance this week of fifteen cents a dozen in the price of five ounce tins of Dutch cocoa. Quotations on both these lines are as follows:

Keen's Mustard—2 oz. tins, per pound, 95 cents; 4 oz. tins, per pound, 90 cents; 8 oz. tins, per pound, 88 cents; 16 oz. tins, per pound, 86 cents.

Dutch Bensdorp Cocoa—2 oz. tins, per dozen, $1.45; 5 oz. tins, per dozen, $3.90; 8 oz. tins, per doz, $6.10; 16 oz. tins, per dozen, $12.

Some Black Teas Reduced

Montreal.

TEA.—The tea market shows no more strength than it has for the last few months. Some local wholesalers have reduced their prices this week on Ceylon black tea by from three to five cents per pound. Quotations on this tea now vary from 42 to 50 cents per pound. Japan tea is a little firmer than the black tea on account of the apparent shortage of supplies.

Canned goods are unchanged. Hallowee dates are offered at lower prices. Raisins are in a strong market. Prunes are weak with a tendency for lower prices. Shelled almonds are easy and future shipments to arrive are quoted at a lower price. Coffee and teas show no change. Cream of tartar is quoted lower, also maple syrup, peanut butter and macaroni. Sugar Quotations Steady

Toronto.

SUGAR. — Refined sugar is holding steady at unchanged quotations. The Atlantic Sugar Refinery resumed operations on Monday. Raw sugars on the New York market has developed an easier tendency. Cuban raws were offered at 4¼ cents, C. & F., but buyers were showing no disposition to take them at that price. The harvesting of the new crop Cubas is progressing very slowly under unfavorable climatic conditions. On December 27 there were 17 centrals grinding against 104 last year and 91 in 1918. There is now available for shipment at Cuban ports 13,049 tons of new crop and 193,197 tons of old crop.

Cocoanut Quoted Lower

Toronto.

NUTS.—Shelled almonds continue to be easy and prices on future shipments will be lower than present spot stocks. One importer expected a shipment of these cheaper shelled almonds during this week, but later advices state that the shipment will not arrive much before the end of the month. French shelled walnuts in primary markets are firm and in strong demand. The first shipment of new crop shelled walnuts is due to arrive during the coming week. Unsweetened cocoanut is offered at a reduction of three cents per pound, now quoted 32 cents. Whole cocoanuts are quoted at $8.50 per sack.

Spot Coffees Steady

Toronto.

COFFEES.—Although prices on coffee in primary markets have reached almost pre-war levels, the increased cost on delivery in Canada practically offsets the lower prices. With a duty of 7½ cents per pound, freight increase of about 50 per cent. and the exchange, have a tendency to keep coffee at about present prices. Some reductions have been made during the past month, but in view of the above conditions it is not likely that further reductions will be made to any great extent.

Co-operation Among Niagara Fruitmen Is a Necessity

Representative fruit growers, as well as dealers in the Niagara district, recently met in Hamilton, and further discussed the matter of a co-operative union of fruit men. Hon. Manning Doherty, who was present, stated that he would see to it that his department would provide the salary of the manager of the growers' association for the first year. In doing so, he emphasized the necessity of some scheme of co-operation among the fruitmen of Niagara district. Official encouragement, he thought, was of little avail, when no outlet was available for the product. In the past an outlet was not available.

Will Solicit Stock Subscriptions

Following the official endorsation of the Minister of Agriculture, tentative organization was proceeded with, in the hope that the crop of the coming season may be marketed through the channels of the proposed Niagara Peninsula Growers, Limited. In so far as actual incorporation goes, much depends on the reports yet to be presented by two committees, one of which is to satisfy itself as to promised volume of business, economic stability and efficient management, and the second of which is charged with the matter of enlisting stock subscriptions from peninsula growers. The meeting approved of incorporation on a subscribed capital of $200,000, based upon a total of 2,000 shares valued at $100 each, thus providing for an ultimate total membership of two thousand.

Committee to Canvass

Following are the members of the committee appointed to canvass the peninsula with a view to interesting growers in subscribing for shares in the proposed company:

Messrs. H. L. Roberts, Grimsby; J. P. Bridgman, Winona; Arthur Smith, Vineland; A. Onslow, Niagara-on-the-Lake; A. A. Craise, St. Catharines; Geo. Brown, Fonthill; W. F. W. Froher, Burlington; H. Usher, Queenston.

STAGNATION IN THE MARKET FOR COD IS BEING INVESTIGATED

St. John's, Nfld., Dec. 31.—The Newfoundland government is sending a personal representative to Southern Europe in an effort to end the stagnation in the market for Newfoundland codfish at Mediterranean ports. William Coaker, Minister of Fisheries, was a passenger on the steamer Sachem, leaving for Liverpool, and will proceed to leading ports in Italy, Spain, Portugal and Greece.

These countries customarily absorb about two-thirds of the annual catch of codfish in the waters about this island. This year, however, sales have been very scanty. The colonial government now controls the marketing of fish and importers at Mediterranean ports have refused to pay the prices fixed by the government.

The result is that a large proportion of this year's catch remains unsold, and as the fisheries are the principal industry of the colony there is at present considerable business depression.

The Swift-Canadian Co., Ltd., of Winnipeg Man., held their annual banquet at the Royal Alexandra Hotel last week, December 29th, and it was attended by every salesman working out of the Winnipeg plant. Addresses were given by R. B. Hunter, general manager, T. C. Norris, Premier of Manitoba, and J. H. Gifford, of Chicago.

keeping short stocks and turning them often.

If merchants generally could get over the idea that it is smart, or good business, or adds to their prestige to become known as "big buyers," they would make more money by a long way, and sidestep a lot of worry besides. Surely it is better to know that your bills are within your capacity to discharge, that you can take all discounts and are sure of a fine margin, than to be known as a "liberal buyer."

Mannining Liberal Minded with his Neighbors

An interesting characteristic of Fred Mannining is his liberality with his neighbors and competitors. He will go out of his way to help any of them. He makes no secret whatever of his business, his turnover, his margins, his sales plans. It was thus from the beginning. Hence, when fire had disorganized his business, a neighbor filled his orders for him. He was able to run his salvaged stock into a vacant store, wire for more goods, and have his trade supplied by a competitor while he was recouping.

To-day, as president of the Retail Merchant's Association in his district, to which office he has been elected thrice running, he devotes so much time and effort freely to the benefit of others' business, to the improvement of merchandising, that his own affairs would suffer seriously if he had not an able lieutenant in a younger brother.

Mannining is a good exemplar of Solomon's saying: "The liberal soul shall be made fat, and blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth."

fectionery and reviewed the confectionery situation from this standpoint.

E. J. A. Kennedy, of the E. J. A. Kennedy Co., Toronto, who recently opened an office there to act as representative for Paterson's biscuits, was present.

A reduction in the price of biscuits was announced during the convention. A number of the principal fancy lines are reduced from 33 cents to 30 cents to the trade and reductions on others are from 1 cent to 2 cents. Soda biscuits are reduced 1 cent a pound in bulk. These changes went into effect the first of the year.

Illustrated Meat Quotations Help Sales

Almys of Montreal Use Large Diagram of Side of Beef in Meat Department—Makes Customers More Familiar With the Different "Cuts" of Meat

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—A rather novel and effective idea has been adopted by Almy's Limited, Montreal, in their provision department. The plan serves the double purpose of making their customers more familiar with the different cuts of meat, and at the same time silently quoting the prices upon all these different cuts.

For this purpose a large painting of a side of beef has been made on one of the walls directly behind the counter. This painting is blocked off in sections showing how the beef is cut and naming each section. From each section a black line runs out to the margin to a small circle. In the centre of this circle is a hook where the price tags are hung. When the quotations on these different cuts change it is only a matter of lifting off the particular tag and replacing it with the current price.

Helps Slow Sellers

In speaking of this idea to a Canadian Grocer representative, D. A. Cooke, the manager of this department, said: "This idea not only interests the customers and attracts their attention to this department but it gives them a clear idea of how the beef is carved for the market. A great many people are familiar with the names of these different cuts but have no idea just from what part of the carcass they are taken. When they see this diagram their interest is aroused and they know just what to ask for when they desire a particular piece of meat. It saves our men time in many cases and also creates a sale for some lines that are perhaps slow sellers since people are not so familiar with the names given to them."

Herrings Are Moving Freely

Lumber and Mining Camps are Buying Large Quantities of Holland and Labrador Herrings Oysters Also in Brisk Demand

By D. B. Drysdale

AS IS usual at this season large orders are being received from the lumber and mining camps in Northern Ontario. From the varieties ordered there is but little doubt that the favorite articles in the fish line in these districts are Holland and Labrador herrings.

Large shipments of this season's catch in these two lines are on hand, and a substantial increase in the sale of them is noted.

Oysters Moving Freely

Oysters are also moving freely. This is probably because this is the season for oyster suppers. Although there is no dearth of these on hand it is advisable to place orders about a week ahead. This does away with the possibility of being disappointed at the last minute by non-delivery. Oysters have good keeping qualities and the only attention required is to see that they are kept cold but not allowed to freeze.

Qualla Salmon Receipts Heavy

Large shipments of Qualla salmon have been brought through from the Coast. The pink Qualla is offered at 9 cents per pound in case lots, a good percentage of the pinks cut a good red color, others a pale salmon color, but equal in quality and flavor with the reddest. There is a good demand for these with the restaurant trade. They are also suitable for slicing, selling as whole fish, or for cutting into boiling pieces. Silver Bright Qualla, a bright ocean caught salmon with fine grained red meat and the largest of the three varieties on the market, are offered at 10 cents per pound in case lots. These are particularly recommended for slicing. Also Silver Bright Qualla in medium sizes at 11 cents per pound in case lots.

Of late salmon and cod have been somewhat scarce in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Fishermen attribute the cause of this to be that the Gulf has lately been the scene of frequent visits by porpoises in great numbers. These scavengers of the sea are capable of consuming about one hundred pounds of fish each per day. There is but little doubt that they are to blame for the scarcity in this territory.

Harold de V. Partridge of the T. H. Estabrooks Company, Ltd., St. John, N. B., will leave on a western trip January 1, spending some time at the Toronto and Winnipeg branches of the company.

S. H. White, Sussex, N.B., a business man in that town for a number of years, passed away recently, following an illness extending over a year. He started business in groceries only, but later organized the Sussex Mercantile Co.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 5.—The holiday week preceding this week has had a rather quieting effect on the produce market. The market in general is not active and the demand is not large. Smaller offerings of both hogs and beef have had the effect of strengthening the quotations so that hogs are now being sold at as high as $17.50 per cwt. This condition is not stable, however, and dealers state that lower prices may be expected early next week if not before, with larger offerings. While there is additional strength to the beef market, prices in a wholesale way are unchanged and firm. Lard and shortening are both firm with an indication that lard has struck the bottom price. Eggs are unchanged but quotations are strong with smaller offerings. Butter and cheese are unchanged in price. The market for fish is quiet after the holidays and the fact that there is another holiday this week in Quebec has not done anything to make business more active. Fish prices are unchanged. Quotations on poultry are a little easier after the big demand of the last two weeks. The market for smoked meats shows more strength with slightly higher prices in some lines as a result of the higher pork market.

Higher Prices For Hogs

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—After the holidays the offerings of beef and hogs on the market are rather small. This has resulted in firmer prices on beef and higher prices on hogs. As high as 17½ cents per pound was offered for hogs early this week. It is not expected, however, that these prices will hold and towards the end they may drop to 17 cents. There is every indication that within the next few weeks the prices on hogs will drop considerably with larger offerings. The quotations on beef are simply holding firm with a stronger market.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Light receipts of hogs had the effect of firming up prices during the week, packers are out this week offering lower prices, whether they will be successful in pulling down prices will depend a great deal upon the quantity offered. Dressed hogs are advanced two dollars per hundred. Beef cuts are up one to two cents per pound. Veal is also higher. Cooked hams are slightly easier. Local stocks of storage eggs are practically cleaned up. Supplies of fresh eggs have shown a slight increase but not sufficient to change quotations. There is a more stabilized feeling in the butter market owing to stocks being reduced to such a point that it is felt that the balance can be moved off without any further reductions. Shortening is down one cent per pound with the market still weak. Lard is unchanged. Reductions are noted on some kinds of fish, but the market generally continues steady.

Dressed Pork Moves Up

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS. — The hog market was stronger and prices slightly higher during the week. This was attributed to the light receipts and the heavy demand, packers, however, are offering a lower price for this week, and whether they will be successful will all depend upon the quantity arriving. Dressed pork is advanced $2.00 per hundred, bringing the price up to $22.00 to $24.00. Dressed beef cuts are up from one to two cents per pound. Veal is also higher. Spring lamb is down about one cent per pound, while mutton is unchanged.

NORWEGIAN SARDINES LIKELY TO ADVANCE

The stocks of sardines held in Norway are not very large and with the exchange advancing in value there is a tendency that Norwegian sardines will also be advanced. The increase in exchange on the Norwegian crown during the past few weeks, just adds practically $2.50 to the cost of Bristling sardines. It looks as though Norwegian sardines might be good buying at the present time.

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

Your Wants are many here below. Use the Want Ad. page and get rid of a few of them.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

THE LEAK IN THE DIKE

Centuries ago a flaxen-haired lad of Dutch birth saved his native land from destruction by a bold stroke of heroism.

A leak had sprung in one of the great dikes which keeps the waters from inundating the Netherlands. The boy, passing by, heard the faint trickle of the water. Unless instantly plugged, he realized instinctively, it would be the beginning of a great break that would spell ruin to his country. There was no time to call for assistance. With a cry of agony on his lips, the boy thrust his finger into the hole.

And there, in the gray dawn of the morning, Holland's little hero was discovered and the leak in the dike repaired. By the detection of the leak at ITS VERY START, Holland was saved from inundation.

There Are Dangerous Leaks in Your Business—Your Inventory May Disclose Some.

There are leaks in your business that are just as dangerous to your profits as this leak was to Holland, but the danger may not be so apparent. They may be forgotten charges—disputed accounts—late statements—unposted and unbalanced accounts—customers overbuying intentionally or otherwise, etc.

Your inventory may disclose the presence of some leaks, but it will not enable you to locate them—it will not enable you to prevent their recurrence in 1920.

A McCaskey System of Accounts Will Plug Up These Leaks.

A McCaskey System of Accounts for Retail Merchants will enable you to locate and stop all of these leaks, thus preventing their recurrence in 1920. The McCaskey System of Accounts has plugged up the leaks in the businesses of more than 200,000 successful merchants

Let us show you, without obligation to yourself, how it will do the same thing for you. Send a postal card for this information today!

When Jack Frost plays pranks with the morning's milk supply. . . . . .

How often have your customers wakened up on cold winter mornings only to find a cracked bottle and the milk frozen on the doorstep? Perhaps it has happened to you, Mr. Merchant, many times over.

A Size for Every Need

However, it is occurrences such as frozen and broken milk bottles, annoying delivery delays, etc., that has made hundreds of new friends for Borden's wholesome, convenient and economical milk products. Remind your customers the next time they order that a dozen assorted tins of Borden's St. Charles Milk (the milk with the cream left in) and Borden's Eagle Brand (condensed) on their pantry shelves will enable them to have a supply of rich, pure country milk always on hand — a supply that will never fail them.

Try this plan — suggest a dozen tins, assorted sizes, in place of one, and watch your profits increase.

PALMOLIVE

Leader in sales volume

Ask the wholesale grocers' salesmen who call on you to tell you about the ever-growing demand for Palmolive Soap. They travel from town to town and they know that it dominates everywhere.

They will tell you that it is the most widely known, the most extensively advertised and the most popular soap on the market.

And they prefer to sell it because it makes a bigger profit for wholesaler and retailer by reason of its rapid turnover.

We could not begin to sell Palmolive at the price we do if we were not selling millions of bars.

Over 600,000 Housewives Are Now Using the Famous FIVE ROSES Cook Book

And that means one in practically every second English-speaking home in Canada.

Think of over half a million flour users consulting it every day. Think of the insistent buying impulse in every page. Think of their tremendous buying power!

To-day, even in the smallest retail store in the smallest hamlet you can mention, dealers are collecting regular royalties on every cake and bread, every pie and pudding baked from its 144 pages. What will happen when every worth-while home in your trading radius possesses a copy of this famous book? And, mind you, this is not a FREE distribution. Canadian housewives are actually sending 40 cents by mail to secure their individual copies—a fact unprecedented in Canadian merchandising! Every day since 1913 the demand has been persistent, a sure sign that Canadian housewives are planning more and better baking. This year we expect to distribute another 100,000 books in both languages to satisfy the everlasting demand.

To YOU, who must sell some brand of flour, isn't this of the utmost significance?

"Eureka Freezer Counter Case has doubled our Cooked Meat Sales"

—say Griffin Bros. of Weston, Ont.

"Last April we installed a Eureka Freezer Counter Case, and during the summer of 1920 it had doubled our sales in cooked meats as compared with the summer of 1919. When we installed the Eureka Freezer Counter it was claimed we would have to use both ice and salt to maintain the right temperature, but all summer long we had no difficulty in keeping it at 35° and did not use a particle of salt."

This unsolicited testimonial is only one of many we could quote you in praise of Eureka Freezer Counter Cases.

We guarantee it to get below freezing point with use of ice and salt, and stay there if necessary; to keep meats not only over night, but for weeks; that temperature can be regulated; that our case will maintain a perfectly dry atmosphere at all times; a one-year guarantee to replace any defective material.

In the model illustrated above, the upper division is for display. Lower compartment for storage. Handsome oak case, wax finish, with Vitrolite panels. Heavily insulated, therefore economical in use of ice and salt.

We manufacture refrigerators and refrigeration equipment for every need. Get in touch with us now; we have 34 years of experience at your disposal.

CANADIAN GROCER

VOL. XXXV. TORONTO, JANUARY 14, 1921 No. 2

New Year Sees a Return of Activity

Renewal of a Freer Movement of Goods is Reported by Manufacturers and Wholesalers Alike—Should Forbid the Quoting of Such Words as "Buyers' Strike"

THAT the New Year has witnessed a substantial renewal of business activity is borne out by the statement of the heads of many concerns, who are impressed with the change that has taken place, and who are looking for even a much greater movement than has characterized trade for some weeks past. Wholesalers, manufacturers' agents and retailers all report an enlivening in trade that is decidedly encouraging, and the so-called buyers' strike has apparently spent itself.

Do Not Mention "Buyers' Strike"

In this connection the best way to resume, it would seem, is to resume. Wholesale and retail merchants and manufacturers should forbid every member of their staff to mention such words as "Buyers' Strike." They should give the impression in interviews, in their advertising and in their general conversation that business is O.K. Remember nothing succeeds like success. They should keep their customers well informed with regard to the trend of prices. They may advise them to purchase some lines, and they may even advise them to hold off purchasing other lines. The one thing they should not do is to complain about the attitude of the general public. This merely advertises the buyers' strike movement and tends to extend it.

Keep Close to Bankers

Merchants should keep close to their bankers. They should make all the economies they can and put themselves in a solid financial position, but above all, they should adopt an energetic policy with regard to getting business. Let them put on special sales if necessary, but do not announce that these sales are being put on because the public refuse to buy. Sales can be put on because they need ready cash, or for some other good reason. The merchant must keep his eye on replacement values.

If manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers adopt this policy it will do more than anything else to stimulate business.

A Better Movement

Representatives of Canadian Grocer are getting firsthand statements in regard to an actual renewed buying effort that has already begun to shape itself into a real right-about-face movement. It is the duty of every manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer to encourage it with all their might.

One wholesale grocer told a Canadian Grocer representative that in the first five days of this year he had opened ten new accounts. A manufacturers' agent declared that on Thursday of last week one of his salesmen had brought in $8,000 worth of business in the forenoon. Wholesalers were purchasing, he said, certain goods in 25 and 50-case lots, whereas during November and December they were purchasing in single-case lots. Another firm was very optimistic in discussing conditions, and showed an order whereby a wholesale grocer in western Ontario had bought unsolicited a half car of their products.

A Splendid Start

"Business for the new year is off with a splendid start," remarked another wholesaler enthusiastically. "The travellers all came in last Saturday with the report that customers are ordering more freely, and that sales for the week will compare very favorably with the same period last year."

"Sales for the first week in the New Year have been very satisfactory," stated a third wholesaler. "There is no doubt that merchants have reduced their stocks very considerably, and they are now ready to buy nearly every line. We have particularly noted that sales for tea have been fairly heavy, compared with a month ago. We have received more three to ten-chest orders than we have for some time."

"We sold one thousand bags of rice on Monday last. Not a large day's business by any means in normal times, but it is the best rice business for one day we have had for some time," remarked a manufacturer's agent. "Business for the first week in the year is showing up well. Wholesalers' and retailers' stocks are down to rock bottom and there is no reason why business should not soon become normal."

"Judging by the increased orders we have received for beans this past week it looks as though people will buy when the price is right. Beans are cheaper now than they have been for several years," was the comment of another dealer interviewed.

"Business for the New Year is certainly starting off with a better feeling than at the close of the old year. This past week is the best single week we have had for several months," reiterated a large manufacturer.

Readjustment of Coffee Prices Brief and Drastic

Good Quality Coffee Is Now At a Reasonably Low Figure—The New Year Introduces Practically Normal Conditions in Coffee

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer.

COFFEE prices have been tending for some months towards lower levels. The trend of the coffee market for the last month of the old year has kept to its usual course, and new low quotations were recorded for the present crops, which are much below average years. The depression is the result of world-wide conditions affecting all lines of merchandise. In the United States a committee was appointed to investigate the decline in the prices of many lines of farm products, which included coffee. The report given stated that the losses were not the result of manipulation but were due to the same economic conditions that were causing readjustments in all kinds of business, and that there was no other way to return to normal conditions except to take the losses and start anew.

A Year of Heavy Losses

As regards the coffee business for the year just ended, never in the history of the trade has there been a year entailing such severe losses. The report from the primary market states that there is every reason to expect a very profitable business for coffee in the year 1921, especially if the current predictions as to the size of the growing Santos crop are to be relied upon. Early in February reliable estimates should be at hand concerning the prospects and probable output of the 1921-1922 Brazilian crops.

World's Supply Greater

In seeking some reliable information on this market Canadian Grocer representative interviewed one of the large importers of coffee in Montreal, who is well versed in the market. This importer said: "Although receipts at Brazilian ports during the past six months have greatly exceeded those of recent years for the same period, the world's visible supply shows an increase on January 1st of only 350,000 bags, compared with the same date last year, which would indicate that the world's consumption of coffee is being well maintained despite the fact shipments to Central Europe continue to be very limited.

Not Due to Over Supply

"It would appear that the steadily declining market of the past few months cannot be attributed to any over supply, but has been brought about by the liquidation of stocks in common with other commodities all over the world.

"The best authorities feel that the period of deflation has run its course, as present prices in the primary markets are much below the cost of production, and cannot be maintained for a long period without diverting the attention of the grower to more profitable enterprises, thus curtailing production, and creating a scarcity which would inevitably result in higher prices.

"Prices are now below pre-war levels, but of course, Canadian prices are greatly enhanced by the duty, high exchange and increased freight rates as compared with 1914. These increased charges, the result of our war experience, are likely to continue for a considerable time, and much lower prices cannot be reasonably expected. Both dealer and consumer need no longer hesitate to purchase normal supplies, as in the natural course of readjustment the cost of some grades of coffee is more apt to be higher than lower within a short period.

"Good quality coffee is now at a reasonably low figure, and within reach of all consumers. The period of readjustment in this commodity has been brief and drastic, but the New Year introduces practically normal conditions in this branch of industry."

Primary Stocks of Spices Are Limited And Depression Is Clearing

Market Conditions in Spices Depend Largely on How Soon Depressed Stocks Are Cleared Up—Retail Trade at Present Is Well Advised

SPICES, like many other lines of commodities, have been passing through a period of depression. Brokers and speculators had been investing heavily in spices and when the banks, some six months ago, commenced to call in their loans holders were forced to place their stocks on the market in order to liquidate their loans. These stocks were offered at prices far below the actual market value. One spice grinder stated to Canadian Grocer that he was offered nutmegs only this week at a figure that would barely cover delivery costs. Another said that he could buy peppers at almost pre-war prices. And so it has been going, one broker being overloaded with a certain spice would be compelled to sell at any price he could get in order that he might meet his obligations at his bank. Another would have another line, and needing the money promptly, would be compelled to sell his holdings. This condition has resulted in an unsettled market, but some who are closely in touch with the situation state that depressed stocks are fairly well moved off, both in Canada and in the United States.

An advice from primary markets states that the stocks held there are limited and the market generally has a firm undertone. It is impossible at present to get an accurate idea as to the outlook, as conditions will depend to a large extent upon how soon these depressed stocks are cleared up. Some importers are of the opinion that the situation has a better feeling, while others state that it will be well into spring before the market becomes stabilized. All are agreed, however, that in about three months prices can be expected to strengthen.

Buy in Small Quantities

In the meantime, quotations to the retail trade have been revised downward and the retail merchant can make no mistake by taking the advice of the grinder and the wholesaler—buy in small quantities.

In referring to the probable trend of prices on containers used in the spice business one manufacturer stated: "We believe that the prices of containers generally are at the peak. There has already been a decline in the cost of wood boxes. Of course, if exchange continues to advance between Canada and the United States, from where the bulk of our tin comes, there is not much chance of a decline in tin containers. Another condition that should tend to keep prices above 1914 figures, even if raw materials approach quotations in that year, is the fact that our overhead has increased enormously. Most of our employees have been with us for years and their salaries have steadily gone up and it will be very hard to reduce overhead in this respect.

"There has been considerable slashing of prices in spices already, which must have shown severe loss on the original cost of the goods. In the addition to the increased overhead charges there are the different taxes, the cost of which it is rather hard to assume, probably running between five and ten per cent. even over for certain kinds of business I do not think, in many cases, that these extra costs have been taken into account in making up costs of the finished product. However, I believe that things ought to improve by next spring and in the meantime our policy is to buy cautiously just as goods are required."

Can the Window Pay the Rent?

The Beginning of a New Year is an Opportunity to Give Careful Consideration to the Importance of the Window—Your Window Should Pay Big Profits—What Change Will Improve Its Capacity for Display?

By ROY A. HUNTER, Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Jan. 12. — 'At the threshold of the new year, when each merchant is deciding for himself what changes for the better he can make, what departments can be made to produce more, and in what direction he can increase his sales effort, the window should come in for a careful scrutiny.

Can it be made to pay the rent? What change would improve its display capacity? Is it easily kept clean?

For tips on running a grocery store, the writer hastens down to a successful grocer, but for tips on the use of windows for sales, the place to go is to a man that makes that his business, and can earn ten thousand a year, based on the profit he can make the windows earn.

Such a man is C. L. Greer, display manager for the Hudson's Bay Co., Vancouver. Discussing the sales possibilities of the even smaller-than-average grocery window Mr. Greer says:

If Goods Were Locked in Cupboards

"Seventy-five per cent. of the merchandise that is sold is not absolutely needed at the time it is bought. This is true to a less extent in staple groceries, but of fancy groceries, where the greatest profit is made, it is just as true as it is in ladies' wear.

"If you don't think so, imagine your volume of business, if all your merchandise were kept in closed cupboards till brought out on demand. Consider the splendid little memory joggers that your shelves full of groceries are. Notice almost any sale you make over the counter, how items are added, one at a time, after scanning your shelves for suggestions. The more pointed the suggestion, the more impressive it is. The more real the implied desirability, the more your sales.

"Merchandise attractively presented is partially sold. If the presentation is good enough—the interest and desire of the passer-by sufficiently intrigued, the sale will be completed right there—that is—if you have the price on the article, and the would-be purchaser has the cash or the credit to negotiate.

The Feature of the Offering

"One must decide first, what is the strong feature of the offering. If, for instance, you have made a splendid purchase of canned peas and purpose to move them at 9 cents a can, you will need nothing more than a great pile of the cans in the window and a large card saying 9 cents.

"But suppose they are French peas, and you must sell them for 50 cents, then you must proceed differently. You must display them in an 'atmosphere' of quality, dignity, refinement and exlusiveness. You can then profitably strive for an artistic setting, and a richer background. You could suitably introduce a fine linen napkin, a good glass bowl, a silver spoon. Name the price? Yes! Always. But in this case the price will be in light figures, on a small card. Not in poster style, like your nine cent bargain. The larger cards in the window will now feature the flavor, the appearance, the distinctiveness of the peas—their suitability for the 'dinner' which is a 'little extra' etc.

Windows That Mean Sales

"Many grocers and also many other retailers are still loath to advertise. The larger stores advertise very profitably—very profitably, or they certainly would not be doing it. In the same way a great many dealers hesitate to spend a few dollars for fixtures with which to make proper window displays. A few such helps are invaluable in producing an effective dindow. Now don't misunderstand me. By an effective window I do not mean an 'art-for-art's-sake' kind of window, I mean the window that is artfully dressed to create a demand for the articles displayed, that will be converted into actual sales over the counter.

"If you had an announcement to make about a certain line of merchandise that you wanted special attention drawn to, and had a man employed to make announcements in front of your store, would you, while he was speaking, have a dozen other people shouting out the names of a dozen other articles you had in stock?

Let It Be Only One Line

"Think that over, next time you put in a special in your front window, and then proceed to clutter up the beholder's attention with a dozen other unrelated lines. If you want attention on the quality and price of your new season's dried fruit—let it be a dried fruit window, with no other exhibits in the window to take the attention off the dried fruits. Same with jams, honey, tea. Let there be an idea behind your window if you're putting in an assortment of commodities. At preserving time, the preserving idea will naturally introduce jars, rings, sugar, wax, but don't put jams in that window unless you want to make the suggestion that they should not do their own preserving. A pickling window will suggest all kinds of spices, vinegars, jars, crocks, etc., but it would be contradictory to introduce at the same time your various pails and bottles of pickles unless you wanted to absolutely neutralize any effect from your display.

Should Pay Big Profits

"These are just a few random thoughts. Your windows should pay you big profits. If you have neither the time nor inclination to dress a good window every week—pay a few dollars to some one to do it for you. Check up carefully the sales you make on the lines displayed. You will be surprised."

The Future of Peanut Butter

Prices of Raw Peanuts Are Inclined To Be Low But Increased Costs of Packing Make Pre-War Values for Peanut Butter Unlikely

VANCOUVER.—(Special).— While it is quite true that the price of raw peanuts is comparatively low, people who expect the price to drop to anywhere near the 1914 level are doomed to disappointment. This is the considered opinion of one of the largest peanut butter manufacturers in Canada.

For one thing, the lithographed tins used are just 100 per cent. higher than they were before. The United States Steel Co. is making efforts to stabilize steel prices for the safety of the hundreds of allied industries, and one of them is the tin plate and tin can manufacturing business. There are no indications of any great reduction in the prices of cans. Eventually the cost of these containers will reduce, but it will likely be by slow drops of five and ten per cent.

The increased freight rates are also a factor in neutralizing the effect of cheaper peanuts. Freight rates are almost double what they were even eighteen months ago.

Lower prices on peanut butter and salted peanuts will likely be named, but they will not be able to approach pre-war prices, nor can they ever be expected to do this unless the entire wage scale reverts to the pre-war level, which seems improbable.

Rice Experiences Sharp Declines

During the Last Few Months Rice Has Been Reduced to Less Than One Half Its Value—Large Surplus Quantities Now Available—Future is Uncertain and Cautious Buying Is Advised

By Special Correspondent to Canadian Grocer

AMONG the many articles which have experienced very heavy reductions in value from war time prices, rice has had to bear the brunt of a heavy storm. Like sugar, it has, during the past year or two, been subject to more or less governmental control, and in some of the large producing countries at the present time that control has not yet ceased to be a factor. This commodity, like some other semi-tropical products, had experienced an inflated condition due not only to the natural causes of supply and demand, condition of crops, etc., but also to unnatural causes following in the wake of the terrible world war as well as to regulation and control exercised by government officials in various countries.

Shortage in India

In 1919, during the early part of the year particularly, there was a tremendous shortage of rice in India, the conditions amounting to those commonly found in famine years. This resulted in the Government of India absolutely prohibiting the export of rice except in very limited quantities to certain countries, and under certain restrictions. The unfortunate conditions prevailing in India at the time were aggravated by shortage of crops in some of the other large producing points, and consequently the degree of control exercised by the government seems to have been a necessary evil at the time. However, the inevitable result was that prices continued to advance as the available supply of material continued to decrease, until levels were reached which had not been experienced before. This increase in value, due to shrinkage in quantity, was further influenced by the fact that the value of silver continued to increase at tremendous rate, the Hong Kong or Mexican dollar going up at one time to a value of about $1.30 in gold. Under normal conditions the value of the Hong Kong dollar would be in the neighborhood of 45 to 50 cents gold, so the tremendous increase in the value of Oriental products such as rice is very largely explained by the increase in the value of the silver currency, with which rice has to be purchased in Oriental producing countries.

Now Less Than Half Its Value

The peak of values was reached in the early months of the year 1920 but it was not until general conditions of trade seemed to be getting unsteady, and confidence in the market generally was commencing to show signs of wavering that the great declines took place, and during the last few months, in keeping with a tumble in silver, rice has been reduced to less than one-half its value. Another of the factors which has influenced the movement downward in addition to those which have already been mentioned, is that this year some of the large producing countries are likely to have exportable supplies far in excess of those which they had the year before. Under usual conditions British Burma is the largest producing country in the world as far as its exportable surplus is concerned.

The next in importance, in surplus rice, usually comes from French Indo-China, and Siam, both of which countries together would probably have for export under usual conditions about equal to the exportable surplus of British Burma.

Burma's Surplus For Export

The new crop of British Burma which is just commencing to show itself on the market, and can be fairly closely estimated shows that Burma is going to have quite a considerable quantity of surplus material to export, only a portion of which will be required for India.

A Depressing Effect

The known fact, therefore, that this year Burma will commence to make a contribution again to the world supply of rice, and also to the known fact that French Indo-China and Siam will each be able to spare something from their crops, has had a depressing effect on the market, and has made the growers of rice in other producing countries, particularly such as the United States, and Brazil, very nervous concerning their own production. Added to this it may be said that the United States has this year a larger crop of rice than she has ever experienced in her history, amounting to possibly more than twice the amount she can consume. Under ordinary conditions, she looks to her near neighbor, Cuba, to absorb a large portion of what she does not require for her own consumption, but, Cuba being at the present time overloaded with Oriental rice purchased at comparatively high prices, and having financial difficulties due to sugar, she is unable to absorb her usual supply of American grown rice of which she usually eats about 500 tons per day.

Embargo on Rice Imports in Cuba

The Government of Cuba, therefore, has placed an absolute embargo on the importation of rice into the country, and a moratorium affecting the financing would in any case have made business different, even without the embargo restrictions. If Europe were in a position to purchase her normal requirements, the situation would probably be greatly relieved in a very few months by the actual consumption of a great portion of the American surplus crop, and the effect of Europe's consumption would readily tend to stabilize the values throughout the world, but unfortunately Europe cannot buy except in very limited quantities and in very restricted areas, the general demoralization there both political and financial making it impossible for the rice producing countries to look to Europe for any reasonable outlet.

It would hardly do to overlook the question of ocean transportation which, since the Armistice, has experienced such tremendous declines. The simple fact would have greatly affected the value of an article which is normally produced in its largest quantities in Oriental countries, and has always therefore to bear an ocean freight of considerable amount before reaching European and American consuming markets. Freights have declined so that they are in some instances less than one-sixth of what they were while the war was on, and shipowners seem to be seeking cargoes at almost any rates which they can obtain, in spite of the high cost of coal and the advanced wages being paid now as compared with those of pre-war days.

Cannot Predict Future

As to the future of rice it would be a very unwise prophet who will venture to predict with any degree of accuracy what is likely to take place. So much depends upon the financial and political conditions of Europe and of other parts of the world, and to the quickness with which trading and merchandising operations are resumed in normal quantity, that it is practically impossible to forecast either in time or value the likely movement of the market. A resumption in general confidence in business, or the establishment of some means whereby Europe would be enabled to buy her much needed and normal requirements, would have a tremendous effect in stabilizing such an article as rice. On the other hand, if the article goes any lower it is likely to reach some level, if it has not already done so, where the cost of production is greater than its selling price.

Cautious buying in reasonable quantities would therefore seem the wise policy at the present time.

World's Tea Production Is 25 Per Cent Above Consumption

Production Has Increased While Decrease is Attributed to Cutting Off of Market in Russia and Central Europe—A Deluge of Common Tea

THE tea producing industry is passing through a difficult period, and a continuation of present conditions would lead to the abandonment of a number of tea gardens, especially those that grow the commoner grades in Ceylon and India. It is estimated that the world's tea production is about twenty-five per cent. above consumption, production having increased and consumption decreased. The decrease is attributed mainly to the cessation of the demand in Russia and Central Europe, and also to some extent to the demobilization of the British army, for the soldier on active service was a heavy tea drinker.

Huge Stocks Accumulated

The increase in production was largely due to the coarse plucking which was encouraged by the British Government while tea was in control, taking their proportion of the crop at a fixed price, no matter what the quality. This habit of coarse plucking continued after the de-control until the fall in prices which led to the practice being discontinued. By that time, however, huge stocks of tea had been accumulated in Great Britain, for which there was no outlet, and prices fell in consequence. A considerable portion of these heavy stocks consists of old and stale teas, which have deteriorated until there is practically no market for them. There is some hope of an early re-opening of the Russian market, which will absorb a large quantity of the existing stocks, but, if no such relief is found, many gardens will go out of cultivation, which undoubtedly will result in higher prices.

A Deluge of Common Tea

"There never was such a deluge of common tea as there is to-day in the London market, and probably never as great a scarcity of fine teas," stated P. C. Larkin, of the Salada Tea Company, Ltd., Toronto, in an interview with Canadian Grocer. "This was largely brought about by the enormous price that common tea was bringing up to six months ago. Prices induced the finest gardens to pluck coarse and thereby to practically double their output, but unfortunately debased their product. Thus, by increasing the production of common tea, they limited the production of what is always scarce enough—fine teas. Then there is the fact that Russia is completely out of the market, and is likely to continue so and her consumption was not less than one hundred million pounds per annum.

Producing a Better Tea

"Doubtless the gardens now are plucking finer, and thereby trying to produce a better class of tea, and the production in all countries will be, without question, much less in the coming year than it has been in the past, with a corresponding bettering of quality."

"Has the consumption increased in Canada since prohibition?" asked by the writer.

"The tea consumption in Canada at present is about five pounds per head per annum," replied Mr. Larkin, "but it is hard to say positively whether it has increased or not since prohibition, as the duty has only been on two years, and previous to that, we could not tell what the consumption was from year to year. While there might be large quantities of tea imported one year, there might be considerably less the two following years. When the duty has been on for another couple of years, we will be able to follow the consumption very closely, because the amount taken out of bond in the year will give us the amount consumed very closely."

United States Imports

It is interesting to know that the amount of tea imported into the United States, where there is no duty, amounted to 103,364,410 lbs. in 1916-17, 151,314,932 lbs. in 1917-18, 108,172,102 lbs. in 1918-19, 93,274,217 lbs. in 1919-20.

Some people jumped to the conclusion that consumption increased enormously in 1917-18 and fell off in 1919-20. This is not so at all, and doubtless some of the tea that was imported into the United States in 1917-18 is still in the United States awaiting consumption.

Southern Rice at Lowest Level

Current Year Should See a Stabilization of Prices With an Increased Demand, Says Hugh M. Blain, Manager, Associated Rice Millers of America, New Orleans

SOUTHERN rice millers are of the opinion that rice (United States grown), has reached about its lowest level. Southern rice, Blue Rose, for instance, is at present quoted in Toronto at $10.50 per hundred, which is exactly one half of the highest figure quoted during 1920. Eastern rices have shown some slight reductions, but generally prices have been fairly steady. It is expected, however, that when the new crop arrives, which will be about the first of February, prices will be lower.

"In all probability rice has reached its lowest wholesale price, and 1921 should find a stable market with an increased demand," stated Hugh M. Blain, manager Associated Rice Millers of America, New Orleans, La., in an inteview with Canadian Grocer. "The agreement between the Southern Rice Growers' Association and the Southern millers, who handle practically all of the rice raised, in regard to definite prices, insures against further reductions."

"All authorities on rice agree that, beginning with the first month of the new year, market conditions will be much better and that the product will begin to move with some regularity. The crop of 1920 was the largest in the history of the rice industry, thanks to good season and increased acreage. During 1919 the per capita consumption of rice in the United States was only three pounds, yet the price was high and the growers and millers made money. With rice gaining in popularity and with decreased cost of labor, implements and supplies, and with a readjustment of management to cope with present industrial conditions, it is thought that it will not be necessary for the rice farmers to cut their acreage.

"In the rice belt there are practically no labor troubles. Negroes, who went north during the war to seek employment in the munition plants and other manufactories, are returning. With the return of the soldiers they have been forced to surrender their jobs to white and more skilled labor. That has convinced them that the farm life is best, and they are gladly returning to agricultural pursuits.

"The introduction of the very latest farming machinery into the rice belt has also eliminated labor troubles. The land is cultivated by tractors, and the rice is harvested by tractor-reapers, and then is threshed by the most improved methods.

"With no labor trouble, with a readjustment of business conditions, a united industry, and an extensive advertising campaign to increase consumption of rice, those engaged in the Southern rice industry are planning and hoping for a larger business in 1921."

The Retail Merchants' Association of Chatham, Ont., is making extensive preparations for a country-wide trade campaign to stimulate business during the corn show week, this month.

Prices of Store Equipment are Firm

Scales, Meat Slicers, Cheese Cutters, Refrigerators, Counters and Other Store Equipment Will Likely Sell at Present Values in 1921—Raw Material and Labor Are Still High

"THERE is a query in the mind of almost every merchant in Canada as to whether there will be any perceptible change in the price of store fixtures during the coming year," stated F. E. Mutton, vice-president and general manager of the International Business Machines Company, Ltd., Toronto, Ont., in an interview with Canadian Grocer.

"As manufacturers of scales, meat slicers, cheese cutters and time recorders, we do not feel it is likely there will be any change in these store accessories, either up or down, for the reason that there was never any inflated price, and while raw materials may decrease in price somewhat, the cost of labor will not be changed so that it will affect manufacturing costs.

Overhead Expenses Increasing

"On the other hand, overhead expenses will increase owing to increased taxation, and again, there are some raw materials that the Canadian manufacturer is compelled to import. The adverse exchange rate against the Canadian manufacturer again tends to equal, if not more than offset, any reduction there may be in the purchase price of raw material.

"Another factor that enters into the distribution at an increased cost is selling expense, owing to increased railway fares or general travelling expense, and there is also the item of increased freight rates. Consequently in summing up the situation as we see it for at least the next year, it is really a question, with the increased cost of doing business, whether prices would not, if changed at all, have to move up a little."

Refrigerators Are Steady

Regarding the selling prices of refrigeration equipment, there is no chance of the prices of this equipment being reduced in the near future. Such is the opinion of manufacturers. They point out that they are not anticipating any big reduction in the cost of raw material, and as they employ highly skilled labor, it too must remain at the present level. They further explain that the present costs are the same as early 1920 costs, and will likely remain practically stationary during the coming season. Under these conditions the selling price of refrigerator equipment cannot be reduced.

Store Furniture Firm

In summing up the market situation for store furniture, Oliver Kinzie, president of the Walker Bin and Store Fixture Co., Ltd., Kitchener, Ont., stated to Canadian Grocer:

"Prices, of course, went up in everything, so must recede in proportion until some level is reached comparatively to correspond with cost of material, labor and taxes. On household furniture the advance since 1914 was possibly 150 per cent. to cover an advance of 125 per cent. in labor, and 150 per cent. in lumber to 200 per cent. in glass and hardware. On shop furniture or store fixtures the advance on an average has been but 100 per cent., and we see no possibility of any material change during the coming season, if at all, in general lines. It takes specially trained mechanics to work to detail specifications, and if anything a higher standard of skill than for regular lines of furniture, where one does the same thing over and over without variation for months or years. This specially trained labor being scarce the trade has to compete more or less with higher paid metal and rubber industries to hold the men and there is no likelihood of any reduction in wages at all. Again, the fixture business being in few hands, all of which while competing keenly for business, had secured all lumber and supplies for a year or two of operation before the rise in cost of lumber, etc., in effect last year, the prices never reached a level such as raw materials would have justified, and present cost of essential raw materials is only reaching the levels of same goods 18 months ago, when present stocks were purchased in many instances. Taking one single item in our line as good basswood used for bins; in 1915, we bought it F.A.S. grade for $38 per M, in 1918 at $68, and now same grade is $128 at the least. Oak has been reduced a great deal since last spring, but all Canadian woods have advanced 25 per cent. at the least on an average.

"Glass, fortunately, on account of exchange and financial pressure in Europe, is sold lower in Canada by Belgian firms than the same stock is sold in England or on the Continent. The large American plate glass factories, however, have made no reduction. In fact, we know of one car of Belgian plate sold by local firm to a Toledo manufacturer at net cost laid down here, his only profit being the 11 per cent. exchange on N. Y. funds he received. Out of this, too, would have to be paid duty. At the same time competition with U. S. manufacturers had to be considered, so the relief in this instance seems to be only local."

Few Recessions Are Looked For In Evaporated Milk Prices

The First Three Months of the Year, at Any Rate, Will See Little Change in the Market—Situation in Condensed Milk is Similar

THERE is no indication that evaporated milk prices will be any lower than at present for at least the first three months of the year. Practically the only raw material that has declined in price over the high prices prevailing during the past twelve months is the raw milk. The cost of cans has not been reduced at all from the extreme high price during and since the war period. There has been an indication during the past sixty days that prices on containers are weakening and manufacturers of evaporated milk are looking for a slight reduction on the cost of containers. This reduction, however, will probably be a mere shading, amounting to perhaps three or four cents on a case.

Then again the high cost of labor has not come down, nor is likely to, for some time. There is a possibility that there will be some readjustments to a lower basis, but it will take some months to bring this about, and how far it will go will depend upon the extent the general scale of living expenses are reduced.

Freight Rates Still High

Against the savings which may be made by the reduction in the prices of raw material there are the increases that have been made in the freight rates, which will undoubtedly offset any savings in raw materials.

Prospects for exporting are not good. Manufacturers are of the opinion that there will be some continued exportations of evaporated milk, but the unfavorable exchange situation, together with the general unsatisfactory financial conditions of the European nations, are very much against a revival of export business.

Condensed Milk Situation

The situation in condensed milk is similar to that of evaporated. The cost of sugar has something to do with the price of condensed milk, but manufacturers state that the lower cost of sugar will not be reflected in the price of condensed milk until after the first of March.

Changes in prices of condensed and evaporated milks to the trade are not likely for the first quarter of the year, unless raw materials and other expenses show considerable change from the present position.

Trend of Biscuits is Down But Pre-War Levels Are Not Likely

Lower Quotations are Already Ruling But Further Declines Will Depend Largely on the Extent of Reductions in Raw Materials

"WE are not anticipating any further declines in the prices of our biscuits for the next three or four months at least," remarked H. A. Telfer, of Telfer Bros., biscuit manufacturers, West Toronto, when spoken to by Canadian Grocer, in regard to biscuit prices in 1921. "We have discounted any lower prices on raw materials, during that period, in the striking of our present levels. Our values declined in December, and at that time we endeavored to cover any recessions that are likely to occur in a period of three to four months. At the present time we are working on ten cent sugar, and the likelihood is that it won't go much lower."'

Will Not Reach Pre-War Levels

Biscuit manufacturers seem to be agreed that prices of biscuits will not go as low as pre-war levels, as at that time flour was on a basis of practically five dollars per barrel, lard nine cents per pound and sugar five cents, whereas to-day the prices for these same materials are, as everyone knows, very much higher.

"Labor is nearly double what it was in 1914, with no possibility that it will decline to any extent in the very near future," stated Harvey Shaw, manager of the North-west Biscuit Company, Limited, Edmonton, Alta., to Canadian Grocer. "There has been a slight decline in some staple packages of soda biscuits, with a possibility of some further decline in the early part of this year. We made a decline of practically ten per cent on all sponge goods on December the first, and a further decline on sweet biscuits is due early in the new year. Further declines will depend very largely on the markets for raw materials, particularly the situation in wheat."

"I wouldn't like to say what the prices of biscuits will be in the coming months." remarked John Edmunds, of the Christie Brown Co., Ltd., to Canadian Grocer. "We lowered our prices on both sodas and sweetened varieties from two to five cents per pound at the beginning of the year. What further declines there will be, of course will depend on what additional reductions are made in prices of raw materials. Our present prices are according to what we now have to pay for ingredients. We have not discounted further declines, and will lower our prices according as declines take place. There has been no reduction in labor costs, and this factor renders very little likelihood of pre-war prices prevailing."

Prices Lower on Small Confections

William Robertson, of Robertson Bros., Toronto, Does Not Look for Lower Levels Unless Luxury Tax is Removed

"WE have already lowered our prices on practically all our lines," remarked William Robertson, of Robertson Bros., confectionery manufacturers and distributors, Queen street east, Toronto, to Canadian Grocer, the other day. "Our lines are now from four to eight cents per pound lower than they were at the end of the year. At the beginning of this year, we adjusted our quotations, on the basis of sugar at 9½ cents per pound. Of course if the government removes the luxury tax on confectionery, our prices will then be another ten per cent. lower, as at present the manufacturer is absorbing that tax. The removal of that tax will be one of the best things for the confectionery business that can happen."

Apart from the decline that will take place, should the luxury tax be removed, Mr. Robertson is not anticipating any further decreases in present quotations. The sugar market, he states, is the controlling factor in the prices on confectionery. Mr. Robertson does not believe that the sugar market will see any lower levels than are at present ruling, not at any rate for some time. Other raw materials that enter into the manufacture of confections, Mr. Robertson pointed out, have also declined and these easier values have been of course taken into consideration in the striking of 1921 quotations.

With the removal of the luxury tax, Mr. Robertson is looking for a very active trade in his products. The discontinuance of this taxation will, he thinks, result in renewed buying, as everything else indicates active business in 1921.

H. R. McKenzie, manager of the Dominion Chocolate Company, Toronto, does not intend, at present at any rate, lowering the price of Dominion chocolate bars. He told Canadian Grocer that the present quotation on Dominion bars is a special one, and he does not anticipate any decline. He reports renewed activity in buying, and expressed the opinion that in practically all lines of merchandise the readjustment period was closing. While prices were generally lower, he did not believe that pre-war levels would be reached.

Laundry Soaps Likely to Hold at Present Levels

"Laundry soaps are not likely to show further price recessions during the next month," remarked J. E. Ganong, president of Lever Bros., Ltd., Toronto, in the course of an interview with Canadian Grocer. During the first two years of the war, soap manufacturers had not advanced their prices in accordance with the inceased cost of raw material but were content to base their profits on the higher price received for glycerine. Then when the war closed glycerine prices reached the bottom and raw materials commenced to soar and stayed there until well into the middle of the year just closed. And of course soaps were also advanced during the advancing period of raw materials.

The manufacturing of soap is a long process. "In fact," said Mr. Ganong, "it takes from three to four months to make a piece of soap ready for the market. The costs of fats have come down but so many other things such as coal, paper, labor and packages have not come down, that it makes it very improbable that there will be any further reductions for some time. If there are any declines they will not be large so that the merchant will have time to clean up his stock without any great loss."

Toilet soaps have been reduced about 15 per cent during the past month. Mr. Ganong pointed out that the actual cost of the raw material and manufacturing toilet soaps was not half what it cost to wrap, box and ship it. The perfume and coloring must also be taken into consideration, and none of these have shown any recessions and until they do further reductions are not likely.

B.C. Jam Makers Will Pay Market Prices For Supplies

It Is Expected That in Current Year Manufacturers Will Not Contract for Their Berries in Advance—Jam Men Buying Berry Fields

(By Special Correspondent, Canadian Grocer)

VANCOUVER, Jan. 10.—Looking back to the spring of 1919, it is recalled that the market price of Gordon Head strawberries was around 14 cents a pound. Some of the eastern jam manufacturers came to British Columbia and whether they needed the fruit, or needed the prairie business, they offered and paid for a few cars of Gordon Head berries prices ranging around 17 and 18 cents per pound. Consequently, the price of berries to the B. C. jam manufacturers was raised to the same figure. The Ontario prices for strawberries remained at a lower figure.

Not to be caught again, the B. C. manufacturers in 1920 jumped in early and contracted for their fruit. Not all, or not at first, but most of them did contract for what they needed well in advance of the actual picking.

Should Get 25 Cents Pound

At a meeting of the Fraser Valley berry growers, called to form an association, one speaker warmly claimed that the growers should and would get twenty-five cents a pound for every pound of raspberries and strawberries that they grew," etc., etc. One canner said to the speaker, "but the consumer will not pay a price for jam that will allow us to pay you a dollar for four pounds of raspberries."

"We're not talking about what the consumer will pay. We are saying what we are going to get," said this farmer.

They held their price at twenty-four cents for quite a while, until, in fact, the first shipment of the season were made to the prairies. But none of the jam makers would rise to the price. Then the growers turned around and sold half the valley crop to a United States firm at 20 cents, hoping to get them out of the country and keep up the price on the remainder. Then one of the Island packers began to get panicky and contracted for what he needed at about twenty-two cents. Others then jumped in at twenty-three cents, and one packer, who did not pack much, paid as high as thirty cents a pound. But the packer who remonstrated with the growers on their twenty-four cent price bought all he needed back from the American buyer at eighteen cents. Berries were crossing the American boundary into Seattle, and the same berries were then coming back to the Canadian side at the same time. In fact toward the end of the season an arrangement was made to swap berries, pound for pound and save them crossing the line at all, or standing the extra carrying.

Will Pay Market Prices

This year, 1921, it is confidently expected that the jam makers will not contract for their berries in advance. They will pay the market price for berries, and that is what the growers will get for them.

A new stage is being approached in the B. C. jam business. The jam manufacturers are buying berry fields, and, to a certain extent, reducing their dependence on berry growers.

1914 Prices of Rolled Oats Unlikely

Sales Manager of Quaker Oats Co., Peterborough, Ont., Does Not See Any Probability of Prices in 1921 Being at Pre-war Levels—

"WILL the price of rolled oats be as low in 1921 as it was in 1914?" asked a Canadian Grocer representative of George A. Macdonald, sales manager of the Quaker Oats Company, Peterborough, Ont.

"We do not see any probability of the price of rolled oats being at any time during 1921 as low as in 1914, although when making this statement we are figuring that the margin made by the miller on sales of rolled oats during 1921 will probably be considerably less than the margin obtained by the miller in the year 1914," replied Mr. Macdonald.

"The raw material for a bag of rolled oats may go as low as in 1914, but higher freights primarily, and necessarily higher costs of manufacturing and merchandising would make it, to say the least, entirely improbable that they will reach any such level.

Gradual Return of Oats Price

"Furthermore, inasmuch as the present market value set upon oats is one based upon economic necessity and sentiment rather than proper value, we are inclined to look for a gradual return of the oats price to a fair return basis to the producer during the year.

"Labor, in all probability, will be reflected downward in our costs in the year 1921, but no such thought as a return to 1914 labor wage scale occurs to us as probable during 1921, and all adjustments of wages will be made only after the fullest consideration and comprehension of the actual reduction in the scale of living cost by declines in commodity values.

Packages Should Come Down

"The cost of cartons and packages should come down during 1921, as paper and allied products have so far not proportionately declined with other products."

In referring to the possibilities of exporting grains and flour to Europe, Mr. Macdonald said:

"It seems to us that the possibilities on flour and wheat will be limited by the actual necessities of importing, unless some better method is devised by the exporting countries of handling the exchange situation. Of coarse grains, such as oats, the possibility ought to be greater, as Europe must build up her animals, and oats, barley, corn, etc., are to-day selling at a much lower relative scale than wheat is or can be expected to."

Does Not Look for Any Changes in Pickle Prices

"We are not looking for any changes in prices of pickles at the present time," remarked Fred. Lytle, of Lytle Bros., pickle packers, West Toronto, to Canadian Grocer, the other day. "Our labor costs are still as high as ever, and the cost of containers, as well as of labels, is still maintained at very strong levels. Actual stocks of pickles are not heavy. Should present supplies become exhausted, and it became necessary to purchase from the United States, prices here would be more or less affected. The crop of cucumbers in the United States last year was only forty-seven per cent of normal, and prices are consequently very firm over there. The exchange situation, at its present high levels, will also be a factor in prices as far as the Canadian market is concerned, should it be necessary to buy stock in the United States.

"The lower market in sugar will not affect pickle prices, that is, of course the sweet varieties, to any great extent. A ten gallon keg might be quoted somewhat lower on account of the easier sugar market, but any difference in quotations on a ten ounce bottle would be so light as to be almost negligible."

Sockeye Salmon May Show Some Reduction in Current Year

In Sympathy With Declines in Other Food Products, But Pinks and Chums Are Now Selling Below Cost and May Show Advance

By Special Correspondent to Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, Jan. 10.—The British Columbia salmon pack of 1920 is about 200,000 cases less than that of 1919, due principally to the small quantity of chums put up by the canneries. The foreign market for this cheaper fish has been seriously curtailed owing to various abnormal conditions, but there is every confidence that these unfavorable hindrances to free trading are only temporary, and that the continental demand for pinks and chums will before long absorb the greater part of what good stocks are now unsold.

Packers' Supplies Cleaned Up

Sockeye, red spring and cohoes are generally cleaned up from packers' hands. These fish are always in demand in Canada, England and Australia. Pinks and chums usually find a ready market both at home and on the continent of Europe. In France, these last mentioned fish are almost exclusively imported, as the French buyer recognizes their equal value to sockeye, when made up into salads and other like dishes. The Frenchwoman declines to pay the heavy extra price for the sake of a red color, when an equally palatable and nutrient article can be purchased for one-third of the cost.

A Forecast Difficult

It is impossible to forecast the market prices for 1921. World conditions of trade, cost of materials used in processing, and many other considerations will decide this question within the next six months.

Tinplates, nets, twine and several other leading necessities of the cannery business have already been purchased, and at costs generally in excess of those paid for last year's pack. Sockeye salmon sold at high prices last season, but with the natural tendency for lower prices on all commodities, this popular fish will probably have to show some reduction in sympathy with other food products. Pinks and chums are now selling at or below the cost of production, and may and should show an advance in price if the canning industry is to be maintained on a safe and healthy commercial footing.

No Declines Expected on High Grade Brooms

Broom Corn Crop Greatly Damaged by Rain—Advanced Freight Rates and Exchange Also Factors in Holding Prices

ACCORDING to broom manufacturers there is no possibility of prices on the better grade of brooms being reduced to any great extent during the coming year. The broom corn crop was as large as in other years, but the crop was greatly damaged by excessive rains during the harvesting season. This means that a very small portion of the entire crop is fit for making into high-class brooms, and the remainder will be made into cheaper grades.

Crop Damage Extensive

H. H. Stevens, of Stevens-Hepner Co., Ltd., Port Elgin, Ont., who has recently returned from a buying trip to the broom corn market in Chicago, stated in an interview with Canadian Grocer:

"The American Government reports show about the same quantity of broom corn harvested in 1920 as in 1919, but in the past season there was an enormous proportion of it damaged by rain, so that corn running from good to medium grade to choice is not at all plentiful and commands a good price. Prices in the field run from $50 to $300 per ton, certainly a very wide range. Anything under $125 is, in my opinion, hardly worth buying. In addition to the great amount of damaged corn there was a lot of corn grown in Western Kansas and Colorado, which is of nice color, but as hard and brittle as a pipe stem.

"The 40 per cent. freight rate advance hits the broom manufacturer both coming and going, as he has to pay this increase on the corn coming in and the brooms going out. In addition to this he has to pay freight on corn in American funds, and therefore pays exchange on the freight, which at present amounts to about $75 for exchange alone on an average car. Handles advanced 75 per cent., during the past twelve months and recently declined 10 per cent., but handle manufacturers claim that prices will again advance after January."

Further Decline Unlikely

"Prices on brooms have been reduced about 50 cents per dozen, and I do not think that any further decline can be expected for brooms made of sound corn," concluded Mr. Stevens. "Of course there will be brooms made of damaged corn, which are liable to be sold at almost any price.

"While there has been a decreased demand for brooms during the past few months, undoubtedly due to the desire of all retail merchants as well as wholesalers to reduce stocks to the lowest point possible consistent with the service they render," stated M. S. Snyder, of the Waterloo Broom & Brush Co., Ltd., Waterloo, Ont., "furthermore, there seems to be a feeling throughout the trade that because some lines have shown reductions all other lines would follow. Up to the present there has been nothing in the price of broom corn or other material entering into the make-up of a broom to warrant any reduction in the selling price, unless one wishes to produce brooms of inferior quality. There has been a great deal of damaged corn this year, as for example in one of the largest broom corn producing districts in the United States at least 75 per cent. of the entire crop was exposed to excessive rains at a time when it should have had absolute dry weather. In addition to this the climatic conditions in other producing districts were not nearly so favorable as is usually the case.

Quality is Lower

"This damaged broom corn, of course, can be brought in at a lower price than the better corn, but when it is considered that the freight on this corn is just the same as on the better grade, and often it will figure higher for the reason that this grade will have more waste stock in it, on which, of course, the freight is paid and also the original price per ton on this waste as well, there appears to be no occasion for prices on brooms of quality to be lower, and where exceptionally low prices are quoted it may safely be assumed that the quality will also be lower."

EVAPORATED APPLE MAKERS HOLD MEETING

Toronto, Jan. 12.—A meeting of the evaporated apple manufacturers of Ontario was recently held in the King Edward Hotel. Fully ninety-five per cent of the total number of manufacturers in Ontario were represented. Discussions on the present situation showed that the present price of evaporated apples did not cover the cost of production, and it was hoped to arrange prices that would at least allow the manufacturers to break even. However, there were no prices established as it could hardly be done without a holding company being formed, which they thought was too late for this season.

W. H. Millman & Sons., Toronto, were appointed brokers for the Dominion for the whole of the Ontario pack.

The citizens of Welland, Ont., carried the daylight saving by-law by a small majority.

A Cash Basis Means Better Service

The More Accounts in a Town Which Tries to Get Away as Far As Possible From a Credit Business, the Better it Will Be for The Town, Because Credits From Banks Will Be More Easily Obtained

By C. R. BARNHILL, Amherst, N.S.

THE manufacturer's job can be classified in two parts—to manufacture the goods—to get a good profit. One main factor lies between these two principles, namely, "Distribution." This factor is flexible, can be handled in many ways. The principal or prime factor in handling distribution is the line of "Credit" which is the bug-bear of many business houses to-day, is non-essential in a great number of cases, and is certainly the beginning and the end of the sale of manufactured lines.

The Shortest Route to Consumer

The automobile industry to-day is one line of business which ranks high among the world's commercial industries because distribution is worked out the shortest possible way; in other words, the line connecting manufacturer with consumer has no curves, but is followed by the shortest route, and is worked out on the principle that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points.

In many other lines of business the short route is not followed, and it takes time from the distribution to the point where you realize profit. For instance, in a house doing business on a cash basis, the time from distribution to realizing profit is short. A house working distribution on a credit basis may mean months before realizing profit.

If a manufacturer invests $100.00 in raw material, from the time the finished product reaches the dealer to time it takes a dealer to pay ranges all the way from thirty days to ninety days, and in a large number of cases even longer. If manufacturer makes 10 per cent. on his investment for ninety days, his profit is $2.50. If he could realize this on a turnover twelve times a year, or paid cash for goods, his margin would be much greater.

Would Seek Credit Elsewhere

If some of the retail merchants were asked to pay cash by their wholesale house, many no doubt would at once cease to buy from that particular house, and would seek credit from some other house. This would happen in the majority of cases where the retailer does not look into this question thoroughly, and if he did so would in order to do as requested have to notify all his customers that he will have to sell for cash, or get after his accounts in earnest, which he is very loath to do because he is afraid of losing trade. Some would say, "No use, I have a good trade, have a few accounts which are only 25 per cent. collectable, but this cannot be helped." Others would say, "Should be doing cash business, but have been established here for years, and could not, or would not, be advisable to change my business," and still others are afraid to change, while still others are dilatory, able as they are to pay all their accounts, and because of that feeling of safety they let accounts grow; in many cases they lose all, and in larger number of cases collect a few dollars at a time, which means they are banker for some accounts for months and even years.

Can Give Better Service

All the above reasons which retailers give are worthy of serious consideration because of the fact that it would not do to spring all at once, the idea that they intend to work on a cash basis only. The idea would have to be conveyed, would need grading, trimming, building up, and the retail dealer would have to realize the worth of a cash business. To this end the wholesaler can be of great assistance, and not follow the line of least resistance, but seek out a path in his distribution that will give him returns in least possible time, and this would automatically be followed by the retailer, who would have to see to it that his goods must be paid for in a certain time. His customer in turn would realize that his store is in a better position to serve his wants, both in quality and price, as from the manufacturer down to the customer the cash basis would have a tendency to give better service than can be done on a credit basis.

Money Easier and Business Better

The more accounts in a town or community, which tries to get away as far as possible from a credit basis, though they may not all do a cash business, the better it will be for the town or community because of the fact that the nearer an account gets to a cash basis, the easier it is to get credit from his bankers. This would have a tendency to make money easier and business better, and turnover for both manufacturer and buyer is speeded up, which means better times.

The main factor in any business, particularly in this present period, for both wholesaler and retailer, and applies more particularly to the average retailer, is not only to keep his accounts down to the minimum, but to collect his bad and doubtful accounts.

Prices of Starch, Syrup and Glucose Are at Low Level

In summing up the possible trend of prices on starches, corn syrups and glucose, a manufacturer stated in an interview with Canadian Grocer:

"These products depend almost entirely on the market price of corn, and corn is one of the world's commodities that has been forced down practically to a pre-war price. As far as corn is concerned, our feeling is that the low point for some time to come has probably been reached, and at the moment there is nothing in sight to bring about a further reduction in the prices of starch, syrup or glucose."

"Will the cost of labor be down to such a point that will warrant a decline in your products?" was asked.

"Labor conditions to-day are different from what they were in 1914, and they are not likely to revert to the old basis. There must undoubtedly be some readjustment in labor scales, but it will come gradually, and it is not likely to have any pronounced effect for a great part of the new year. Then, again, the cost of paper and lumber is very much greater than it was, and there is not much sign as yet of a reaction in the prices of these products.

"We feel that we have practically reached bottom as far as most of our products are concerned, unless this season's crop of corn becomes more burdensome than is expected. We can, in any case, only figure on the situation for the first half of the year, for in case of serious drought or a very wet summer, the prospects for the new corn crop may be influenced to such an extent that conditions for the second half of the year may be entirely different."

THE CORN FLAKES CASE

All the evidence, with the exception of that of W. K. Kellogg has been heard in the case of the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., of London, Ont., against the W. K. Kellogg Cereal Co., of Toronto and Battle Creek, Mich. This evidence will be taken shortly, Mr. Kellogg having been prevented from appearing on account of illness. Argument will then be heard before Mr. Justice Middleton.

Must Follow the Market Downward

The Grocer Who Is Doing This is Making His Net Profits Just as Rapidly and Surely as He Who Follows It Up.

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

EUGENE DEBS, who undoubtedly is like the rest of us in that he is not as bad as he might be or as he is often represented to be, talked recently to an interviewer. In the course of his talk he said:

"Under the capitalist arrangement the only way to get ahead is to get ahead of the other fellow. Such a system necessarily breeds hatred, war and spiritual ruin."

Nothing could be more dangerous to our country than to let such folly pass unchallenged; and it is the folly, not the "system," which "breeds hatred, war, spiritual ruin," misunderstanding and the terrible class antagonism which is upsetting peaceful life in so many portions of the world to-day. It is the promulgation of such folly, unrefuted, that is dangerous.

As a matter of sober fact, "under the capitalistic arrangement" lies precisely the golden opportunity which America and all Anglo-Saxon development during the last two thousand years has laid at the feet and placed within reach of every man on equal terms. For under our system, every man has the chance to become a capitalist himself; and he does it not by getting ahead of the other fellow, but by helping the other fellow to get ahead to better things! It is true that the man who works so that his own growth upward is most conducive to the growth of those around him progresses fastest and goes farthest himself. This is not a dream but the truth and solid fact, as can be noted on all sides of us every day.

Business is Not a "Game"

The truth is that no business is a "game" though we carelessly call it by that name. Why? well, think:

The essence of any game you can think of is that one can win only through the loss of another or the others. There is no other way for any gamester to win than to get from others who thereby lose. But when a customer buys a dollar's worth of goods from you, she gives you a dollar in exchange for what is worth more to her than the dollar; and you give her the goods for the dollar which is worth more to you than the goods. So in business. Both sides win. That is why it can never be classed as a game.

How does it come about that your goods are worth more to that woman than the dollar she gives you? Because accompanying them is a distinct kind of specialized service which not only could she not afford to supply herself, but which she could not supply at all. It is this character of interdependent service and mutual helpfulness which underlies our civilization. There is an equal chance under it for all of us. It is a glorious heritage of such slow, stable and sturdy growth that it is not liable to be upset by any such half-baked maunderings as Debs and his ilk indulge in —unless we permit such talk to go unchallenged.

For the sake of ourselves, our posterity, the future of our country and the entire race of mankind we must be up and doing to scotch such folly and nip weeds of such noxious character in the bud. Let us take to heart the words of Lincoln—who surely could hardly be called an oppressor of his fellows.

Property Desirable

Lincoln said:—"Property is the fruit of labor; property is desirable; it is a positive good in the world. That some should be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence is just encouragement to industry and enterprises. Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, but let him work diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own shall be safe from violence when built."

Look around at your own precious possessions. Consider whether you think anything you have done justifies Debs et al. in calling you a robber of your fellows. If you decide that no such charge as robbery can lie against you, be up and doing to cut short the folly of those who talk the language of Debs and all his kind.

The positive duty to inventory comes once each year; but it has not been so important in years as it is this year. This because we are in the period of readjustment — the time when of all others you cannot afford to fool yourself by a hair's breadth.

Make an effort to reduce stocks to the utmost limit. Take new values as they come and unload. Beans on hand may have cost you nine cents. No matter, they are only worth about five cents to-day. Therefore, if you get nine cents, and sell three pounds for 25 cents, you will be acting the part of the wise merchant.

"But you will lose money thereby," you say? Well, let us see whether it is as bad as that.

If to-day you sell three pounds of beans for 25 cents what happens? You can put away ten cents and take only fifteen cents to replace those beans. That shows you a margin of 40 per cent.! It is my opinion that this shows clearly that a man who follows the market down makes his net profit just as rapidly and surely as he who follows it up. Then, the beans are worth only five cents and you must sell in competition with your neighbors on such a staple. So get rid of them and all other merchandise like them, and get on to the new basis of cost as rapidly as possible.

Since this reasoning applies to practically the whole line of groceries now, this means clean out your stock!

Many merchants, because of this policy, have the minimum of stock to count at this, the first of the year. This facilitates the work, enables them to know where they stand within a few days after the first of the new year, and thus enables them to shape their course through 1921 more intelligently than maybe you have done it for the past three or four years. You cannot take chances from now onward it seems to me.

Pricing is mighty particular business. Nothing should be done more conservatively. Big houses recognize this so keenly that they work against their stocks in every way. Some go so far as to do this: Goods on which the market has advanced are priced on the original basis of cost, regardless of the advance. Goods on which the price has declined are taken at the new replacement value. There is no self-fooling about that sort of thing.

Inventory everything—fixtures, equipment, bills, unexpired insurance—being careful to estimate all you have and what is owing to you with great conservatism and being certain to make what you owe as liberal in total as possible.

Values—How Taken

Fixtures should have been listed at about what you might expect to sell them for if forced to do that; or if you carry an account with fixtures that account should be depreciated ten per cent. of the original total each year. Handle delivery equipment the same way, only depreciate that 20 per cent. Book accounts should be handled with this thought in mind: "I cannot be too careful about this." All bills should be estimated individually, based on what you feel they are actually conservatively worth—what you would feel safe in paying for them. Then from the total thus arrived at, deduct 10 per cent. This is not too conservative. I know from over 20 years' actual experience with this method.

Then be most diligent in finding out what you owe—don't sidestep any of that. Thus, when you have counted up your possessions, you will be facing the music honestly and be in better shape than otherwise to cope with the New Year.

PRICE OUTLOOK IN 1921

THIS issue of Canadian Grocer constitutes our annual price number. Information has been gathered from all sources in the trade, and particularly from primary markets, on the probable price trend of grocery commodities during 1921. A resumé of this information shows that conditions generally in all lines have reached a stabilizing price basis. Although values in primary markets on certain lines compare very favorably with those of 1914, it must be considered that marketing conditions have greatly changed since that date. Duty has been levied, freights are higher, and business and manufacturing taxes are in force. All these factors add considerably to the finished product.

In regard to labor, manufacturers are not desirous of reducing their pay roll. Some readjustments in wages undoubtedly will be made, but not sufficient to seriously affect the selling price of their product.

Roughly speaking, the outlook may be viewed during the first three months in the light of prices still in the process of readjustment. Some reductions may be made, while others will be holding steady as more buyers come into the markets. Then in the following three months prices will have passed the readjustment stage and business will become normal. The last six months of the year should find business conducted under the old law of supply and demand. Inflated prices, brought about to a large extent by after-war conditions, will be something of the past. The public will have settled down to a saner method of buying. With Canada's vast wealth in natural resources, there is no doubt that the year will close with Canada well on to the crest of prosperity.

REPLACEMENT VALUE MUST RULE

RECENTLY a woman purchased a pound of cooked ham in a grocery store. The price was eighty-five cents. The following day she had occasion to go into another grocery, just one block distant from the store first mentioned. Noticing some cooked hams nicely displayed on the counter, she casually inquired the price. It was seventy-five cents a pound. In relating this instance to the writer, the woman stated, "I have always been in the habit of dealing at one store, but now I find that it pays to shop around a bit. This man charged me ten cents a pound more than the other store was charging. I do not feel inclined to buy anything more from that chap."

There is no doubt that the buying public is doing and will continue to do just what this woman is doing, "shop around a bit." Even the customers of long standing are on the trail of lower prices, and will continue to do so until the general feeling spreads that prices have gone as low as possible.

No merchant is going to take a loss if it can be avoided. That is sound logic during normal times, but the mercantile world to-day faces a quickening readjustment period. The sooner a merchant places his prices on a replacement basis, the more prosperous and happier everyone will be. The retailer who is resisting the downward trend of prices is due to lose a considerable portion of his steady customers, and the sooner every one does his part in bringing retail prices down in line with wholesale prices, the sooner business will again be on a normal basis.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

THE REMEDY for the apparent non-buying on the part of the consuming public, is for the merchant to buy in small quantities and have a quick turnover, giving his customers every price recession, thereby helping along the readjustment period instead of trying to avoid it.

IS CONFECTIONERY to be placed in the same category as alcohol? Looks very much like it, with the luxury tax removed from every other commodity, with the exception of confectionery.

THE MERCHANT should not overlook the fact that there are still about ninety per cent. of the people on their old jobs, drawing the same good salaries, and wanting and expecting good things to eat. It is up to the merchant to place his merchandise before them in such a tempting manner that they will forget this "readjustment period."

IT IS now necessary to produce a Pure Food Certificate on importations of shelled nuts. This will undoubtedly stop the dumping in Canada of poor quality goods off the New York market.

WATCH market prices closely, and keep stocks as low as possible, consistent with giving good service. It is just as foolish to be out of an article and lose a good customer as it is to buy heavily on a declining market.

International Business Machines Co. Sales Force Are Optimistic

Salesmen in Annual Convention Believe That Record Year of 1920 Will Be Eclipsed in Current Twelvemonth—A Fifty Per Cent. Increase The Objective

OPTIMISM was the keynote at the convention of the Canadian sales force of the International Business Machines Company, held at the offices of the company, Royce and Campbell avenues, Toronto, last week. That even the excellent showing of 1920 would be eclipsed in the present year was the confident prediction of the salesmen, based on observation of the prospects in their respective fields.

"A fifty per cent. increase in business in 1921" is the task to which they have addressed themselves, and not a few expressed the conviction that even this mark would be passed long before the close of the year.

About 75 salesmen in all were in attendance at the convention. They represented the three well-known divisions of the company—International Time Recorders, International Dayton Scales and International Tabulating and Sorting Machines.

Canadian Organization Leads

Figures presented at the convention showed that the Canadian organization held all sales records for 1920 against the sales forces of the American firms manufacturing similar products. In fact, the Canadian organization had led the entire world in sales, on percentage of quota, for four successive years. The Canadian boys naturally felt elated and justifiably so in view of the fact that the sales forces in the United States and England number some 1,100 men, and that all quotations are based on the same figures, namely, of population.

The factory organization did itself proud in decoration to welcome the boys from the field. When the latter arrived from all parts of Canada—from Vancouver to Newfoundland—they were greeted by a group of pretty office girls, who pinned a buttonhole bouquet on each of their lapels, and who further had prepared a song applicable to each member of the sales force.

Addresses and Entertainment

The convention was addressed by Thomas J. Watson, president of the Computing Tabulating-Recording Co., of New York; Joseph E. Rogers, general manager of International Time Recording Company, New York; R. L. Houston, general manager of the Tabulating Machine Company, New York; S. M. Hastings, president of the Computing Scale Company of America, Chicago; W. S. Spahr, general manager of the Computing Scale Company of America, Dayton, Ohio; B. C. Wells, general manager of the Detroit Automatic Scale Company; G. Ludlow, general manager of the Moneyweight Scale Company, Chicago.

Monday evening, January 3rd, was spent at a theatre party at Shea's Theatre, and Tuesday evening Mr. J. E. Mutton, vice president and general manager, gave an exclusive banquet to the members of the I.B.M. Club, comprised of men who lead the entire organization, at the King Edward Hotel. Wednesday evening was devoted to a supper and dance to the entire organization at Masonic Hall, at which some novel vaudeville features added materially to the merriment. Friday evening closed the convention with a banquet at the King Edward Hotel.

Does Not Want Margarine Sale Interfered With

Brockville, Jan. 12.—(Special).—At the annual convention of the Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District retail merchants, which opened in the City Hall here yesterday afternoon, a resolution was passed requesting the Dominion Board to see that the importation and sale of oleomargarine are not interfered with.

A resolution left to the Provincial and Dominion Boards for questionnaires was that all fruit should be sold by weight, that the size of strawberry boxes should be specified under the act and that when berries are sold by the box only boxes containing a standard specified quantity should be used.

Another resolution sent to the Dominion and Provincial Boards protested as unfair the selling by manufacturers and wholesalers direct to customers.

The Ontario Provincial Board was asked in a resolution to oppose any attempt on the part of the Ontario Government to bring the retail trade under the scope of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Secretary J. C. Campbell, Ottawa, reported the membership as 1,270, against 1,109 a year ago.

SWIFT CANADIAN CO. ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION GIVE ENTERTAINMENT

The first annual Christmas tree of the Swift Canadian Athletic Association was given during the holiday season. The attendance and enthusiasm of the crowd was beyond the greatest expectations.

The large cafeteria was attractively decorated and when the athletic association orchestra struck up the first piece the building was jammed to the doors. The tables had been removed earlier in the day and in their place chairs had been put but as the crowd began to thicken many tables had to be returned in order to provide seating accommodation for the crowd, but everybody was finally seated comfortably when Santa Claus arrived through the chimney into the big brick fire-place. Nearly 1,500 men, women and children greeted him with the most hearty cheers. Huge baskets piled high with toys, oranges, apples, nuts and candies were placed on the platform and for the next hour and a half Santa Claus and his willing assistants were kept busy handing out the "goodies" and best of all there was plenty for everybody.

There was a Punch and Judy show for the children and some of the grown-ups enjoyed it as much as the youngsters. As a fitting climax, the grown-up boys and girls closed the eventful evening with a good old-fashioned dance and some of the new steps included for those who liked them best. There is no doubt but that this will be an annual event in the Toronto plant.

Coffee Declines More Than Any Other Commodity

"With one or two exceptions coffee has declined more than any other commodity," stated A. C. Israel, of A. C. Israel Co. Inc., New York City, in an interview with Canadian Grocer. "For instance, Rio Number 7 to-day is being quoted at 6¼ cents per pound as against 15 cents per pound last year. But in view of these severe declines and the exceptionally low prices, which are three cents lower than July 1, 1914, it is reasonable to expect that as soon as the present readjustment in all lines is completed that the trend of coffee will be decidedly upward.

"The crops this year will be normal but the prospects for the next crop is estimated to be ten to twenty per cent less than the present."

The fact that prices in primary markets are now considerably below the prices in 1914 does not necessarily mean that prices in Canada will also be as low. In the United States there is no duty on coffee, while in Canada there is a duty of 7½ cents per pound, placed on since 1914. There is also the increase in freight rates and the exchange which must be considered. Coffee, during the past six weeks, has been reduced in price to the trade five to ten cents per pound. Importers are now of the opinion that prices have reached practically a stable basis, while information from primary sources all indicates that the last half of the present year will see firmer and probably higher prices.

SALT HERRING EXPORTED

Vancouver.—(Special).—One exporter recently shipped seventy carloads of salt herring to China. The way the Chinese use the salt herring is interesting. From the coast the herring is taken by peddlers into the interior and sold a pound or so at a time. Even at the low price of herring the Chinese in the interior cannot afford to eat them "straight," they break up a herring into the family rice ration and the herring supplies a flavor to the mixture, as well as providing the salt, which is high-priced and scarce in many parts. In the famine district the population is so dense that with good crops the natives have merely sufficient to live, and with a poor crop, or a complete failure, they simply starve.

The fruit trade has a live organization, and knows how to conduct a convention that will bear fruit and of the right variety.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

GENERALLY speaking, business continues with the improved feeling that was manifest at the beginning of the year. Some shading downward is noted on some lines, but for the most part prices are steady. Wholesalers and manufacturers report that sales for the first week in the new year compare very favorably with other years, and are greater than they have been for several months past.

MONTREAL—Quotations on hogs advanced towards the latter part of last week but the bigger offerings this week have resulted in quotations coming back to where they were one week ago. Packers state that lower quotations may be expected on live hogs in the near future, and this will have an effect on the whole pork market. In the meantime prices remain unchanged. The trade in lard and shortening is quiet. Both butter and cheese show more strength this week with smaller supplies of butter at hand and a bigger demand for export. The feature of the market is the lower prices quoted on eggs as a result of the bigger production and the larger receipts on the market. Easier prices are quoted on chickens. In the provision market there are many reductions in prices as a result of a price-cutting scheme on the part of a number of local wholesalers. This has resulted in much lower quotations on nearly all lines of canned fruit, some vegetables, and on the cheaper grades of canned salmon. There are also big reductions on prunes and on some raisins. Although the refiners are once more standing together with standard prices, some of the wholesalers are cutting the price. Molasses is also reduced 10 cents a gallon mainly on account of this price-cutting campaign. Wrapping paper is reduced in price. The nut market is quiet, with some lower quotations on shelled almonds. The tea market is still very weak, with very poor sales. Flour was reduced 20 cents a barrel towards the latter part of last week, but the wheat market has strengthened up this week with a stronger feeling for flour. The fruit and vegetable market is limited in variety but business is brisk and prices steady. The price-cutting which started early this week is an effort on the part of some of the wholesalers to stimulate business, and it is uncertain how long these reductions will last since in most cases they are not prompted by reductions in the primary market.

TORONTO—Business in wholesale circles for the first week in the new year has a more cheerful tone. Sales have been more frequent and orders are for larger quantities than for some months past. This increased activity is undoubtedly due to the fact that retailers' stocks have been reduced to as low a point as possible. The markets are gradually becoming stabilized, and with the buying movement increasing, business conditions should be well on the road to normal by the end of the month. There are no new developments in refined sugar. The firmness that is manifest in raw sugar has every indication of holding as buyers are showing more interest and larger orders are placed. The harvesting of the new Cuban crop is progressing and there are now available for shipment both new and old raw sugar. Other than a slight shading in the price of pot and pearl barley, cereals are ruling fairly steady. Canned goods continue to show a better feeling as stocks are gradually moved, which has had a strengthening influence on the market. New crop Eastern rices are quoted considerably lower than present prices on spot stocks, but these goods will not be available on this market for several weeks. Southern rices continue easy but there are indications that prices will settle around the present basis. Lack of export orders both in Canada and the United States for evaporated apples is said to be the reason that evaporated apples are offered at the present prices, which are fifty per cent. lower than last year. Evaporated apple manufacturers claim that present prices are less than the cost of production. Currants are weak, and as spot stocks are fairly well cleaned up, prices are easier. Shipments of new crop shellac walnuts have arrived and prices are steady. Primary markets for French walnuts are inclined to be firm. Almonds are easier, with lower quotations for future shipments. Primary tea markets have shown considerable firmness with prices advanced on all grades. Production of tea has been cut down about 20 per cent., which will have a tendency to maintain the strong situation that has developed. Quotations on teas on spot are unchanged but importers are placing orders more freely. Practically all spice quotations are reduced. Stocks of spices in primary markets are small and the market is holding steady to firm. Beans are easy under an active demand. Onions are a drug on the market and prices are easier. Potatoes and other vegetables are dull at unchanged prices.

WINNIPEG—Business is reported by both wholesalers and retailers to have shown a decided improvement over last year for the same period. Retailers, wholesalers and travelling salesmen have done a lot towards creating this spirit of optimism, and while competition no doubt will be keener, these merchants who are showing a cheerful spirit of optimism, and who are talking of improved conditions, and meeting their problems with confidence will create an atmosphere which is very desirable and no doubt will render real service to themselves and also to the country at large. The raw sugar market is firmer.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—The grocery market in Montreal has many changes in quotations this week as a result of an effort on the part of a number of wholesalers to stimulate business by reductions in price. The line mainly affected is canned goods, with lower prices on all canned fruit and some vegetables. Canned salmon, in some instances, is also reduced in price. Prunes are included in this price cutting, but the primary market for prunes is weak. Although the refiners are standing together once more with standard quotations on granulated sugar at $10.50 per cwt., some of the wholesalers are quoting 10 cents a pound on sugar. There was a reduction of 20 cents on flour towards the latter part of last week, but the wheat market has strengthened up considerably this week. Shelled almonds and raisins come under the price cutting. The coffee and tea market do not show any more strength. Soaps are reduced 50 cents per case for standard laundry lines. Molasses is also reduced 10 cents a gallon by local wholesalers, but corn syrups are holding firm. Wrapping paper is reduced 1½ to 2½ cents per pound. There are some reductions in package rolled oats this week.

Unity Among Refiners

Montreal.

Sugar.—The sugar market shows more strength this week than it has for some time. Further Drop in Prunes

Montreal.

DRIED FRUIT.—The feature of the dried fruit market this week is the big reductions in prunes made by some of the wholesalers. This is primarily a result of the very weak prune market, but the price cutting campaign in vogue here has something to do with the extent of this cut. The effect is also felt in reductions on Valencia, Muscatel and California raisins in bulk. The decline in the price of prunes amounts to three and four cents per pound.

Reductions on Canned Goods

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—On Monday of this week a revision in the price lists of a few of the bigger wholesale grocers in Montreal showed striking reductions in nearly all lines of canned goods, including salmon. The reductions are purely a result of sacrifice on the part of the wholesalers in an effort to stimulate buying, and it is uncertain how permanent these changes will be. The price lists from the canners are unchanged, and in some cases the new quotations are said to be below cost. The biggest reductions are on canned raspberries, strawberries, and some lines of plums. These reductions are from sixty to thirty-five cents a case. Reductions on corn, tomatoes, beans, apples, peaches, pears, and peas, are from ten to thirty cents a case. The revised list as given by Montreal wholesalers is as below:

Tea Market May React

Montreal.

TEA.— The London market showed more strength early this week. This is generally reflected immediately in this market but it has not as yet shown any results. The demand for the medium grade tea is very poor at the present time but it is expected that a reaction may take place shortly. The presence on the market of large supplies of cheap lower grade teas has upset both sales and quotations, but there are gradually being used up. It is reported that only about twenty-five per cent of the Ceylon crop is being picked on account of market conditions.

Vegetable Prices Steady

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—There is no change this week in the quotations made in the vegetable market. The supplies in the imported lines are limited, especially of celery. The high rate of exchange is playing an important part in keeping up the prices on green vegetables and limiting the demand. Potatoes are holding firm at prices quoted and the supply seems to be quite sufficient to meet present demands.

Flour Looks Stronger

Montreal.

FLOUR.—There was a further reduction of twenty cents made in the price of flour in the later part of the week. This made the price of flour $10.25 to $10.50 per barrel for winter wheat and from $10.40 to $10.90 for spring wheat flour. This week the wheat market has strengthened up considerably with a stronger feeling for flour.

Lower Prices on Soaps

Montreal.

SOAP.— Another effect of the price cutting campaign now going on in this city among some of the wholesalers is a reduction in the price of all standard lines of soaps amounting to fifty cents a case. The ruling price is now eight dollars per case for laundry soaps.

Wrapping Paper is Cheaper

Montreal.

WRAPPING PAPER.—Wrapping paper is again reduced this week. Brown paper is reduced 2½ cents to 9½ cents per pound. Manilla is also 2½ cents lower, selling at 10 cents and kraft is reduced one cent to 15½ cents. per pound.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Jan. 12. — The sugar market is unchanged but some wholesalers are selling at less than list prices. Raw sugars continue to hold firm with a better movement noted. Corn syrups are unchanged and it is now thought that the lowest prices have been reached for some time to come. Pot and pearl barley show some price recessions but otherwise the cereal market is ruling fairly steady. One brand of rolled oats in packages, small size is reduced, which places all brands on an equal price basis. Canned goods are showing a better feeling and stocks are moving under an improved enquiry. Sockeye salmon is now practically all in the hands of the wholesalers and retailers, and many wholesalers supplies are becoming exhausted. Spot stocks of currants are light, but primary markets have an easy tendency. Raisins are ruling strong under a heavy demand. New crop shelled Bordeaux walnuts are on the market. Shelled almonds to arrive are offered at 8 to 15 cents per pound less than quotations on spot stocks. All grades of teas in the London market have advanced. Spice quotations are revised downward. Tapioca and sago are reduced. Eastern rices to arrive are being quoted lower. Southern rices are now considered to be about the low level. California navel oranges are lower. Grape fruit and tangerines are higher. Honey prices are down one cent per pound. Vegetables are dull and unchanged.

Sugar Unchanged

Toronto.

SUGAR. — There is practically no change in the refined sugar situation. The list price for granulated is $10.71 but in some quarters, granulated is offered at $10.50 and yellow at $10.00. Raw sugars continue to hold firm with a better movement noted. The buying now includes both old and new crop raws.

Syrup Prices Hold

Toronto.

SYRUPS.—Corn syrups are ruling steady. There are no indications that prices on corn syrups will reach lower levels, manufacturers point out that the possibility is that corn has reached its lowest point and unless this year's crop of corn becomes more burdensome than is expected and the cost of labor and containers is greatly reduced, there can be no further reductions on corn syrups for the greater part of the year at least.

CANNED VEGETABLES FIRMER

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Stocks of sockeye salmon are now practically all in the hands of the wholesalers and retailers. The pack of sockeye in 1920 was very small and canneries are now cleared up. Sockeye salmon prices are firm but chums, pinks and cohoes are in an easy tendency. Canned vegetables have apparently settled on a firmer basis. Jams are not moving very freely as yet and there is a tendency for prices to be easier before the end of the month.

Currants Are Weak

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Lack of export business both in Canada and United States is said to be the cause of the present low prices on evaporated apples. Evaporated apple manufacturers claim that they are selling evaporated apples below the cost of production. Spot stocks of currants are light but primary markets are weak which would indicate that easier prices are in sight. Prunes continue weak. Raisins are ruling strong under heavy demands.

Toronto.

NUTS.—Shipments of new crop shelled Bordeaux walnuts have arrived and offered to the trade at 55 cents per pound. The primary market for walnuts shows indications of firmness. Shelled almonds are holding at 48 cents to 55 cents per pound for spot but stocks to arrive are quoted at 40 cents.

All Grades of Tea Higher

Toronto.

TEAS.—Cables from the London market show that all grades of tea have advanced 1-2d to 1d per pound. Tea production has been reduced about 20 per cent. which undoubtedly had a strengthening influence upon the market. Local importers report an improved buying movement and particularly noted that larger orders were received.

Some Spices Marked Lower

Toronto.

SPICES.—Practically all spice quotations are revised downward. These reductions amount to one to ten cents per pound. Spices like many other lines of commodities have been passing through a depressed period, attributed to the banks calling in loans, which resulted in forced sales and stocks being sold in many instances far below the real market value. These depressed stocks are now considered to be fairly well cleared up and with stocks in primary markets limited there are indications that the spice situation is well on the way to a stabilized basis.

Spot Coffee Steady

Toronto.

COFFEES.—The coffee market shows no change and although prices in primary markets are as low as in 1914, the higher cost of labor, freight and exchange will tend to keep quotations in Canada about at present levels. Some importers are of the opinion that after general business conditions settle down coffee is apt to advance.

Toronto.

RICE.—Brokers are quoting new crop Chinese rice, which is considerably lower than present prices. This rice, however, will not reach this market until about the first of March. Japan has a record rice crop and it is estimated that it will be 10 per cent. larger than the average for the past seven years. Wholesale prices in Japan have fallen considerably and it is expected that prices on this market will also be lower. Southern rices are now considered that they are about as low as they will be for this season crop. Tapioca and sago are now quoted at 8 1-2 cents per pound.

Wheat Quotations Higher

Toronto.

FLOUR.—A decidedly upward movement is noted in the wheat market, which will probably be reflected on the price of flour. Another factor is the fact that on account of the lack of export demand for flour the mills are running very light and some are shut down entirely which is bound to result in greater cost of the product on account of overhead. However, by the beginning of February, Great Britain is expected to be in the market for large quantities of both wheat and flour.

Coffees, teas and spices are unchanged. Canned goods show a better movement. Raisins are holding firm but prunes continue weak. Import quotations on shelled walnuts are higher. Fruits and vegetables are plentiful but quotations are unchanged.

Winnipeg.

Yellow sugar has advanced and is now quoted at $10.50 per cwt. It is expected that small packages of granulated will show an advance in the near future.

No Change in Syrups

Winnipeg.

SYRUPS.—There is no change in corn or cane syrup. However it is possible that the corn syrup market may ease off due to the easiness of corn, as corn syrup is entirely governed by the corn market. Molasses show no change.

Canned Goods Improving

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market is considerably stronger. Apparently a large quantity of cheap price goods have now been absorbed, resulting in canned tomatoes having advanced about 40 cents a case over the low point. The same applies to canned peas and corn. Indications are that after these low priced goods reach the retailer that a firmer tone will be experienced. Packers report that all their 1920 pack of canned pineapple has passed into the usual channels of trade and that there are small stocks being held by a few brokers at a premium over opening prices. There is a decided improvement for all canned goods.

Raisins are Firm

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUIT.—There is very little change reported on the dried fruit situation. California raisins are about the only line of California fruit that is firmer in price. Raisins are experiencing the largest demand of any of the dried fruit lines and if exchange continues high prices are likely to be advanced. Prunes are reported very weak.

Nuts Reported Firmer

Winnipeg.

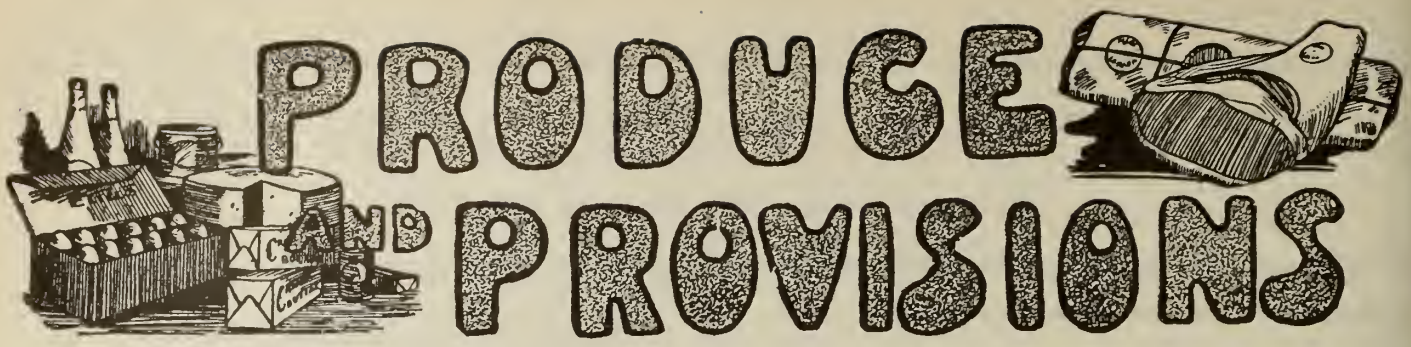
British Columbia

FROM VANCOUVER, BY WIRE.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 12.—There are large lots of beans being bought right now quietly, and as soon as a general inclination to stock even moderately develops present prices will not be in effect.

The crops of beans in the Orient have been small; there has also been some rain damage. The general demand, of course, is slow at the present time. The prices at which the beans are selling does not encourage the Oriental farmers to plant big acreage next year, as the price does not cover the cost of production. Various prices are quoted, but the figures at which actual business could be done would permit small white beans, hand-picked and good quality, to sell to the retail trade any place in the East at 6c. Whatever stocks are on hand at higher figures simply preclude the possibility of making a profitable turnover on these lower figures. California and Michigan beans were good crops and the prices are low, but not quite so attractive as the Oriental varieties. The peanut market at the present time is lower than before the war. Not because there is any relation at all between the price and the cost of production, but because some holders are taking serious losses. Cotton oil, peanut oil, cotton seed and bean cake and meal are all low. Fresh eggs are quoted at 70 cents per dozen. Best butter, 58 cents per pound. Cheese, 29 cents. Pure lard, 24 cents, and compound, 16½ cents per pound. Beef steer, 16 cents. Mutton, 27 cents. Lamb, 32 cents. Veal, 21 cents. Pork, 27 cents. Hams, 43 cents. Bacon, 47 cents. Okanagan onions, $3.50, and Spanish, $9.00 per case. Potatoes average $45.00 per ton. Grapefruit, $5.00 per case. Lemons, $4.50, and oranges, $5.50 per case. Canadian tobaccos down 15 cents per pound.



Butter and Cheese Will be Lower

Both Butter and Cheese Have in Late Months Experienced a Gradual Decline in Prices, and Even Lower Levels May Be Expected—British Market Must Be Supplied to Even a Greater Extent, However, by Canada

By Special Correspondent to Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—Both the butter and cheese markets have in late months experienced a gradual decline in prices until they are both quoted at lower levels than they were a year ago this date. The prices paid for cheese F.O.B. country points has gradually declined this year from 30 cents per pound to 20 cents per pound paid for the late made. The figures showing the receipt of cheese in Montreal for the year ending December 4th, 1920, are 1,415,779 boxes as compared with those for the year 1919 which were 1,544,939 boxes. This shows a big decrease in the make this year. There are a number of causes which have decreased the make of cheese which will be dealt with later in this article.

The Ontario factories to a large extent have joined together to form a co-operative association to ship their cheese direct to Montreal, where they are sold under the auspices of this association. The report of this new enterprise given at a meeting in Peterboro, Ontario, this year indicates that this has not been altogether a success.

Lack of Experience

In speaking of this matter to Canadian Grocer, A. A. Ayer, managing-director of A. A. Ayer & Company, Limited, butter and cheese exporters, of Montreal, said, "It is hardly to be expected that an association of farmers can as successfully dispose of their produce on the export market as can business firms who have many years' experience behind them, and a wide connection with which to work. For this reason, if for no other, this enterprise has hardly been a success." There is no doubt, however, that the production of cheese has greatly fallen off this year as is indicated by the figures given above."

Falling off in Production

The butter market, like the cheese market, has fallen off in its production this year for probably the same reasons. The figures given this year show receipts in Montreal of 372,889 pounds of butter, whereas last year the figures were 444,981 pounds. Part of this difference may be accounted for by the fact that a large quantity of butter was shipped this year direct to the United States without passing through the Montreal market. The American market created quite a demand for Canadian butter this year, and big shipments went across the border particularly in view of the exchange situation. This enables the American buyers to purchase butter in Canada cheaper than they could buy it in the United States. At the same time there is no doubt that the make is much below that of 1919. Probably one of the reasons for this is the large quantities of milk and cream that were shipped to the United States to meet the demands of the large cities. There has also been a bigger demand than ever this year for milk and cream for the manufacture of condensed and powdered milk. This has done a great deal to cut down the available supplies for the butter and cheese factories. Up to the close of navigation this year 10,000 boxes of butter were shipped to England and since that time 40,000 boxes have been dispatched.

Butter Exports 78,555 Boxes

The exportation of butter to England last year through Montreal mounted to 78,555 boxes. This shows a big decline in the exportation of butter, but this is accounted for to some extent in the unusually large extra shipments of butter to the United States.

When asked about the future of the butter and the cheese market Mr. Ayer said, "It is only natural to expect lower prices in 1921 for butter and cheese for the reason that there is a decided decline in prices in nearly all lines of foodstuffs but owing to the state of affairs in Russia, where a large part of Britain's butter and cheese was produced before the war, the supplies available in the British Isles are cut down and Canada is looked to for a bigger production of those dairy products. This may have a tendency towards firming up prices on dairy products in the next year. Then too, the war has had the effect upon the people of the British Isles of changing somewhat their taste in food stuffs, so that perhaps the demand for butter and cheese to-day is not the same as it was before the war. There is no doubt that in the past two years new influences have come into play in the dairy market that were never felt before, and as a result it is very hard to predict just what the future of this market will be. Prices in Canada are largely affected by the state of the export market and therefore by a careful study of foreign conditions one may be able to foresee to some extent the future of the butter and cheese market, but this is confused by the new influences which have been brought to bear upon market conditions."

Buying Sardines At Present Levels Is Advisable

The pack of Norwegian sardines during the last season was far from normal. This was the result of the fishermen going on strike during the fishing season. By the time the strike was settled the best part of the season was past, resulting in a smaller pack than usual and higher prices were named. These higher prices in Norway, however, hardly affected the price in Canada on account of the low exchange prevailing at the time shipments arrived.

Since November the exchange on the rona has been steadily advancing, until t the present time the difference on the xchange just adds $2.50 to a case of Norwegian Bristling sardines. Spot tocks of sardines, in view of the advance n exchange and the fact that there is a limited quantity held in Norway, also that the season for sardine fishing does not open until next July and August may be considered good buying at present prices.

Production of Hogs in 1921 is at Low Point

Trend of Prices in Current Year is Difficult to Foretell—Sharp Reductions Have Already Taken Place—Lack of Export Discourages Hog Raising

"LIVE hogs and all pork products have reached low levels, as compared with a year ago," remarked Mr. Mitchell, vice president of the Wm. Davies Co., Toronto, to Canadian Grocer. "Whether even lower levels will be reached, approaching a pre-war basis, is pretty hard to say. The production of hogs both in Ontario and in Western Canada is at a low point at the present time, much lower than at this period in 1920. The high price of grains a year ago discouraged the farmer, and he began to cut down his hog production. The control in the British market also has had its effect on hog raising in Canada. Canadian bacon is only being exported in very small quantities, and consequently the lack of export has resulted in a falling off in production."

Will Not Steady Prices

"Will not this lower production have the effect of steadying prices?" Mr. Mitchell was asked.

"Not necessarily," he replied. "The lack of production will affect the export trade and lose this business for Canada, as well as the fine place that Canadian bacon holds in the Old Land. It does not, however, mean that prices on the Canadian market will be held at higher levels.

Sharp Reductions

"Live hogs this week are selling around $14.25 per hundred, Toronto, fed and watered basis, as compared with $9 in pre-war days. The high mark last year was $25. Thus it is evident that severe and drastic declines have taken place. How much lower these values will go is difficult for anyone to say. All pork products have also suffered sharp reactions. Bacon and hams are now at fairly low quotations, and it is doubtful if prices can be held at these declines. Lard is down from 31 cents tierce basis to about 22 cents per pound. These are sharp reductions, and with the present cost of processing, including the high price of labor, etc., just now it is hard to see how they can go much lower.

"The position of the foreign exchange market has a certain amount of bearing on the hog market, particularly, of course, in regard to the export business. Should the pound sterling come back to four dollars and exchange in other countries become greater in value, their buying power in Canada will have increased likewise."

Fish is Practically at Pre-War Basis

Weather Conditions Play Big Part in Demand And Supply—Increased Cost of Operating Fleets The Chief Factor in Any Advances That Have Taken Place in Fish Quotations

By Special Correspondent to Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—The cost of fresh, salted and smoked fish did not advance in proportion with the advance on other food commodities. The cost of fish increased only as the cost of labor and fishing equipment increased.

Speaking of the future of the fish market to Canadian Grocer, D. J. Byrne, general manager of the Leonard Fisheries, Montreal, said:

"With the increase in cost of operating our fishing fleets, the cost of nets, twine, boots, rubber goods, cotton and other accessories in the last two years, our prices on fish were forced to advance. It is only of late that these have commenced to come back to pre-war prices and with a few exceptions they are well on the way towards normal cost. As a result, with the exception of halibut and salmon, Atlantic fish, both fresh and salted, and most of the lake fish have returned to pre-war prices. Then too, the increased freight rates has done considerable to advance the cost of fish but this too is receding since the first of this year and this will help to reduce the cost of fish laid down on the market.

For Immediate Needs Only

The mild weather of this fall and the early months of the winter have tended to make the buyers hold off as long as possible in purchasing their requirements for the trade. It has, in fact, limited the demand to the immediate requirements of the consumer. It is hoped, however, that the colder weather has set in for the rest of the winter and the ordering out of many cars, which have been held up on account of the mild weather, will result. This year the Lenten season begins on February 9th, which is much earlier than in other years. There is always a big demand for fish during Lent and when the cold weather accompanies these six weeks it makes the handling of the required fish easier and more profitable to the retailer.

There is another factor which plays an important part in the fish market at this time and that is the price of eggs. Eggs are generally very expensive during the winter months and while they cost, as they do now, over one dollar per dozen, the demand for fish will be greater than ever. The high prices on poultry also has the effect of increasing the demand for fish.

Prices More or Less Steady

There is at no time very much fluctuation in the quotations on fish. The supply of sea fish is practically inexhaustible and the market price mainly depends upon the cost of fishing equipment and marketing. These two things do not vary to any great extent in normal times and so the price of fish remains practically steady. The fishing industry is one of Canada's natural resources and has not nearly reached a point of full development. As far as the future of the fish market is concerned, very little can be said except that unlike many other commodities on the market to-day, very little change in prices may be expected since the prices of most varieties of fish are already on a pre-war basis."

At the annual meeting the other day of the St. Thomas Packing Co., the year 1920 was reported to have been the most successful in its history, with a total turnover of $1,005,000 which is an increase of 50 per cent over 1919. A dividend of 7 per cent was declared for the year.

Thomas Elgie, Chatham, Ont., has purchased the grocery business carried on by the late Charles Sterling.

The Fundy Fisheries, Limited, with headquarters at St. George, Charlotte County, N.B., has recently been incorporated. The company will carry on a general fisheries business. The authorized capital is $100,000. Senator Irving R. Todd, of Milltown, N.B., together with John C. Belyea, John C. Earle, of St. John, and George E. Frauley and James H. Frauley of St. George, are the incorporators.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—Towards the latter part of last week the quotations on live hogs strengthened up to high prices and were quoted at as high as $18.25 per cwt. The offerings are heavy this week, however, and prices have dropped again to 17½ cents per pound. Packers predict that with these larger offerings prices will go still lower. If this is the case quotations on smoked meats may be expected to drop slightly. Bacon was in some cases advanced in price last week as a result of the stronger market, but has returned to former quotations this week as a result of the better supply of hogs at the lower prices. The feature of the week in the produce market is the larger supply of fresh eggs on the market with much lower prices. Strictly fresh eggs are in some cases reduced to 90 cents per dozen. The supply throughout the country seems to be much improved. The butter and cheese market shows more strength this week, with a better demand, and in the case of butter the receipts are smaller than last week. This fact has a tendency to give strength to the market. The lard and shortening market is unchanged, but the easier trend of the hog market is reflected in both lard and shortening. There is an improved demand for fish with the colder weather and the approach of the Lenten season, which is early this year.

Hogs Return to Lower Prices

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS—The market for live hogs gained strength during the week, but is falling off again and prices are the same as they were a week ago. Hogs were quoted as high as 18¼ cents per pound in Montreal during the week but quotations to-day are 17½ cents and packers predict even lower prices. This fluctuation in the market resulted in higher prices on some smoked meat during the week but these two have come back to the level quoted by Canadian Grocer last week. Lower prices throughout the hog market may be expected within the next week or ten days as a result of better offerings on the market. There is no change in the beef situation this week. The offering on the market is only fair and prices remain unchanged.

The range of prices on turkeys is a little lower, being quoted from 50 to 53 cents per pound. Other fowl on the market are unchanged in price. LARD.—The market for lard continues rather quiet and easy owing to the very liberal offerings and the somewhat limited demands from all sources for supplies. There is no further change in price this week. It is expected that the easier market for hogs will have a weakening effect on the lard market.

Montreal.

BUTTER.—The receipts of butter this week on the market show a decline in comparison with the receipts of last week and with the corresponding week of last year. This has resulted in a firmer market for butter with stronger tendencies. There is a very fair demand for butter this week both for domestic trade and for outside business. So far the quotations on this market for butter are unchanged.

EGGS.—With a bigger supply of eggs throughout the country and larger offerings on the local market the egg market has weakened considerably and lower prices are quoted on strictly fresh eggs. New laid eggs are now selling 90 to 95 cents per dozen, which is a reduction, in some cases, of from 15 to 20 cents per dozen. In some places in Montreal strictly fresh eggs sold as high as $1.40 per dozen retail during the past week, but the bigger production of eggs throughout the country has resulted in lower prices being quoted on the market. The reduction in the price of eggs follows throughout the grades and select are now selling at 75 to 80 cents per dozen.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—After the hog market ruling firm for the past few weeks, packers have been successful in bringing down prices $1.50 per hundred, and there is a tendency that a further reduction will be made, as packers are offering $1 per hundred less. Beef is firm with all cuts advanced two to three cents per pound. Dressed calves are higher. Spring lamb is steady but mutton is lower. Smoked hams and some cuts of bacon are advanced. Mess pork in barrels is higher. Short cut backs and pickled rolls are lower. Reductions are made on boiled hams and shoulders, also jellied ox tongue. New laid eggs are becoming more plentiful, while storage eggs are fast becoming depleted. Storage eggs are two cents per dozen higher this week, due no doubt to the fact that stocks are low and that they will be completely cleaned up at the high figure before sufficient new laids arrive to greatly affect the market. Butter is fairly steady. Cheese prices are slightly higher. An easier feeling is noted in lard and shortening and prices are lower. Margarine is easy with a tendency for lower prices. Fish quotations are unchanged. Poultry receipts are fairly heavy, with prices on fowl advanced. Turkeys are easier.

Hog Prices Drop

Toronto

FRESH MEATS.—Light receipts of hogs for the past few weeks was the cause of the higher prices, but packers have succeeded in bringing about a cut of $1.50 per hundred and are offering one dollar less for this week's deliveries. There was an extra heavy run of hogs at the Union Stock Yards since Canadian Grocer went to press last Wednesday, no doubt due to the fact that packers were endeavoring to lower prices, and shippers rushing shipments before the break came. Dressed pork and fresh pork cuts are unchanged, but there is a tendency for easier prices. Cattle receipts were light during the week, with the result that prices were somewhat strengthened. Fresh beef cuts are up one to three cents per pound. Dressed calves are also higher, now quoted 22 to 25 cents per pound. Spring lamb is steady while mutton is easier with prices lower, now quoted 10 to 16 cents per pound.

Smoked Hams Up One Cent

Toronto.

PROVISIONS—Smoked hams and some cuts of bacon are up one cent per pound. This advance is the result of the higher prices that have been manifested on hogs for the past few weeks, but now that the hog market has reached a lower lever, these higher prices on bacon are not expected to hold for any length of time.

BARREL PORK.—Mess pork is advanced $3.00 per barrel, now quoted $41.00. Short cut backs are lower now quoted $47.00 to $50.00 per barrel. Pickled rolls are down $2.00 per barrel, bringing the price down to $53.00 and $56.00

Toronto.

EGGS.— Receipts of fresh eggs have considerably improved, with prices easier. New laid are quoted at 90 cents per dozen. Storage prices, however, are two or three cents higher. Stocks in the coolers are very small and the feeling in the trade is they will all be moved at good prices before fresh receipts begin to arrive in sufficient quantities to seriously affect the market. According to the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association report, only 14,409 cases remain in storage December 31, against 38,130 cases for December 31, 1919 and 42,988 cases November 30, 1920.

Butter Holding Steady

Toronto.

BUTTER.—Opinions as to the condition of the butter market are varied, some dealers claiming that the market is stronger and have advanced prices on second grade but have made no change on the best quality. Others express the opinion that there is no change in the situation. Many holders, however, are unwilling to accept prices which they would have taken some weeks ago. Undoubtedly the statement from Montreal showing that stocks held in storage are considerably less has something in it. The Montreal Produce Association report that 58,785 packages of creamery butter remained in storage December 31 against 95,087 packages December 31, 1919.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 12.—The produce and provision market has shown an improvement. Selected hogs remain very firm and are quoted at $14 per cwt. The demand for ham and bacon has been very active, and although bacon is reported scarce, local packers report that they have enough to meet requirements. The demand for all kinds of cooked meats, especially cooked ham, has been above the average. The butter market has shown a firmer tone, while margarine has shown a decline. Lard and shortening are also reported easier. Eggs continue firm. February 9 is named as the national fish day.

Hog Market Steady

Winnipeg.

Another Great Increase

The final count for 1920 shows the sales of

"SALADA"

1,495,236 Pounds Ahead

of 1919. An increase of nearly a million and a half pounds of tea or fifteen thousand chests, and this after an increase in 1919 over 1918 of 1,536,789 lbs.

It took ten years of hard work and unswerving faith in fine quality to bring our sales up to the amount of one year's increase, for it was not until 1901 that our sales for the whole year totalled as much as our increase in either 1919 or 1920.

We believe we have received back nearly all the 70 cent tea for which we refunded the trade when we reduced our Brown label to 55 cents lb., and this amount has been deducted before arriving at the above increase.

Our motto for 1921 is, as it has been for twenty-nine years, "Quality First."

FRUIT JARS NOT LIKELY TO BE LOWER

According to fruit jar manufacturers, there is no indication that prices on jars will be any lower than at present for this coming season at least. They point out that the cost of raw material and wages remain high and there is no indication that they will be reduced sufficiently to warrant a decline in the price of this year's output of fruit jars.

Merchants will remember the shortage of fruit jars during the last preserving season and the higher prices which prevailed at the time when jars were in the greatest demand. In order to avoid a repetition it might be wise to place orders for this year's requirements early in the season.

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

You can always count on steady repeats with

Borden's ST. CHARLES MILK

St. Charles Milk (the milk with the cream left in) is so rich and creamy and gives such an improved flavor when used in making cocoa, coffee, etc., that it invariably wins steady repeats from every "first trial order."

Being so rich in butter fats it saves butter in cooking, it whips like cream and it is a well established fact that its every-day use "cuts the cost of cooking."

Borden national advertising is telling your customers these facts. Why not cash in on this campaign by working in a St. Charles display in your window to-day?

A St. Charles display is a reminder that will mean bigger business now and in the future—for once your customers start using St. Charles in their baking they'll never use ordinary milk.

"The Customer Must Look Out For Himself"

This was the ancient custom of doing business; and you will encounter it at times to-day. It places you on the defensive, making it necessary for you to guard against being sold inferior blends.

The present-day "WINDMILL" Policy and Service is exactly opposed to this. We can back up our statements, written or verbal. We guarantee our product, and distinguish it from others by our registered trade mark, "WINDMILL" Brand.

We want to emphasize this fact—for evidently the big sales of

"Windmill" Barbados Super-Fancy Molasses

has taken the wind out of the sails of some vendors who are trying to push the sale of low-grade blended molasses. It hurts them to see "WINDMILL" getting the business.

The only points that you, as a retailer, care about are these four facts:

First.—That "WINDMILL" Barbados Molasses contains all the sugar that was in the cane concentrated to the finest syrup.

Second.—That we guarantee "WINDMILL" to be absolutely pure and the highest grade of Barbados Molasses.

Third.—That our prices are right for you.

Fourth.—That it is extensively advertised.

MACDONALD'S

Put the Macdonald Packets Where They Will Be Seen

EVERY tobacco-user in Canada knows the Macdonald line by sight. The extensive advertising and the long standing of these tobaccos have brought Macdonald's to his notice. He looks on them, unconsciously perhaps, as old and trustworthy friends.

Put them where he can see them—in your display case and show-window—on your counter.

Your profit depends on your turnover; your turnover on your grasping the opportunity to build up sales.

Our advertising has increased our sale of Macdonald's Tobaccos. It will increase yours if you turn it to your advantage.

Only a very slight sales-effort is needed to make Macdonald's the leading profit-maker of your business. It is worth trying.

Of course, Crisco is better to sell!

Crisco is packed in sealed, sanitary packages. No dipping out of untidy pail. No weighing—no loss from down weight.

Crisco does not lose through shrinkage, because of soaking into containers. No loss through spoilage. No expense for ice as there is no need of refrigeration.

Crisco doesn't have to be wrapped. No loss of time in getting package ready for customer. No expense for wrapping paper or twine. Crisco is always ready for the customer's market basket.

And you know that every package is going to give perfect satisfaction, because it always is good, always pure, always the same, high grade, cooking fat. You know that it will do everything lard will do, and do it better. Crisco means quicker profit — easier profit—and permanent customers.

INFORMATION FOR JOBBING BUSINESS

Is it necessary to register for a small jobbing business in fruit, confectionery, cigarettes, etc? How do you establish jobbing connections with manufacturers?

N. S. SUBSCRIBER.

Answer.—It is not necessary for anyone going into a business like this, or in fact in any kind of business, to register. Registration would apply to partnerships and the forming of companies. This is done for protection in case of litigation. To establish your jobbing connection it would be necessary for you to get in touch with manufacturers. You will not find all of them in position or willing to sell you as many of them are not desiring to extend their wholesale connection. You should, however, be able to purchase from many of them.

Answer.—Firms who make machines for chopping fruits, vegetables, etc.: Computing Scale Company, Toronto, Ont.; Enterprise Mfg. Co., Toronto, Ont.; A. J. Deer Company, Hornell, New York.

Recipe for commercial mincemeat, following is one which could be used:

4 lbs. beef tenderloin; 2 lbs. suet; 3 lbs. brown sugar; 3 lbs. seeded raisins; 3 lbs. currants; 1 oz. mace; 1 oz. nutmeg; 1 oz. cinnamon; 1 oz. cloves; 15 large apples, chopped fine; 2 lbs. citron, sliced; grated rind and juice of four lemons; grated rind and juice of four oranges; 1 quart brandy; 1 pint Madeira wine; 1 tablespoon salt.

Preparation.—Boil the beef until well done, when cold chop it fine. Chop suet and apples and add to the beef. Mix the sugar and spices and add to them the wine, brandy, lemon and orange juice. Mix the raisins, currants, citron, lemon and orange rinds. Now combine gradually the three sets of ingredients after having added the salt to the liquid part, using a small portion of each until all are used. Pack in stone jars, cover closely and keep in a dry, cool place. This will keep a long time.

YOUR GROCER IS NOT A PROFITEER

Have a heart!

Your grocer is not a profiteer!

He is passing along to you reduced prices as fast or faster than they come to him. Just because prices on many good things are still high, don't blame him. It is usually the poorest quality of everything that shows the greatest decline.

If he is as good a man as the average, your grocer is still doing his utmost to give you the best value for your money. But don't push him too hard. He is only human.

You don't know, but we do, that he is recommending goods that pay him less profit than other well known brands which he might easily persuade his customers to take if he cared to do so.

We know this because he pays us more for Red Rose Tea and sells it at less profit than other teas, so when he recommends you to buy Red Rose Tea, you will know it is because he believes it the best and is willing to take a little less profit for the sake of giving you the best value he can.

We are publishing this because we believe the more our people know of the true facts concerning the profits made by those they deal with, the more generous they will be in their judgments.—T. H. Estabrooks Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Keeping Pace With Market Declines

The Merchant Who is Reducing His Prices to the Public in Line With Wholesale Reductions is Acting Wisely And Will Retain And Get Customers by so Doing—Should Not Wait Until High-priced Stock is Exhausted

By C. J. MORRIS

ONE of the outstanding problems with which the grocery trade will probably have to deal in the current year is the question as to how soon should reductions be made in retail prices after reductions in the wholesale quotations have been announced. Should the retail price be lowered immediately or should the retailer wait until his stock bought at higher prices is exhausted, and then apply the reduced rates only to the stock he has purchased at the lower prices?

To the merchant who has given the matter little consideration it may at first appear that the selling price to his customers should be based upon cost, and that it is unfair to expect him to sell goods at a price which may perhaps yield him no profit whatever simply because he will have to pay less for goods which he purchases in the future. He feels that he is entitled to his fair profit irrespective of any price changes which may have occurred since he purchased the goods.

Can't Afford to Do Otherwise

If, however, he will give the matter a little careful thought he will be convinced that, in the interests of his own business, he cannot afford not to reduce the price to his customers as and when the quotation to him is reduced, regardless of the quantity of stock he has on hand and of the price at which he bought it. And this more especially applies to staple commodities the variations in price of which are more or less common knowledge. A moment's consideration will show that if this rule be not followed to more or less extent each store might have a different price for every article as prices would vary simply according to the length of time each class of goods had been in stock. The same principle applies on a rising market. It is good business then to price goods in accordance with replacement values.

Any business man buying goods to sell at a profit has to run some risk with regard to possible price changes. In some cases he may be the gainer. On the other hand, he must expect sometimes to be a loser and the extra he makes in one case should be regarded as an offset to the loss in the other. In the case of a rise in price the retailer is entitled to the benefit. Conversely in the case of a fall he cannot afford to hold out for the higher price, for in the event of his so doing he is certain to lose business, seeing that there will always be some of his competitors who, on account of their having had a smaller stock on hand, will be able to undersell him. Two concrete cases lately came to the writer's notice which strikingly illustrate the contention that the selling prices must be based on quotations prevailing at the time of sale.

Reduced His Price Day by Day

During the recent almost daily drop of a cent or two at a time in the price of sugar one Toronto merchant scrupulously reduced his price day by day as the reductions were noted in the daily papers. He, moreover, took good care to make known these reductions to his customers. Every day a large notice was posted in his window announcing the price. If the morning paper quoted a reduction of 50 cents a hundredweight, the same day a reduction of half a cent per pound appeared in his window, with the result that he acquired a reputation as the closest-price dealer in the district. Not only did he secure customers for sugar who had not dealt with him previously, but in nearly every case they purchased other goods, the profit on which far outweighed any profit he may have foregone on sugar. In one instance a new resident in the district enquired the price of sugar at a nearby store and was quoted 1½ cents per pound higher than that at which it was advertised by the dealer in question. On her pointing out the difference between the two prices, the second dealer explained that he was really selling at exactly what it cost him and that he could not be expected to sell at less than cost. The reply was characteristic of the attitude of the public at the present time:—

"That may be, but I do not see how you can expect me to pay you 1½ cents more than I can get it for a few doors down the street."

Got New Customers

The result was that the man who was basing his charges on present quotations secured her business and the man who held out for the higher price lost a customer who would probably have been a permanent one.

The second case above referred to did not occur in connection with the grocery business, but as it is an actual occurrence of recent date and aptly supports the theory here advanced it is well worth relating.

The Case of Turpentine

A customer entered the hardware store at which he usually dealt to purchase some turpentine. The price was quoted him as 45 cents a pint. He happened to have noticed a market quotation in the newspaper round about $1.60 per gallon and a simple calculation showed him that the retailer was charging at the rate of $3.60 per gallon. He made some reference to the high price and was informed that it cost the retailer over $3 per gallon and that the latter was thus making very little out of it. On making enquiry at another store near by he was quoted 35 cents a pint. He was on the point of doing a fair amount of painting and varnishing and, arguing that if the first dealer was charging more in one instance he might be doing so in all, he placed an order amounting to somewhere around $15 with the latter dealer. Moreover, two of his friends to whom he related the incident and who required some paint also made purchases there. This is a good illustration of what is, at any time, likely to occur and of how a dealer is likely to lose business when he fails to act upon the principle that in a falling market (or in fact in any market) he should always base his charges upon present values and not on what the goods have cost him.

Looking for Reductions

The extra amount which he may collect by making the higher charge is not likely to repay him for the risk he is running of losing customers and of acquiring a reputation for higher prices than those of his competitors.

Another point worth remembering is that, whereas in normal times the public are apt to accept more or less readily the price quoted them at stores where they are in the habit of dealing, they are, at the present time, when prices are on the downward trend, particularly keen to watch for any price reduction and to buy where they can buy most cheaply. Thus for the merchant who is desirous of conserving his reputation as an up-to-date-price dealer it is more than ever desirable that he should just now do nothing which can possibly lend color to the idea that he is endeavoring to keep prices high.

When Prices Were Rising

Those who in the past few years of rising prices have followed the advice given from time to time in Canadian Grocer will be in a position not only to recognize the soundness of the advice here given, but will also be able to regard any loss which they may incur by following this method of dealing with prices on a falling market as a set-off to the extra profits which have been made in the past through acting upon the advice referred to.

During the period of rising prices Canadian Grocer has persistently counselled its readers to mark prices up as the wholesale prices advanced, irrespective of what the goods originally cost, and has always pointed out that in justice to themselves they must do this in order that they might have a reserve fund to offset the reduction in profits which would inevitably ensue when prices came down to a normal level.

Those who conducted their business on these lines will now recognize the wisdom of having done so and those who unfortunately may have acted otherwise can only regret their failure to profit by the counsel proffered them. If, however, they are wise they will not add to their previous error of not charging what they should have charged by failing to reduce their prices, when, in their own interests and for the sake of their own business reputation, these prices should be reduced, and a lesser profit accepted.

Business Is Certain To Expand and Industry Will Be Quickened

Readjustment in Prices and Profits Now Going on in the Business and Industrial World Furnishes No Justification for Pessimism

THE following extract from a general letter sent out to the sales force of a Canadian manufacturing concern, dealing with present conditions in Canada is interesting, illustrating an undivided faith in the future of Canada:—

"The readjustment in prices and profits now going on in the business and industrial world furnishes no justification for pessimism. There will be no prolonged depression. Just as soon as a stabilized basis is reached business is certain to expand and industry will be quickened. The great recession in prices and accompanying decrease in demand for goods is an inevitable aftermath of the war boom. The wonder is that it did not come sooner. Everybody knew it was coming. Some people prepared for it. Others went on as if the boom in business and the rise in prices would continue indefinitely.

Greater Than They Are

"The readjustment process has wiped out a good many hundred millions of 'paper profits' made in the war boom and has put merchants and producers in an uncomfortable position. The discomfort and distress, however, by contrast with the wild flights of war prices, seem greater than they are.

"There is no question that fundamental things in Canada are sound—in financing, in merchandising, in industry, in agriculture. The country is rich with accumulated war profits. The crops are abundant. The banks have been foresighted in avoiding the admission of doubtful securities to their assets. The factories are equipped better than ever before to meet the demands of the country. The average scale of living is higher than ever before, which means that potential demand for goods is enormous and the present lull in buying is only temporary.

Europe Coming Back

"Anyone who feels inclined to be discouraged over the present situation and disheartened over the future should compare this country's condition with Europe's. Canada accumulated a vast wealth in the war while Europe was exhausting its goods, its men and its financial resources; yet Europe is coming back marvellously, increasing its production, strengthening its finances, restoring its business stability. All the Canadian people have to do is to wait patiently for the completion of the readjustment and then be ready for the resumption of prosperity that is as certain to come as the succeeding seasons."

FROSTS IN CALIFORNIA

San Francisco, Cal.—Temperatures below the freezing point and killing frosts have been general throughout California, endangering a vast quantity of ripening citrus fruits and truck produce, the United States Bureau has reported. The record temperature was on Mount Wilson, where it was 18 above zero at one period.

Do You Favor Sale of Fruit and Vegetables by Weight or as at Present

The Dominion Board of the R. M. A. will shortly send out a questionnaire to fruit dealers in the retail trade asking them if they favor the sale of fruit and vegetables by weight or as at present. This decision was arrived at during the discussion of a resolution presented at the recent convention in Brockville of the Eastern Ontario and Ottawa district. The resolution was to the effect that all fruit should be sold by weight, that the size of strawberry boxes should be specified under the Act and that when berries are sold by the box, only boxes containing a standard specified quantity should be used.

The opinion of grocers present was divided on the question, some taking the view that it would not be to the best interests of the trade that fruit be sold by weight, others that fruit should not be sold by weight but vegetables should, and still others that weight system was the only proper one. Mr. Downey, a Brockville clothing man, said that, as a consumer, he would much prefer the weight system as he would then know he was getting full value for the money he spent.

As it was a Dominion matter, Mr. Trowern suggested that it be left to the Dominion Board to send out a questionnaire with a view to ascertaining the opinion of the trade on it.

Serves Two Distinct Classes of People

T. R. Dunkin, Cornwall, Ont., Who Has Operated Grocery Stores Under Both the Credit and Cash-and-Carry Plans, Has Found That the Class of Trade Attracted by Each is Entirely Different—Now Only Has One Store—Endeavors to Eliminate Credit as Much as Possible.

By Special Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

THE question has arisen whether or not the cash and carry plan of conducting a grocery business can be made to pay in the smaller towns. It is quite true that there are two very strong sides to this question. It might be imagined that in a small town where the distance between the dealer and his customers is not so great, this plan would serve better than in the city. In fact, the arguments for both the cash and the credit system are so strong in this case that grocers in such localities in nearly every case compromise on this point and have adopted the best.

T. R. Dunkin, proprietor of a grocery store on Pitt Street, Cornwall, Ontario, has operated under both systems.

Showing the interior of T. R. Dunkin's store at Cornwall, Ont.

Each Caters to Different Class

The grocery business he now runs was handed down to him by his father who established this store in Cornwall in the year 1874. In November, 1909, Mr. Dunkin took over the business and in October, 1913, the late G. A. Irwin went into partnership with him and operated a business on the credit plan. This business proved very successful and grew continually. In 1919 these men bought the store of their opposition, D. J. Gillies, and the two stores were run under the one management. The new store, which is the present one on Pitt Street, was run under the cash and carry plan. Both businesses, Mr. Dunkin says, were successful in their own way. In discussing this matter with a Canadian Grocer representative he said: "The cash and carry store catered to a different class of customers to that of our credit store. In a small town a business man gets to know intimately nearly all of his customers. It is very hard indeed to draw the line and refuse to give credit. It also restricts a man's business, since other dealers are sure to give credit, and so obtain a great part of the custom that is carried on over the telephone.

"At the same time our store on Pitt Street did a very good business with the class of people who come down town to make their purchases and are willing for the sake of the small difference in price to carry home their parcels. Then, too, the people who have no telephones in their homes naturally go to a cash and carry store, since they feel that they are saving some money by doing so. In that way our trade constitutes two different classes. Both were successful in their own way."

One Store Had To Be Closed

"In June of this year my partner, Mr. Irwin, died and almost at the same time our building was sold over our heads and we had to leave. I then moved all my stock up into the Pitt Street store and carried on the business there myself. At first I tried to carry the business on a cash plan, but found that it meant a loss of a number of my customers, and I was forced to do a credit business. However, I restricted my credit side as much as possible, and still keep down the number of accounts carried as much as possible. There is no doubt that at the present time a grocer must get the money for his stock as soon as possible, both on account of the continually changing prices, and on account of the conditions under which he is able to buy his supplies at the present time. Our wholesalers and jobbers demand almost cash payment for their goods and in turn the grocer must demand the same from his customers. Still we have found that in a town such as Cornwall a grocer must give credit to some customers or else lose them.

"People have got so in the habit of buying their groceries on the credit plan and having them delivered, that in the small town it is very hard to make the change. People will go out and buy anything else but groceries and pay cash for it and carry the parcels home, but when they come to the grocery store they always say 'send it' or 'charge it.' It is almost a habit. In the large cities it appears to be different. There the people, as a rule, go where they will save a little money, and since there is a grocery store so handy to most of the people, especially those who buy mostly by the power of suggestion, an attractive display in a cash and carry store will attract the trade."

Buying From Two Big Cities

Speaking of the present condition of merchandise and financial affairs, Mr. Dunkin said: "Cornwall is in a very advantageous position. It is right on the main artery of trade between two of the biggest cities in Canada both by water and by rail. The water route affects Cornwall chiefly. The freight service is so cheap and almost as quick as the rail service. We are able to buy either from the wholesalers in Toronto or in Montreal, whichever happens to be the most advantageous. This gives the grocer here the advantage of having two large markets open to him, both of which feel the pulse of Canadian industrial progress. It is therefore necessary for a man in the grocery business here to keep in close touch with the market conditions of both cities if he would take full advantage of the facilities offered him by the situation of our town."

Are Keeping Close Watch on Stocks

Additional Interviews With Merchants in Various Parts of the Dominion Indicate That Retailers Are Carefully Watching Their Business During Readjustment Period

FURTHER interviews with retail grocers in various cities and towns in Canada, show business in 1920 to have increased considerably over that in 1919. Stocks are greatly reduced which indicates that merchants have been nursing their business carefully during the readjustment period. Collections generally have been satisfactory and especially so through the farming community. The following statements from merchants in the towns and cities indicated are showing the result of Canadian Grocer's investigation and throw some interesting light on present business conditions.

Collections Very Satisfactory

Calgary, Alta.—"Business was good in 1920. We have had the largest turnover we ever had. Collections have been very satisfactory. We had $8,500 on our books, and out of that amount we have collected in the past two months $7,000. From now until spring another $1,000 will come in and the balance will probably have to be carried over until next year. With the exception of jams we have no stock to worry about. We understand there is a movement on foot, whereby the jam-packer will give the wholesaler a rebate in case of a decline, and the wholesaler will pass it on to the retailer."

Stocks Much Lighter

Sirdar, B.C.—"Stock is far lighter than in 1919. I have been keeping stocks of all lines as light as possible. Jams will carry until about the first of May. Have sufficient canned vegetables for the season. Customers are buying freely on the staple lines but are going light on the fancy goods. Business in 1920 showed an increase of twenty-five per cent."

Princeton, B. C.—"Business was much larger and present stock considerably less than in 1919. Stocks of canned vegetables are not large and will probably have to buy about twenty-five cases each of corn, pease and tomatoes to put us over this season. Customers are buying in small quantities as they require them."

Point Fortune, Que.—"Stock is about the same as in 1919. Have sufficient canned vegetables for this season and overstocked on tea and soaps. Jams are light and will have to buy before the season is past. Customers are expecting lower prices but are buying freely. Turnover in 1920 increased $12,000 over 1919. Find it difficult to get efficient help and at present open for a good man."

STOCK IN BEST CONDITION FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS

"I would like to say that I have been following the market reports in Canadian Grocer and by so doing my stock is in the best condition it has been for a number of years. There is no one line heavy, as I have been turning my stock every thirty days. My stock of jams bought at opening prices will be cleared up by February first. Then I will buy as I require from month to month. Stocks of canned fruits are low and moving slowly. Canned vegetables are going into consumption freely at present. All staple lines are low and we are operating on the smallest possible stocks.

"The public seem to have plenty of money, but are not buying more than their immediate requirements because they are looking for further declines from day to day. Our business showed an increase every month in 1920 over 1919 except the month of December. The last month of the year was the same as in 1919. Delivery costs will be lighter from now on owing to the decline in the cost of feed. Salaries will not be reduced for a time at least. Real good efficient help is scarce and they are at a premium."—A subscriber in Weyburn, Sask.

Kelowna, B.C.—"Stock is $4,000 less than in 1919. Heavily stocked on tea and jam but other lines not heavy. Customers are holding off buying, waiting lower prices. Business in 1920 is a little less than in 1919."

Moose Jaw, Sask.—"Stock is thirty-five per cent less than in 1919. Keeping all lines down as low as possible and not in the market for any line in any quantity. Business in 1920 showed an increase of $1,000."

Buys for Six Weeks' Needs

Radisson, Sask.—"In every department I only buy what I think I can sell in six weeks. I think it bad business at present to tie up $100 in any line in order to sell $30.00 worth of goods in thirty days. I cannot see any advantage in buying large quantities, as the carrying charges eat up the discount. I let the other fellow do the carrying and I buy my requirements twice a month. I am over five hundred miles from the base of supplies but manage to keep up the assortment and have a turnover eleven times a year. Last year I showed an increase in business of $1,500. The average mark up was 27.3 per cent. and cost of doing business on sales 17.5 per cent."

Red Deer, Alta.—"Our stock is about the same as a year ago. In fact it is in better condition, as we are not heavily stocked on any one line. Canned vegetables are light and will probably have to buy again this season. Customers are buying in smaller quantities than usual, expecting lower prices. Business last year was very satisfactory."

Only 12 Cases of Jam

Cluny, Alta.—"Our stock is fifty per cent. less than a year ago. Stocks of jams are light. In fact we only have twelve cases, an extremely small stock for us to carry. We have been buying in small quantities just as required. We are not heavily stocked in any one line. Canned goods are low and we will buy again very soon. Business has been good, but people seem disappointed that prices have not been lower than they are."

Clarence, Ont.—"Our stocks are a little heavier than last year, especially on tea, raisins and canned vegetables. We have practically no jams, as the demand is very light. Business has been satisfactory, but customers are buying in small quantities expecting prices to be lower. There is no unemployment here."

London, Ont.—"Stocks are much smaller than other years. Fairly well supplied with jams, but other lines are low. Business last year about the same as 1919. Some unemployment but not as much as other cities."

Guelph, Ont.— "Stock is considerably less than in 1919. Have been buying very carefully during the past year so that with the exception of salmon, supplies of all lines are comparatively light. Stock of jams and canned vegetables are small, and will have to buy again very soon. Customers are generally buying in smaller quantities than usual, expecting prices to be lower. There is some unemployment but it is not serious. Business in 1920 was about the same as in 1919."

Customers Buy Freely

Humbolt, Sask.—"General stock is less than in 1919. Stocks of jams are heavy but other lines are light. There is very little unemployment and customers are buying freely. Business in 1920 showed a good increase over 1919."

Bethune, Sask.—"Our stock is about fifty per cent. less than in 1919. Stocks of all lines are light. Would buy jams at once if the prices were some lower. The drop in the price of wheat has caused people to somewhat curtail buying. Business in 1920 is about the same as in 1919."

Silton, Sask.—"Stock is lighter than in 1919. Purchased quite heavily of the 1919 pack of jams during last summer at low figures, and will probably have sufficient for this season. Have about three months' supply of canned vegetables, sixty days supply of other lines, but have enough sockeye salmon to last until the new pack arrives. Customers are very careful in their buying, due to limited capital and restricted credit, and are buying only staples. Business shows a satisfactory increase over 1919."

Black Diamond, Alta.—"General stock is about the same as in other years. Will be in the market for jams about the first of February. Notice customers are holding off buying fancy lines expecting lower prices, but are buying freely on staples. Business about the same as in 1919."

Don't Just Take Orders— A Chance for Salesmanship

Written by a Clerk

NOW that we have passed through a period of hustle bustle, the time has come to forget that hustle bustle and settle down to real business methods. Don't just take an order, but add to your order items which mean selling power. Be a real salesman. Let us come back to a point where real salesmanship counts for much. This will mean eliminating inexperienced help and putting in their places a class that will sell goods, in other words, trained men and women who can deliver the goods. In the past years we find too many who just drew their pay, whose minds were so filled with ideas hurtful to business and body that a special strain has been put on the so-called proprietors. To remove this strain, trained men and women who know their business and who are interested in their work will hold these positions and will fill the gap. Efficiency is lacking.

Indifference of Clerks

A customer will enter a business place and in many cases we find the clerks and sometimes the proprietors indifferent. You wonder why it is too much trouble to show and sell goods, Too many just satisfied to take an order. No time to use the selling powers in order to attain a better standard of salesmanship. Too many goods in the cellar, or under the counter, that should be moved and sold, due to poor stocktaking or keeping stock. In most cases they are keeping the stock all right.

Many merchants are not interested during the working hours in business as to the increase in sales but sit and either rejoice or despair over the day's sales. In most cases the clerks are blamed. In many instances they deserve the blame, but remember co-operation, pleasant personalities in performing your duty on the part of both proprietor and clerks has much to do with your success. When this is the mood and standard of your business methods don't you think your customers will notice this spirit exercised in your business?

More Co-operation Is Needed

How can you expect a concern to be courteous and pleasant towards its customers when between employer and employees there is discord and discontent. In order to get the best out of your employees, take them into your confidence. Don't do as the custom has been, work your proprietor, but work for your proprietor. Put the best that is in you into your work. At times you may think it is not appreciated, but remember if you are not as you think rewarded in remuneration, remember your efficiency increases, your ability is strengthened, and at times perhaps when your boss thinks it is he who should have all credit, your stick-to-itiveness, your plugging away, minding your own business will bring you that which you hope some day to attain.

Must See Goods

Remember, if you are not interested in working for others, as stated in the foregoing lines, you can never expect to be a successful business man or ever be able to run a business successfully. To-day we have no time to stand around and scratch our heads wondering. What we must do is sell goods, be more efficient, get over this slackness in business methods.

Always Buying at Home

Now a few words re buying at home. We find that 75 per cent. of those who send away moneys for goods out of town burden the home merchants with unlimited credit accounts. Would our merchants organize and do a strictly cash business, 75 per cent. of the money sent away would stay at home, and remember you could sell cheaper if all goods were paid for in cash. What is a mail order catalogue? Nothing more than a force of salesmanship put on paper, which if exercised by real salesmanship at home would very quickly eliminate the buying away from home. If you would put forth the same effort in selling your goods as you do in advertising, we needn't wonder what the result would be. You will find men who write and can write a good advertisement, one that will induce you to buy. You will find he or she can also sell goods, for in such an advertisement you will find the fundamentals of real salesmanship.

Therefore, you will surely agree where these are put into force personally you can soon see the result. Many will read these items and say, oh! anybody can write such stuff, but as one who is going through the mill and has not as yet finished, with many years of experience, let me tell you why we have only about 5 per cent. business men in our country. It is because they are not following out the foregoing rules re good business methods and real salesmanship.

LABELS TO TELL THE CONTENTS

The Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture of the United States is working on standards for jams, jellies, preserves and marmalade. The following statement has been issued by the bureau pending the issuance of standards:—

"Investigations of the Bureau of Chemistry have shown that the commercial methods of preparing preserves, jams, marmalades and fruit jellies have been undergoing changes in recent years, so that at the present time these foods, as they are shipped in interstate commerce, are prepared from a greater variety of materials than was formerly the case. Fresh fruit, preserved, canned and dried fruit are all being used. In some types the fruit is ripe and in others unripe. Sugar and corn syrup are used as sweeteners of preserves, and it is expected that malt sugar syrup and other wholesome syrups will be used during the coming season. Some products are acidulated by the use of phosphoric, lactic or tartaric acid. Due to the different kinds of materials that are used, the products of different manufacturers, and sometimes different brands of the same manufacturer, may differ in the important characteristic of flavor and consistency. The bureau considers that the purchasers should be afforded means by which they can distinguish the particular variety of preserves, jam, marmalade or fruit jelly which suits their taste, and, therefore, deems it desirable that information concerning the nature of the ingredients which give the food its character should be stated upon the label."

AN INCENTIVE TO PAY CASH

AT a time when merchants are wisely advised to conduct their business as much as possible on a cash basis, the experience of a firm in Western Canada is interesting. Conducting a general store trade, this concern recently announced to its clientele that a discount of three per cent. would be allowed on all purchases paid for in cash on the date of purchase. A discount of two per cent. is allowed on all accounts paid on or before the tenth of the month following the transaction. Not entirely wiping out their credit business, their terms in this respect are thirty days net, with interest at eight per cent. per annum, charged for overdue accounts.

"Our new system is bringing good results," states the proprietor of this business, "and we maintain that it meets the just claim of cash customers, and is an incentive to pay cash, and to settle all accounts promptly. It means a saving to us that is certainly gratifying."

The plan of this firm, in endeavoring to eliminate credit business to as great an extent as possible, suggests itself as a splendid precautionary method to overcome too much credit trade, and to encourage people to liquidate their obligations as quickly as possible, where perhaps they are not always able to pay cash.

The fact that it is working out satisfactorily, and with a decided advantage to the business, is sufficient recommendation for others to follow.

BUILDING UP A RESERVE

WHY do men go into business? The answer obviously is to make a living, and again to satisfy the universal craving of mankind to progress, to build a competence, to erect something that may stand as a worthy achievement.

The great majority succeed in the first instance—that is, they manage to make a living. But the number who succeed in building a competence is not so large. Men make a living, and they think: "Just a little further on—another year, perhaps, or eighteen months, I will have all bills paid, and a little reserve in the bank. Then I can begin to put away some savings."

But the right time to start never seems to come. Stocks pile up. The store is better equipped. A little more stands on the books at the end of each year. There is a relaxation of effort, a trifle more spent on pleasure, and more time taken for enjoyment. But the actual savings do not start.

Here at the beginning of a new year is a splendid time to watch this side of your business progress. The way to begin is to begin. Now and every week, and month to follow, add to your reserves.

Every man can save something each month, and so can the grocer. The really important thing is to begin, and the rest will take care of itself. Let it be one of your New Year resolutions, and the reserve funds you will have accumulated will serve you in good stead when it is most needed.

ANGLING FOR EXPORT TRADE

ANNOUNCEMENT was recently made of a somewhat novel plan for securing export trade as adopted by Italian business houses and which, it is said, is likely to be followed by a similar movement on the part of United States business heads. The plan takes the form of a "Travelling Fair," and in the case of Italy a ship has been chartered by some of the country's leading merchants and loaded with samples from which sales will be made, these being recorded by wireless. The Italian Government is said to have sanctioned the plan and provided a ship for the purpose. The idea has extended to the United States and is said to have that government's sanction now as well. It is said that a syndicate of U.S. merchants and promoters have purchased a ship which will visit no less than forty countries, the trip occupying eleven months of 1921. The price of a passenger's ticket, it is said, will be $10,000.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

THERE IS nothing extraordinary in the present depression, which appears to be seriously affecting a whole lot of people. Of course, those who worry most about it are the ones who suffer most.

TO INDUCE buying, it is necessary to convince people that prices are down and the easiest way is to bring prices down as wholesale prices are reduced, even if a temporary loss must be taken.

A SUBSCRIBER says: "I do not like the idea of tying up one hundred dollars in stock in order to sell thirty dollars' worth in thirty days." This chap has certainly the right idea. One of the quickest methods to adopt to bring about the end of this readjustment period is to keep stocks as low as possible, have a fast turnover and take advantage of every price recession.

"No Cause for Being Pessimistic"

Vancouver Wholesaler Declares That He Is Doing More Business Now Than at This Time Last Year—Retailers Are Payng Their Bills With More Than Usual Promptness

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, Jan. 19.—"There is absolutely no cause for our being pessimistic," said the head of a Coast wholesale house. "We have all been preparing for a condition like this, for a year back. Now that it has come, we should surely not be paralyzed with surprise. We have all as individuals been waiting for reductions in clothing, shoes, and food, and in almost every instance these expectations have now been realized. The most drastic price adjustments are undoubtedly over, and we can now step out with more confidence.

Better Than Last Year

"Our own house," stated this executive, "is doing more business right now that we were doing at this time last year. We are absolutely satisfied with the healthy state of the trade. The retailers who are buying from us are paying their bills even with better than usual promptness."

"What are the prospects for profitable grocery business in 1921?" Canadian Grocer asked.

Quick Turnover Essential

"There is no reason why each retail grocer should not make a successful year of it," he stated. "There are a few principles that, if observed, will make for success this year. First—attention must be concentrated not on 'dollars' but on 'tonnage.' The profit this year will not be made by the retailer who gets the largest margin of profit, but the merchant who maintains the fastest turnover. Each grocer, to be successful, must buy in the smallest possible quantities, and buy often. He must tie up as little cash in stock as he can, and still keep an attractive range —and make that capital everlastingly work.

Strive for Volume

"In my years of experience with the retail grocery business, and the wholesale business, I am thoroughly convinced that the secret of success for both is simply volume. Let each merchant do as we are doing, know what his actual costs and overhead expenses are, and strive for volume, and deal in percentages. After a certain point, in your volume, your profits are more nearly net. Keep the volume well over that margin.

Some Lines Will be Short

"I am thoroughly convinced that in many grocery lines there do not exist sufficient stocks to carry us through till next season. On canned tomatoes, for instance, which are selling freely now, and for which the demand is constant, when the peak of demand is reached in July and August, there will be found to be a shortage. The same is true of many varieties of preserved fruit in cans.

Just a Deferred Demand

"There is a certain demand for many of these foods. The pack is known, and there will be a shortage. The present state of stagnation in some lines is not because of over-production. Packers and canners have been playing very safe this last year. There is simply a deferred demand.

"Beans are low. Stocks throughout Canada are pretty well reduced to a minimum. When the trade makes a move to replenish depleted stocks, we are all due for a surprise. Beans cannot be brought all over Canada at a week's notice. No one is importing or storing now against our requirements. Some are quietly doing the necessary contracting now.

"If I decided now to buy any quantity of canned strawberries—not jam—I frankly don't know where to get them. California canned pears are too high, I think, but of the other varieties of Canadian and California canned fruit, there have been small stocks bought. The demand for canned vegetables, peas, corn, tomatoes, etc., will be real and large. Those who have stocks of them need feel no uneasiness. Those who have not will have need to do some skirmishing around."

Curtailing Easy-Going Credits

How One Wholesaler Compels His Customers to Quit Carrying Needless Loads, Working for the Ultimate Good of His Trade—Helpful Action at This Time

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A RECENT trade report reads: "The trade has absolutely no faith in the future of the markets on anything, and they are not trying to sell anything. They are all anxious to have just as little money on their books as they possibly can."

What a complete reversion from the feeling of a year ago! Then it was impossible to make merchants realize that readjustment must come, that recession was just around the corner, that merchandise in excess of current requirements was dangerous stuff to have about the shop. The trade bought until it was stung, giving the slightest, barely tolerant, attention to warnings.

What has struck me most forcibly has been the absence of helpful action on the part of some wholesalers. I do not say that many have not put cautionary counsel into tangible form. I have come across one particular instance in which a jobber of groceries has preached conservatism with great emphasis, and backed up his preaching with such curtailment of easy-going credits as has compelled his customers to quit carrying needless loads. In the face of what might be regarded as his plain self-interest, he worked for the ultimate good of his customers, beginning 'way back in the fall of 1919, by strongly counselling his friends to refrain from the purchase of futures and to buy light in all lines.

Unselfishness the Most Enlightened Self Interest

The first circular I saw issued by that jobber was called "One Man's Views." In it he set forth what he believed to be sound business foresight, assuming entire responsibility for what he wrote. The gist of it might be stated this way:

"I believe the peak of prices has been nearly reached and that more or less drastic declines are about due. Therefore, I advise you to refrain altogether from the purchase of futures; to buy only as you have actual, current need for goods; to buy only what you can pay for with discount deducted; to curtail your credits rigidly, insisting on prompt payment or closing accounts as you never have done in your life before. In this way you may pay a trifle more for some things, but you will sidestep the big load when declines come, and you will play safe! In other words, I am a jobber. It is my business to carry stocks for you. Let me perform my legitimate function. Let me earn my living by doing my share of the work of distribution."

Telling me about his experience in December, 1919, this man said: "I took a rather long chance, perhaps. I stood to lose considerable business. But evidently my reasoning appealed to many, because my boys are selling spot goods every week in volume never before experienced, and my customers are discounting their bills as they never did before."

The next important letter along this line of reasoning issued by the same jobber that has come to my attention I should like to reproduce entirely, it is so sound, but I shall print the essentials of it, as follows:

"The season for future buying is here. Shortly every manufacturer will be out with offerings with the purpose to sell as many goods as possible at an undreamed of price. We believed in 1918 the limit was reached. We were sure of it in 1919. But the prices for 1920 are so much higher that one wonders where it will all end. Are we not rushing with terrific speed towards disaster?

"When the people, who already are plainly reaching a saner state of mind, quit buying or buy sanely, the bubble will have been pricked and we will have come out of the clouds.

"A short time ago we merchants prided ourselves upon our keen ability to buy on the theory that people would pay any price. But will they? When will the relaxation caused by the war end? When will the Victory Bonds the people have been spending be gone? And what then?

"(In view of these plain conditions) may not a wholesale grocer confine himself to purchasing what he needs, selling to the retailer goods as the retailer needs them? Or is he to rush madly to the trade as in the past—as soon as future prices are named—to load that retailer with a year's supply for fear that if he does not his competitor will, at a time when one lies awake nights wondering what is going to happen?"

A Timely Storm Warning

Consider that this circular was issued last summer, before new prices had been named, and I believe its timeliness and honesty of purpose will appeal to you very strongly. But we can go further back, to April 12, for another sounding of timely storm warnings:

"Someone said that spot corn at $1.15 f.o.b. shipping point had all been cleaned up; but such is not the case. There is plenty. This is another indication that you are all right in not buying futures. 'Keep it up!' There never was and never will be a time when you can't purchase the goods you need, notwithstanding that every other man you meet tells you, 'if you don't buy now the car shortage is such that you won't get your goods, or freight rates will advance or some other calamity will happen—anything to frighten you into buying. I tell you the markets will slough to a lower level—buy what you need and buy often. Be careful."

Again on April 19: "You won't make a dollar, mind you, loading yourselves on futures. This is no speculative market and the time for loading up in the fall is past for a number of years. Let the other fellow carry the stock. Then you can pay your bills and be ready for the unexpected happening."

On May 3 we have this gem: "In such strenuous times when conditions are changing so that one can scarcely keep track of prices nor tell what a day may bring forth, that famous piece of poetry by Kipling, entitled 'If', comes to mind with great force. I am quoting the first paragraph with the thought that it may be of interest to the trade at this moment:

'If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when others doubt you,
And make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired of waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies;
Or being hated, don't give way to hating,
And yet not look too good nor talk too wise.'

"My friends, if a fellow could put into actual use the sentiment contained in that little verse, what a wonderful world we would have!"

And on May 16: "This is certainly a time when we should all sit steady and not rock the boat. . . . The times are critical and worthy of deep thought and slow action. Buy only what you need."

"On later dates: "Extreme caution and economy are advised. Buy what you need and collect your bills. This is no time for lax credits." "No wholesaler desires very much the trade of any merchant who does not pay his bills promptly. The wholesaler needs every dollar he can collect to pay his bills, and there

Eastern Ontario R.M.A. Convention

About Two Hundred Delegates Present—Sir Henry Drayton Addresses Delegates at Banquet —Strong Plea for Greater Organization by President Henry Watters of Ottawa. —Dominion Secretary E. M. Trowern Refers to the Commencement of the R. M. A. Movement 25 Years Ago.

By Special Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

UPWARDS of two hundred delegates attended the third annual convention of the Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada held at Victoria Hall, Brockville, on January 11th and 12th. Many important questions bearing on the retail trade were dealt with, including a discussion on the form of taxation likely to succeed the abolition of the luxury tax. The convention unanimously endorsed the proposal of the Dominion Board that whatever tax is decided upon it should be imposed either at the point of importation or manufacture and that it be absorbed in the cost of goods quoted to the retailer and so collected as all other revenue is. The convention endorsed daylight saving, condemned false advertising and took steps to prosecute those who violate this law and set in motion machinery to prevent manufacturers' sales in retail stores:

Address By Finance Minister

A feature of the convention was the address by the Minister of Finance, Sir Henry Drayton. Sir Henry courageously defended the luxury tax as a necessary measure to curb reckless extravagance and the purchase of luxuries and thanked the retail merchants of Canada for the inconvenience they had suffered in helping to lower the cost of living. Justifying the tax, Sir Henry pointed out that the index figure of commodity costs had dropped from 263 in May of 1920 to 234 in October. Having accomplished this, the tax was abolished. The Minister of Finance made a strong appeal for the discontinuance of unnecessary purchases in the United States so that the very unfavorable trade balance could be righted; and the convention subsequently went on record as favoring purchases more exclusively of Canadian or British goods.

The Opening Session

Mayor J. M. Dobbie, of Brockville, extended a hearty welcome to the delegates. In doing so, he referred to their growing strength as a factor in the business and political life of Canada and issued a timely warning that only by concerted, rather than independent action could they hope to accomplish their legitimate purposes.

Robert Craig, president of the Brockville Retail Merchants' Association, also extended a welcome and on behalf of the local Commercial Travellers' Association invited the attending delegates to make free use of their quarters while in the city.

Major Paterson, one of the oldest members of the R. M. A., in speaking of the work of the organization, expressed the opinion that the retail merchants of Canada as an organized body had a great future ahead of them. Only by a combined effort, by putting their shoulder to the wheel, could they get their just due. Their organization was only in its infancy. Members were gradually realizing its importance and were soliciting their brother merchants to become members, knowing that if every merchant in Canada were a member the association would wield a much greater power than it does. Every member would now admit that he was receiving much greater benefit through the association than was represented by the fee he paid.

Secretary E. M. Trowern, of the Dominion Board, said the R. M. A. had been started 25 years ago the coming November by five people. Today 87 people were giving their entire time to this work from the Atlantic to the Pacific. On a moment's notice they could now get in intimate touch with every province in the Dominion. Retail merchants were the largest tax payers of any class in Canada and, when properly organized, should be able to say to any provincial or federal government that a problem affecting their business should be settled either this or that way. Where would retailers have been today if they had not been able to say to the government that the luxury tax should be abolished? It had been abolished and other things detrimental to the retail trade must also be abolished.

President Watters' Address

President Henry Watters, of Ottawa, who presided throughout, addressed the convention briefly before it began its deliberations. The president said that the men they needed at the convention were not present, men who had made a success of their own business and did not feel the need of the association's assistance. Perhaps this might be said equally of men who had worked in the interests of the association for a quarter of a century. In the last analysis, each man must stand or fall by those qualities of head and heart with which he was endowed. All men, however, were not endowed with a high sense of rectitude and honor that they should have, and were not alive to spotting bad conditions of business or discovering obstacles in the way of successful merchandising. Members of the association were merchants who had discovered such obstacles and as thoughtful men were participating in the work of the organization.

Ontario President Speaks

Much more could be accomplished, said the president, if all merchants were members of the association. They could then be a greater factor in the molding of public opinion. Retail merchants should be the best organized body that could be had for the betterment of trade and trade conditions. He had no objections to Boards of Trade to look after local matters where there was no organized body of retail merchants. But he felt after many years of study that no body of men that does not represent in large numbers the activities of the retail merchants can accomplish those special objects which the retail merchants have in view. No one line of business could accomplish benefits for the whole retail trade; he had discovered this during the fight against the luxury tax, which was a problem for so many lines of trade. Their best interests as retail distributors could only be accomplished by such an organization as the Retail Merchants' Association covering the whole of Canada.

B. W. Ziemann, the Ontario president, referred to the great work which the association had to perform. As yet only a handful of the men in active business were organized. The real profiteers among merchants were those who were receiving all the benefits that had been worked out by the association but who were giving nothing or doing nothing to help its work and workers. It was not altogether their money that was needed but their influence on the commercial life of Canada if alive to the interests of the community at large. Men should be in business for the benefit of the service they can give to their fellow men, and so should do all they can to help their fellow men rather than give their whole time to the accumulating of a little money.

The report of the treasurer, T. W. Collins, showed a surplus of $610.03. Both the secretary's and treasurer's reports were adopted.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Wallaceburg, is taking up with the town council the matter of enforcing the early closing by-law, as they claim that several merchants are not carrying out the regulation.

Government Would Enlist Aid of Retailers; Canada's Minister of Finance Asks for the Same Support That was Tendered During War

Why Luxury Tax Was Imposed and Why It Was Taken Off Again Explained by Sir Henry Drayton in Address to Merchants of Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District in Convention at Brockville—Extended Thanks For Inconvenience They Were Put to in Helping to Lower the Cost of Living.

SIR Henry Drayton, Canada's Minister of Finance, did not hesitate to tell two hundred and fifty delegates to the Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District convention of retail merchants at a banquet in Brockville, Ont., on Tuesday, January 11, why he had put on the Luxury Tax, why he had taken it off, and what was the great remedy for the unfavorable trade balance against Canada and the disastrous exchange rate. Frankly, he told the assembled delegates that the Luxury Tax had been imposed to cut down useless extravagance and over-indulgence in luxuries; and as a justification of the tax he pointed out that the index figure for the cost of commodities in May of 1920 was 263 while in October it had dropped to 234. Sir Henry admitted the inconvenience to which the retail trade had been put in Canada, and proceeded to thank them on behalf of the Cabinet for suffering this inconvenience in the cause of lowering the cost of living.

Abolition of Luxury Tax

Refering to the unfavorable trade balance as between Canada and the United States, the Finance Minister again appealed to the retail merchants to help adjust this condition by discontinuing the purchase of unnecesary articles across the line. If goods could not be bought in Canada he urged that the money be spent in the Motherland, "for that which helps England helps Canada." The convention subsequently endorsed a resolution to this purpose.

The Minister of Finance, in his opening remarks, referred to the work of the tariff investigating board that had gone up and down the country, gathering all sorts of information with regard to business conditions the country over. After conducting this investigation, Sir Henry said, he felt that he had done the right thing in abolishing the Luxury Tax.

"We are a funny people" said Sir Henry, "but we are funny only because human nature is a funny and complex thing. I think, perhaps, that the Canadian people are the most sane of any people. After what Canada and Canadians have done during the Great War, we, perhaps, have the right to talk loud. Following the armistice, we began to talk about what should be done to cut down the cost of living. Such are the strange contradictions of human nature that, in spite of rising costs, we were all more or less happy, more than less, I think. Business was buoyant in the circle of ascending costs, wages were high. We grumbled in quiet tones but we were happy just the same.

All Buy on Rising Market

"Another strange contradiction of human nature is that we all buy on a rising market but on a dropping market we all stop buying and wait until it has altogether dropped before we buy anything. The index number of commodity costs in January of last year was 249.7 which was about the same as it was in 1918. In February it was 253.50; in March 257.50; in April 260.50 and in May 263.1. In May of 1920 it had reached this apex and it was time something was done and something was done. It was time that the people of Canada were made to understand that expensive and luxurious purchasing was all right so long as they were contributing not only to their own gratifications and desires but to the upkeep of the country as well. So we had the Luxury Tax. In October this index figure of commodity costs had dropped to 234 and you, gentlemen, particularly you merchants, know that the cost has dropped even lower since then. Luxurious and extravagant buying stopped, business was falling off, notwithstanding the falling off of prices, and the Luxury Tax was abolished.

"What can become of an economic situation on a basis unjustifiable and which cannot be supported on a basis of values or on what should be the common family budget? This question is more than national. If we have a stretching and multiplication of costs there is a grave danger to civilization itself, of the economic basis becoming absolutely in danger, if not altogether shattered."

Costs of Civilized Government

The Minister of Finance then went on to deal with the costs of civilized government in the different countries of the world. In comparison with pre-war days, the cost of government in Belgium had increased 993 per cent; in France 827 per cent.; in Australia, 61 per cent.; in the Motherland, 500 per cent; and in Canada 272 per cent. Dealing with neutrals, Sir Henry said that in Switzerland this cost had gone up 474 per cent; in Norway, 356 per cent; in Holland 207 per cent.; in Denmark 171 per cent.; and in Germany 1,488 per cent. Some people might say that this question of money values might be the amount of the paper inflation; but some of the countries affected, some of the neutrals who have more gold than they ever had in their lives before, were not affected by the gold standards but by the rise of commodity values in the world. If the weight of Canada's obligations could be contracted to represent pre-war values, the cost of government would have increased only about 54 per cent.

"The retail merchants of Canada" said Sir Henry, "have seen the costs coming down in this country, they have been working in that connection and in that direction against their own immediate interests, but not so in the long run. It would be a fine thing if we could get all costs of all countries down to this level. The costs in Canada have been largely brought down through your efforts and if I might go so far, I would like on behalf of the Cabinet and on behalf of the country to thank you for the inconvenience and trouble you have had to put up with."

GROCERS' SECTION OF R. M. A. IN OTTAWA A LIVE BODY

"I must say a word about our Grocers' section in Ottawa," says Secretary Campbell, in his annual report to the eastern Ontario and Ottawa District Retail Merchants' Association, at their annual convention last week. "This section now has more than one hundred and fifty members and meets semi-monthly. The Pure Food Show at the Central Canada Exhibition in September last, which was promoted and managed by the Grocers' section, was a world beater, and proved the outstanding feature of Ottawa's most successful fair.

A good example is worth following, and I am pleased to learn that the management of the Toronto exhibition will erect a new building on their grounds to house a similar show. We felicitate Toronto retailers upon their development and trust their Pure Food Show will be as good as ours. I do not think it can be better, for the Pure Food Show held in Ottawa cannot be beaten. This same section, our most wealthy section, also gave the banquet of the year."

Sir Henry went on to ask if the retail merchants might do something further toward helping the economic conditions in Canada. He said that the West was particularly sensitive about the question of apples and felt that they were paying too much for Canadian apples. A box of apples in Winnipeg, including heating and service on the railways, sold to the retailer for $2.73. The complainant in the case said that one box held 160 apples. At that rate, Jonathans would cost about 1.07 cents each, say, 1¾ cents. They sold to the consumer for 5 cents or even, in some cases, at 3 for 25 cents. "Something came in between that box of apples delivered in Winnipeg at 1¾ cents each and their selling price at 3 for 25 cents. You gentlemen know about that—I don't. The only first-hand information I have is that one thing complained about was that the duty on apples would add to the cost of those 3 apples for 25 cents about three-fifths of a cent because, taking the same figure, a 30 per cent. duty would work out less than one-third of a cent an apple."

Asks Help of Retailers.

Sir Henry thought it would be a splendid thing if he could further enlist the help of the retail merchants of Canada an enlistment, he pointed out, that would receive no more money for its service than the collection of the Luxury Tax did. Exports for the last fiscal year exceeded those of the previous year by two and a half millions, a thing not lightly to be regarded when exporters were faced with the great difficulty of discount on sterling. However, the interest in national buying was as great as in national selling.

"You cannot go on buying more than you sell unless you borrow enough to cover the margin of your extravagance," said the Finance Minister. "In a young country during its period of development, we must buy more than we sell and for many years we had an adverse trade balance. But at the present time, money cannot be borrowed in England without a loss of from 18 to 25 per cent. We could borrow in the United States, but if we borrowed in a country where the trade balance is against us, we merely face a further declination of currency and add to the load which we already carry. While we are ahead in exports by two and a half millions, we are in quite the reverse position with regard to buying. The net purchases during the last eight months have increased 281 millions; in other words, we purchased out of Canada 44 per cent. more than we did a year ago. There was a sad increase in our unfavorable trade balance with the United States of some 230 millions. As retail merchants, you can do much to correct these figures; you can do much educational work."

Sir Henry then went on to point to some extravagances in fruits and vegetables purchased in the United States by Canada, one of the best fruit and vegetable growing countries in the world. Agricultural and vegetable products, mainly food, increased by 23 millions over the last year, or 23 per cent.

increase. Were not a lot of these things entirely unnecessary? In 1918, Canada imported three millions worth of fresh vegetables; $733,000 worth of tomatoes; $766,000 worth of onions, and $12,000,000 worth of other vegetables. Last year Canada imported $14,000,000 worth of fresh fruit and this is one of the best fruit growing countries in the world. In textiles the increase in eight months was some 66 per cent. over the previous year; in hats and caps alone, it amounted to $1,240,000.

The Depreciated Dollar

"Gentlemen, do you like the depreciated dollar," asked the Finance Minister. "If you do, just let us go on as we are doing. If you want to see the Canadian dollar righted, you must see to it that instead of seeing it attenuated across the line, it shall stay at home and make another Canadian dollar. If you cannot make or buy your goods here, go to the London market and buy there, for anything that helps England helps Canada and the Empire. This matter of exchange is costing us millions of dollars.

"As we go on, these questions are getting more and more questions of the people. It is only the people who can put things right and put a big thing through; it is not the government. It would have been impossible for Canada to have carried on the war had it not been the nearest to the heart of every Canadian home. Financing is not a thing for the government to do; during the war and now it is a thing of the people, for the people and by the people. In order that these things may be done Canada requires and demands the same support and enthusiasm of the war years. The work and burden of the war strain is past, but the people must see that Canada goes on."

Believes in Organization

The Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue, Hon. R. W. Wigmore, spoke for a few minutes. He said that the abolition of the Luxury Tax was largely due to the representations that had been made to the government through the offices of the Retail Merchants' Association. He was a great believer in organization. He advised the retail merchants to keep in close touch with the government with regard to questions that interested them. They should come to the government with a concrete proposition when they would receive a respectful hearing and their views would receive careful consideration.

Henry W. Watters, of the Standard Drug Company of Ottawa, who presided at the banquet, took occasion in the first place to advise all the ladies of Brockville to do their trading at home. By doing so they help their husbands, sons and brothers to discharge their proper duties as citizens to their municipality and not move to other places. It was better to do this, he said, than to spend their money in Ottawa, Toronto or Montreal.

Speaking of the form of taxation that would probably succeed the Luxury Tax, Mr. Watters pointed out very emphatically that the retail merchants were not averse to paying their share of the war debt and doing their share of the work. But until Canadians were courageous enough to accept a measure of direct taxation, he said that retail merchants favored a system of taxation which was absorbed at the source of import or manufacture. "We want the business of this country conducted in the most convenient, comfortable and satisfactory way for both the retailer and the customer," said Mr. Watters.

A. C. Hardy, of Brockville, in proposing the toast to the government of Canada created a good deal of amusement when he said: "It gives me great pleasure to propose a toast to the government of Canada for, God knows, we need it."

Many Important Matters Covered by Retailers in Resolutions Passed at Convention of Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District

That it is the opinion of the meeting that any proposal that may be made to place a tax on the sales of the retail merchants would be very injurious to us as a class and we recommend that vigorous opposition be made through the Dominion Boards.

Buying in the Empire

This meeting desires to further a recommendation to the Provincial Board and on to the Dominion Board urging our membership to buy as many Canadian or British goods at the present time to conserve our capital and help exchange rates.

Whereas the attention of this association has been called to the ever-increasing practice of certain manufacturers conducting sales in retail stores, and inasmuch as most of these houses sell to the retail trade, be it resolved that any member knowing of those conditions report the same to the district secretary with a view to having the Canadian Manufacturers' Association take action thereon and to having the same immediately discontinued.

Selling Direct

That we, as retail merchants, protest as unfair, the practice of some manufacturers and wholesalers in selling direct to the consumers while soliciting the business of retail merchants, and that we place ourselves on record as of the opinion that such a practice is opposed to our interests, and that we will favor any comprehensive plan of action that may be decided upon by our executive as a means of putting an end to this unbusinesslike custom.

Moved by Mr. Taber, Carleton Place; seconded by Geo. Wright, Brockville.

Collection of Small Debts

That this district convention place itself on record as approving the proposed action of the Ontario Provincial Board to apply to the Provincial Government for an amendment to the Division Court Act, whereby small debts can be collected more cheaply than under the existing system, and, further,

That this district convention pledges itself to do all in its power to assist in the procuring of such an amendment.

Moved by D. Bell, Ottawa; seconded by B. T. Crabtree, Ottawa.

Trading Stamps

Whereas this association has already taken the ground that vigorous action should be incepted against all violators of the Trading Stamp Act or False Advertising Act, or any other similar Act, secured through the efforts of this association for the protection of the retail trade, and whereas we believe all such prosecutions should be undertaken by the Dominion Board, under the direction of special committees appointed by the Executive of the Provincial Board, therefore, we recommend the Dominion Board to request the Dominion Government to have an official appointed whose duty it shall be to prosecute persons who falsely advertise any article, similar to the inspector appointed to prosecute persons who violate the gold and silver marking act.

Moved by B. G. Crabtree, Ottawa; seconded by A. E. Kelly, Ottawa.

Workmen's Compensation Act

Whereas it has been reported that it is the purpose of the Provincial Government of Ontario to bring the retail trade under the scope of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and,

Whereas such an action would impose an unnecessary burden upon retail merchants, therefore, it is resolved that we ask the executive officers of the Ontario Provincial Board of our association to oppose any such attempt upon the part of the Provincial Government of Ontario.

Moved by D. Bell, Ottawa; seconded by T. Bowman, Ottawa.

Discrimination in Price

Whereas legitimate retail merchants are the largest buyers of certain lines of trade marked goods and as such contribute most largely to the profit of manufacturers, and,

Whereas some manufacturers give special prices to dealers who make it a practice to advertise certain lines of goods at a lower price than that at which said goods can be purchased by the legitimate retail trade,

Therefore, we place ourselves on record as opposed to such a practice on the part of manufacturers, and that we accordingly call upon them to discontinue such practice or as an alternative to adopt the price contract or re-selling plan, whereby unscrupulous price-cutters cannot use staple lines for the purpose of deceiving the public.

Moved by A. C. Kennedy, Ottawa; seconded by Geo. Stoate, Ottawa.

Re False Advertising

Whereas the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada has secured legislation to prohibit false advertising of goods, and whereas this district convention of the Retail Merchants' Association is strongly in favor of such legislation,

That the members of this district be requested to forward to the district secretary, or to the secretary of the Ontario Provincial Board of this association, any advertising matter in which they find goods misrepresented, and further,

That as in cases of prosecution for violation of the False Advertising Act, no provision is made for accepting the written report of the analyst who may be called upon to analyse such goods, but that official must appear in court personally and give evidence, we recommend the executive to take action which will permit the written sworn statement of the analyst to be accepted as evidence in court.

Moved by E. K. Tallman, Merrickville; seconded by W. W. Adams, Newbury.

Re Business Tax

Whereas for the purposes of the Business Tax, the premises, lands and buildings occupied by retail merchants are now assessed at a valuation of twenty-five per cent., and,

Whereas this convention is of the opinion that the valuation at present in force is excessive, be it resolved that we endorse and approve the action of the Provincial Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, in endeavouring to have the valuation reduced to ten per cent. and we pledge ourselves to give every assistance to the executive of the Provincial Board in this undertaking.

Moved by T. Bowman, Ottawa; seconded by Mr. McArthur.

Re Welfare Fund

Whereas the Dominion Board of this association, at its last convention in the city of Vancouver, had under careful consideration the matter of extension and development of the work of this association, and,

Whereas for that purpose it was deemed advisable to secure a special fund of $100,000, to be known as the "Special Welfare and Organization Fund," be it therefore resolved that this district convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District, do heartily approve this proposal and that we officially commend the fund to the kind consideration and support of our members.

Moved by Mr. Patterson, Brockville; seconded by Mr. Collins.

Credit Reporting

Whereas our association has inaugurated a Credit Report Department which has already been found of great service to our members, it is resolved that this convention endorse the Credit Reporting Department of our association and strongly urge our members to make all possible use of it.

Moved by Mr. Grace; seconded by T. Bowman, Ottawa.

Re Express Rates

That in view of the fact that the members of our association residing in districts outside of the zones in which the express companies make delivery of parcels are handicapped by such lack of facilities, it is resolved that the incoming executive be requested to take this matter up and so deal with it as to secure for those members an improvement in present conditions.

Moved by Mr. McArthur; seconded by Mr. Abdullah.

Daylight Saving

Whereas resolutions have been adopted at the conventions of the Provincial Boards of our association, favouring the adoption of a daylight saving measure, it is resolved that this convention is of the opinion that any daylight saving measure, to be properly effective and avoid confusion, should be Dominion-wide and, further,

That the executive officers of this district be requested to submit a copy of this resolution to the Dominion Board for submission to the Right Honourable Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister of Canada, and the members of the Dominion Government, with the suggestion that if such Dominion measure is passed, it come into effect on April first and continue until September fifteenth, in each year.

Moved by Mr. Wright; seconded by D. Bell, Ottawa.

Re Sale "2½ Per Cent."

That this meeting, in convention assembled, approve of the action of the Ontario Provincial Board in opposing the recent Order-in-Council passed by the Ontario Legislature, which provided that the sale of all 2 1-2 per cent. beverages be confined to standard hotels, and, inasmuch as this product is sold by a number of sections of our association, be it resolved that the Ontario Provincial Board be further requested to prevent such legislation being enacted at the forthcoming session of the legislature.

Moved by Mr. Kelly; seconded by Mr. Halpenny.

Re Association Aims

That whereas the work of this association is of great benefit to the retail trade and should be generally known to the public, therefore:

Resolved that the executive of this district be authorized to take such action as they may deem wise to make our association aims and work generally known to the people in order that influence may be brought to bear upon retail merchants not already members of our association that they may come in with us and co-operate in procuring those trade benefits in which they are all willing to share.

Moved by Mr. Hawkins, Smiths Falls; seconded by T. Bowman, Ottawa.

It was the opinion of most of those who took part in the conference that the crisis had passed and, at least so far as the maritime provinces were concerned, there was an indication that the outlook was brighter than it had been for some time.

The Nova Scotian members were the guests of the New Brunswick branch at luncheon and dinner, served during the intervals between the sessions of the conference. The visitors included Michael Dwyer, president; G. G. Bauld, vice-president; R. M. Symons, J. M. Wilson, L. K. Paysant, M. J. Ritchie and E. A. Saunders. A. P. Mr. Armstrong took the stranger in and gave him a cup of tea, afterwards proceeding into the store to get the bread, leaving the money lying on the table. He handed the bread to the visitor, who immediately departed. He had gone before Mr. Armstrong noticed his loss.

It is though that while Mr. Armstrong was getting the bread from the store, the man in the kitchen handed the money to an accomplice outside, so that had Mr. Armstrong noticed his loss as soon as he entered the room, the money could not have been found.

U.S. KELLOGG CASE DECIDED

Supreme Court of Michigan Gives Judgment on Right to Use Family Name in Business

Many in the trade in Canada have been following the litigation between Dr. John H. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, and his brother, Wm. K. Kellogg, of the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Company, also of Battle Creek, Mich., as to which had the right to the use of the trade-mark "Kellogg" in the United States. A decision has finally been arrived at by the Supreme Court of Michigan State. This case has been before the courts there since 1908.

The court presented its judgment as follows:—

"The following are the facts and rules of law upon which the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Company relied, and which were sustained by the court:—

"First Fact: Appellee Corn Flake Co. first adopted, advertised and registered the trade-mark 'Kellogg's'.'

"First Rule of Law: The trade-mark or trade-name is the property of those who made it valuable, and its use by others than those who earned a reputation thereunder would be a fraud upon the public.

"Second Fact: Dr. Kellogg participated in, and made large profits and capital returns from the adoption, commercialization and wide advertising of the trade-mark 'Kellogg's' by appellee Corn Flake Co.

"Second Rule of Law: One who participates in and profits by the adoption of a trade-mark is estopped to injure or appropriate it.

"Third Fact: Appellee Corn Flake Co. never at any time, by the 1911 contract, or otherwise, transferred to Dr. Kellogg or his company any business or any right to use, infringe or trail on its registered trade-mark 'Kellogg's,' and appellants do not claim that any such right was ever granted to or settled upon them.

"Third Rule of Law: A trade-mark cannot exist as an extrinsic thing and cannot be licensed apart from the business in which it is used. Appellee Corn Flake Co., even if it had desired to do so, could not have transferred, granted or otherwise alienated any right of Dr. Kellogg to defraud and deceive the public by trailing spurious products on its registered trade-mark, and Dr. Kellogg had no such right as an extrinsic thing, and could grant no such right to the Kellogg Food Company.

"Fourth Fact: Appellants are trailing their Kellogg's Bran and other Kellogg's products on the trade-mark, advertising, good-will, trade guarantees, selling helps, name and reputation of appellee Corn Flake Co. by deceiving and confusing the trade and public.

"Fourth Rule of Law: Equity will not permit a rival manufacturer to trail his different products on the established trade-mark and reputation of another."

A "WAGGON JOBBER" FOR TORONTO

In many of the larger cities in the United States there are what are known as "waggon jobbers" selling the retail trade. Canadian Grocer understands that there is a prospect of one of these starting in Toronto. "The waggon jobber" usually uses a motor car and represents one or more firms. He calls on the retail trade each week and supplies them with just sufficient quantity of the products of the firms he represents to keep them going for the one week.

OTTAWA GROCERS MUST ELECT NEW REPRESENTATIVE

SOLD ADULTERATED COFFEE IN GOOD FAITH

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 11.—Magistrate Askwith had before him the case of Frank Steinburg, Nicholas Street, a grocer charged with selling adulterated coffee. As he was able to prove to the satisfaction of the magistrate that he had bought it as pure and sold it in good faith, the case was adjourned for two weeks so that the wholesaler can be summoned to hear what he has to say. Magistrate Askwith ruled that a retailer buying what he believed to be pure could not be held guilty of adulteration according to the interpretation he placed upon the Food and Drugs Act.

Alberta Retailers Now in Annual Convention

Calgary, Jan. 19 (Special).—The Alberta branch of the Retail Merchants' Association is holding its annual meeting here this week. Following the registration and receiving of delegates, an address of welcome was given, after which the president, secretary and treasurer made their annual reports.

James Kellas, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, in a message sent out to the members, stated that the government had been asked to concede the right to merchants to take their stock at the end of their year at the lower price if the commodities are declining in price, and they have agreed to do this. This is, that retail merchants should not have to pay taxation on their losses as a result of the slump in prices. For instance, if a merchant has something that cost $60, and when repurchasing it will cost $40, the retailer must take stock at the lower price. This will protect the merchant against taxation on losses.

A discussion on what should be substituted for the luxury tax will take place at this convention. An increase in the sales tax or a bulk sales tax are being suggested. Many other matters of interest to the retail trade are also being discussed.

OPEN RETAIL STORES TO SELL STOLEN GOODS

Chicago, Jan. — Business became so good here for a gang of grocery thieves who stole on a wholesale scale from delivery trucks that they had to open several retail stores to dispose of their plunder more readily, police declared in announcing that they have accounted for thefts of meats, butter, tea and other groceries valued at $150,000, with the arrest of seven members of the gang. They said three markets were recently opened by the thieves.

Tees and Persse Salesmen Meet in Annual Convention

Winnipeg, Jan. 15.—The annual convention of the managers and salesmen of Tees & Persse, Limited, and their associate house, Tees & Persse of Alberta, Limited, was held in the King George Hotel, Saskatoon, and was considered the best held by this firm of manufacturers' agents and grocery brokers.

Those attending were:—E. H. Telfer, Calgary; L. W. Speer, Calgary; H. T. Graham, Edmonton; V. B. Persse, Edmonton; J. A. Cheyne, Moose Jaw; Wm. Lea, Regina; J. S. Macarthur, Saskatoon; Wm. Wallace, Brandon; H. H. Kidd, Fort William; M. Wood, Winnipeg; G. E. Macdonald, Winnipeg; R. G. Persse, Winnipeg.

In his opening address the chairman, R. G. Persse, dealt with present day markets, both selling and buying, and the resulting general discussion clearly indicated a ready adaptability to the changed conditions.

A survey of the closing year's work was followed by the developing of plans for future business. The slogan for 1921 adopted by the convention is "It can be done."

A very pleasing feature of the closing ceremony of the convention was a presentation to R. G. Persse of a handsome silver cigarette box. Mr. Telfer, of Calgary, in making the presentation emphasized the goodwill existing between the firm and its staff, as also between the members of the staff themselves, and it was the unanimous expression that the getting together in annual convention had done much to foster that spirit of co-operation which was an outstanding feature in the firm's organization.

CALGARY MERCHANTS PROVIDE A FINE REST ROOM FOR SHOPPERS

Calgary, Jan.—The rest room for rural shoppers is now ready for the use of the public. The retail merchants' bureau of the board of trade intends to see that it is properly advertised, and at a meeting of the bureau it was decided to notify all secretaries of the U.F.A.'s and U.F.W.A.'s within a radius of one hundred miles of the city of the convenience that will be furnished shoppers to the city. In addition to this there will be notices posted in all post offices within the same radius, signs will be placed in conspicuous parts of the city and it is probable that notices will appear in all country papers to that effect.

The retail merchants are delighted with the excellent arrangements which have been made at the rooms on Seventh Avenue opposite the city hall and feel that this will be a decided acquisition to the city and mean a great deal of advertising as to the enterprise of the merchants.

NELSON MANAGER OF NORTH-WEST BISCUIT CO. GOES TO WINNIPEG

Harry Ramsbottom, manager of the Nelson, B. C., branch of the North-West Biscuit Co., has been transferred to Winnipeg, where he has taken over the management of a new sales branch of the company now being opened in that city. Mr. Ramsbottom took charge of the Nelson agency when it was first opened some three or four months ago. His removal to Winnipeg represents a promotion. The Nelson agency will be carried on by V. Hodgson and G. Houston, both of whom have been with the company in this city for some time. He was given a banquet by a number of his Nelson friends before his departure.

MUNICIPALLY CONTROLLED STORES MAY BE THE ORDER IN ALBERTA

Edmonton, Alta., Jan.—Retail shops all over Alberta are likely to be taken from under the provisions of the Factory Act and put under the control of the municipal and civic bodies. This grew out of a request, submitted to the government by a delegation from the Retail Merchants' Association, to the effect that a shops act be passed for the special regulation of retail trade in cities, towns and villages.

The fixing of opening and closing hours and weekly half holidays was one of the chief reasons why a shops act was desired, it was said by the delegation.

"COLUMNS" OF HELP IN CANADIAN GROCER EVERY WEEK

Canadian Grocer is in receipt of the following letter from Wm. Suggitt, of Valentia, Ont., who recently sold his business to R. D. Spence & Son:—

Gentlemen:—

"When my time is expired, kindly stop my paper, as I am retiring from business, and do not need it any longer. I was in business for thirty-eight years and seven months. We have seen many changes in that time. When I first started in business, I only paid seven and eight cents for eggs, and nine cents for butter. We had no such papers then as the Canadian Grocer. We had no help of any kind. I think every grocer should take the Canadian Grocer. There are columns of help in it every week. No man who takes it but receives much help therefrom. Wishing you continued success."

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE markets generally are steady. Some reductions are made but these are slight and are more in the nature of readjustments to the lower price basis upon goods that are arriving having been purchased when the markets had declined. The primary markets for some lines show a firm tone. Business in wholesale and retail circles continues to show improvement.

MONTREAL—There has been through the week much better offerings of live hogs on the market with a smaller demand from the packers. This has resulted in a weaker market with slightly lower prices being quoted. The prices quoted on smoked and cured meats are steady and unchanged. The lard market is quiet with only a small demand for supplies, which, in view of the hog market has resulted in easier prices being quoted and a weaker market for shortening. The egg market is steadier with varying prices being quoted. The butter market is much stronger with an improved export demand and some higher prices quoted on the best grades of butter and cheese. The sugar market shows still more strength this week in view of the strength of the raw market. The refiners are standing together in their quotations. There is no change in the quotations on molasses, but corn syrups are all reduced one half cent per pound. The market for rolled oats is firmer but there is considerable price cutting among the trade which has resulted in lower prices being quoted in some cases. Laundry and culinary starches are all reduced one half cent per pound. The reports from the London tea market show new strength to the better grades of tea, and this is reflected in the local market. Laundry soaps are all advanced twenty-five cents per case this week, but soap chips are reduced one half cent per pound. In view of the shortage of supplies of dried fruits and nuts on the market in consequence of the big Christmas demand, these markets are very strong with an active demand. New supplies that are expected are nearly all booked for distribution before they arrive. Canadian apples have been in such a demand for export trade that higher prices are quoted this week, particularly McIntosh Reds, and there is a likelihood that they will be very scarce on this market. Oranges are firm in price with a good supply. Potatoes are a little cheaper this week and the supply is better than was expected some time ago.

TORONTO—The improved condition of business in wholesale circles that has been manifest since the opening of the new year, is still in evidence. The markets continue to show signs of stabilizing, in fact some lines as tea, coffee, shelled nuts and canned vegetables show considerable strength and there are indications that these lines of commodities will be advanced in price before the first quarter of the year is past. Refined sugar is steady and quotations generally are on an equal basis. Raw sugars are holding firm under a fairly active buying movement. It is estimated that the new Cuban crop of sugar will be 3,993,142 tons, although the delay in harvesting the crop caused by unfavorable weather conditions make it impossible at present to give an accurate estimate of what the final outturn will be. A slight reduction is announced on corn syrups and starches, also some brands of soap chips, candles, pork and beans, quick puddings, and prepared icings. Cereals generally are steady but in some quarters rolled oats are offered at a lower price. This reduction on rolled oats, however, is more in the nature of competition amongst wholesalers than of the actual market value, as millers' quotations are holding fairly steady. Split peas and cracked wheat are shaded about one quarter cent per pound. Rice in primary markets is steady but quotations on spot are being readjusted as new shipments arrive that have been purchased on the lower price basis. New prices on prunes are expected to be named by the association about the end of the month; these prices will likely be lower than present. Raisins continue strong with supplies practically all out of first hands. Currants are weak but quotations on spot are unchanged. Beans show an active demand at the present low prices. Potatoes, onions and other Canadian vegetables are dull under a small demand, while California vegetables are moving freely at slightly higher prices.

The feature of the produce markets is the decidedly firm tone on butter and cheese. Stocks held in Montreal and Ontario are rapidly becoming exhausted, with the result that prices have moved upward. Eggs are holding firm and storage supplies are practically cleaned up. New laids are not yet arriving in sufficient quantities to greatly affect the market.

WINNIPEG—Business has been reported steady during the weak. Granulated sugar is unchanged but there are indications that higher prices will prevail in the near future. Corn syrups declined 25 cents per case on 2s, and 30 cents per case on the other sizes. Laundry starch declined ½ to ¾ of a cent. Cereals remain unchanged. Shelled walnuts and almonds are fairly steady. Canned goods show no change. Reports from the primary coffee market state that coffee is much firmer. Spice market has also shown a slightly firmer tone. The rice market is reported much firmer, due largely to the report that the California rice crop has been badly damaged.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—A much firmer tone to sugar features the market this week. The raw market has gained strength, which is quickly reflected on the market for refined sugar. The sugar market has come to the point where it is very sensitive to the influences of the raw market, and once again the refiners in Canada are standing together. There is some price cutting among the wholesalers on sugar. The molasses market remains steady but there is a reduction of one half cent per pound on corn syrups with a corresponding reduction on the cases of corn syrup in cans. Although the market for rolled oats is reported by manufacturers to be firmer, the price cutting going on among the trade has brought the price down in some cases as low as $3.50 per bag, but the ruling price appears to be $3.65. Laundry and culinary starches are all reduced one half cent per pound, and there is a big reduction on the price of malt breakfast food. The better grades of tea are stronger in view of the strength of the London market. Laundry soaps were reduced in price last week but have been advanced twenty-five cents a case this week. Soap chips are one half cent per pound lower this week. The spice market is quiet and unchanged. There is a good movement in canned goods as a result of the lower prices given last week.

More Strength to Sugar

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The raw sugar market shows more strength and the refined market is correspondingly stronger at the $10.50 basis. All the refiners are holding firm at this price but some of the wholesalers are cutting the price to the retailer, in some cases as low as ten dollars per cwt.

This reduction amounts to one half cent per pound on the barrel and half barrel lots. The reduction is made on account of slightly lower costs of raw materials.

Cereal Market Stronger

Montreal.

CEREALS.—The cereal market appears to be a little stronger this week, although there is a good deal of cutting going on among the wholesale trade. Rolled oats 90's are selling generally at $3.65 but some prices are quoted as low as $3.50, while other quotations go as high as $4. Manufacturers report rolled oats to be firmer this week but prices through competition for the business have gradually come down until the ruling price is about $3.65 per 90-pound bag. There is a big reduction this week on malt breakfast food, 36 packages to a case, which is now quoted at $9.50 per case. Other package goods remain firm in price.

Canned Goods Move Freely

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—There is no change in canned goods following the big reduction in prices made by Montreal wholesalers last week. The result has been some stimulation to trade in canned goods. Retail merchants are endeavoring to clean up the stocks of canned goods on hand so as to be in the market to buy at the lower prices. These reductions were made by the wholesalers alone and were not prompted by reductions on the part of the canners.

Soap Chips Lower

Montreal.

SOAP.—One week ago some of the local wholesalers reduced the price of soap to $8 per case. This week the quotations have come back again and 25 cents a case is added to the price, making all standard lines of soap $8.25 per case. Soap chips are reduced this week 1 cent per pound, being quoted at 19½ cents.

Dried Fruits Stronger

Montreal.

DRIED FRUIT.—Dealers for some time have been buying dried fruits in only sufficient quantities to meet immediate demands. The Christmas trade cleaned up most of these supplies and as a result now that there is an increased demand there are practically no stocks to requirements. This has resulted in a much stronger market for imported dried fruits. Orders are being booked for supplies which are in transit. Dates are very firm but figs have a little easier tendency, which is only temporary. The stronger sterling exchange has added strength to all imported lines. Smyrna sultana raisins and currants are particularly strong, according to cable reports.

Montreal.

NUTS.—As a result of the big Christmas demand for nuts the stocks on hand were well cleaned up and now that there is a demand to replenish supplies, there is very little to be had. The result is a very firm tendency to the nut market with stronger prices on walnuts, almonds and peanuts.

Higher Prices on Apples

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The orange market remains firm this week with ample supplies. Grapefruit are plentiful with slightly lower prices quoted on California fruit, which are quoted at from $7 to $7.50 per case. Imported grapes are very dear this year and some grapes are selling retail at as high as $1 per lb. The heavy shipments of apples abroad have caused a big jump in the prices of McIntosh Reds, which are now quoted at from ten to fifteen dollars per barrel, and it is predicted that they will soon be off this market.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—Refined sugar is holding steady at unchanged prices, quotations by wholesalers are generally on an equal basis, but there are some who quote a shade below list prices. Corn syrups have been reduced 25 to 30 cents per case. Laundry and culinary starches are slightly lower. There is a spread of 30 cents per bag on rolled oats; some wholesalers have further reduced their prices but there are others who are holding prices more in line with millers' quotations. Cracked wheat, split peas and rye flour show slight reductions. Canned vegetables generally hold at list prices, and the market is considered more on a stabilized basis. Prunes are weak with an indication for lower prices by the end of the month. Shelled walnuts and almonds have a firmer tone. The tea market is holding firm on all grades. Package rice quotations are reduced. Beans are unchanged but a good movement is noted. Canadian vegetables are plentiful and the market dull. Southern vegetables are moving freely. The first shipment of bitter oranges is due to arrive on this market about the end of the month. Flour is firm while shorts and middlings are lower.

Sugar Market Holds Steady

Toronto.

SUGAR. — Refined sugar is holding steady at $10.71 although there are some wholesalers offering at a shade lower. There are indications that sugar has reached a stabilized basis as some of the refiners are adhering strictly to their sales basis and are not selling sugar on the consignment plan as hithertofore. The raw market continues with a firm tone and prices are holding around 4½ cents C. & F. Cuban basis. On the progress of the new Cuban crop Willet & Gray in their weekly Sugar Journal say: "The recount of cane existing in Cuba shows a possible crop of 3,993,142 tons but the delay in starting grinding coupled with uncertainty as to weather conditions, throughout the crop, unfavorable until now, poor incentive of prices and unsettled financial conditions, make it impossible to estimate at present what the final outurn of the present crop will be."

Shelled Walnuts Lower

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—The situation on the shelled walnut market is that prices are somewhat easier, due entirely to the fact that the demand has fallen off owing to usual reaction after the festive season. Shelled almonds are also easier. Stocks held are very light but owing to the uncertainty no heavy purchases are being made. No. 1 Spanish shelled peanuts have been quoted as low as 5½ cents Virginia. It is considered that the bottom has been reached in the peanut market. Shelled brazils are now cheaper although the prices are still high in comparison with other lines.

CURTAILING EASY CREDITS

is no place for him to get the money except from customers to whom he sells goods. So pay your bills; don't ask for a stand off. A man who is slow pays more for his goods." On August 2: "Circulars are coming marked 'Revised prices on future goods.' These show a decline on opening prices, and we think there will be a good many more of these declines before delivery of goods." "Make up your minds to one thing, and that is a lower scale of values all along the line."

There is any quantity of "human interest" scattered through this man's circular letters—little things that show the man to us just as a plain human, who is variable, notional, hasty and slow, kindly and impatient, hard to get on with at times and loveable at others— just like all the rest of us. I'd like to quote further, but have not the space, and besides, we must get to the lesson of all this stuff. I may use some of it later on, but what of its present purpose?

Every Item of Advice a Permanent Axiom

If in reading thus far you have felt inclined to think: "O, well, that is old stuff now. We know the conditions as they are—tell us something we don't know!" you are missing the main point.

For the important lesson here is that everything this man says by way of special caution in present conditions is applicable to every day in every year by every merchant everywhere.

It is good business to watch credits now, but not more so than at any other time. In fact, perhaps the most important danger about the retail credit business is that merchants do not understand its function and its proper limitations. When you sell goods, you set certain prices on them. Those prices are intended to cover your cost, the cost of what service you render, and a profit on both the goods and the service, and you have some idea, though generally it is vague, of the limits of the service.

But when it comes to giving credit, you seem to have no idea of its limits. The customer is very apt to feel that, so long as she is "good for" the amount, it does not much matter when she pays. And you, though you have the daily pressure of the jobber and the bank applied to you to pay up every obligation within very definite limits, fall for this idea of the customer.

Now, aside from the fact that few customers are "good for" much of anything, strictly speaking, even the best of them are only good by courtesy for very limited amounts for a very short time, and all retail credit must be based on the extension of credit for time exactly set and agreed upon when the account is opened. That time is the limit of your agreed service. When it has elapsed, it is up to you to get the money—in full—or close the account. No merchant has anybody but himself to blame if he is afflicted with the "creeping balance" disease; and there is no possible excuse for having it.

If no payment is made, or if partial payment is tendered when a bill falls due, the only correct course is to take it and stop the account. Take your loss while it is small, if it must be taken. Take chances on collecting eight dollars rather than twenty-eight.

As for keeping light stocks—surely we know better now. But will we forget again very soon? Probably. Then the ones who forget will suffer as they are suffering now. The few who remember will prosper. Light stocks are good business any time!

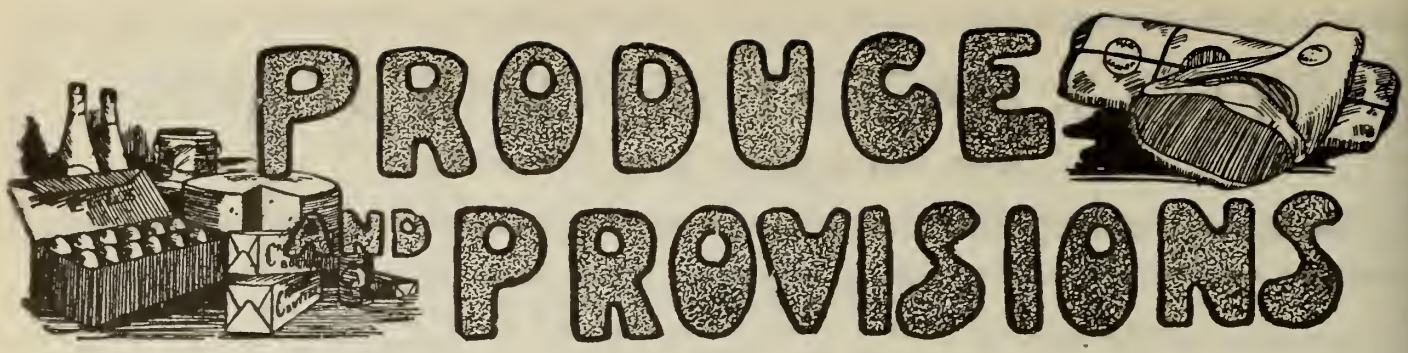
British Columbia

FROM VANCOUVER, BY WIRE.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 19—Flour had advanced 20 cents, now quoted $11.90. Jams are selling around $13.00 to $14.00 per case. The packs of jams put up by all the coast packers are short. The demand has been very light, as British Columbia consumers put up more fruit and jam than any year hitherto—as evidenced by the number of cars of jars sold, and the way they have been cleaned up. The jams are of splendid quality and will undoubtedly sell freely later in the spring when the housewives' supplies of "home preserved" have been depleted. Local marmalade opened up at $10 per case of 4s. Currants arriving will sell at higher figures than prevailed during the Christmas trading. Candies and nuts were well cleaned up this year. The jobbers are carrying over probably less than any other year in their history. Salt is selling freely. The Vancouver jobbers have not added increased freight rates to their stocks nor have they added a recent advance of 35 cents announced by the refiners. Tobaccos are showing about a 15 per cent. decline.

STATISTICS ON FLOUR MILLING INDUSTRY

Ottawa, Jan. — A preliminary report on the flour milling industry in Canada, issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, for the calendar year 1919, covers the operations of 1,255 individual plants. The total capital invested in the industry in the Dominion was $76,411,423. The number of employes was 6,960 male and 441 female, who were paid a total salary of $8,083,270. The total fuel cost for operation was $753,396, of which $492,151 was of Canadian origin and $261,245 foreign. The total daily capacity per 24 hours for all mills was stated to be 141,288 barrels. The total cost of materials was $229,827,851 and the value of products $262,763,392. Wheat flour, with a selling value at the mill of $185,982,307, was the chief product of the mills.



Stocks of Cheap Salmon are Smaller

Sockeye Has Passed Out of First Hands—General Manager of Large Packing Concern in British Columbia Cannot See How Lower Prices are Likely—Pre-war Price Talk is Dangerous.

By Special Correspondence to CANADIAN GROCER

"THE 1920 pack of salmon, the biggest bulk of which is consumed during the season of 1921, was below the 1919 pack. The high grade fish, sockeyes, have passed out of first hands entirely and beyond some few small lots, not amounting to more than two or three cars, it is doubtful if it is possible to get any more before the new pack comes in, in July and August," stated the general manager of a British Columbia packing company in an interview with Canadian Grocer. "There is a fair stock of pinks and chums on hand, which are being offered wholesale at considerably less than cost. The stock of the cheap and medium grades of fish on hand is not as big as last season, or the preceding season at this time, and with anything like a demand would disappear very rapidly.

Lower Prices Unlikely

"I do not see how prices for 1921 can go any lower than they are to-day. They are being offered to the wholesalers by the producers at a price that they cannot anywhere near be replaced at. The result is, that the canners who have to buy all their season's requirements for the pack in December and January and make all contracts and labor arrangements in those months for the season starting when the crews leave for the plants in March, are arranging to operate only very few of their plants. On two of the principal supplies, namely cans and nets, we find that on the first, the American Sheet and Tinplate Company, who furnish most of the tinplate, and through an allied company furnish the made-up cans, have announced that their prices on tinplate to the canners for next year, which tinplate is being delivered now and in January, will be the same as last year, and on the other factor, nets, which are brought out from Scotland, the prices are roughly one dollar a pound more than what they were last year, and thus the canners are faced with the replacement of any of the cheap fish that they sell now at a loss at a cost which would show them a still greater loss in selling.

Pre-War Price Talk Dangerous

"My idea is that the wholesaler will never have a chance to buy his cheap grades of canned salmon at a less price than he can do to-day. I know that pre-war price ideas are prevalent, but I think this is quite a dangerous factor, and it is timely to quote the head of a big Eastern manufacturing concern when he says, 'Pre-war price talk is dangerous business, and we are all liable to give way to the present wave of hysteria, with damaging consequences to ourselves. Prices will come down, but it is necessary to remember that we have just passed through a great war. That war has still got to be paid for, and will be a debt for years to come. It will be paid for out of the business of the country to a large extent, and that, together with the big item of overhead, has got to figure in the prices of to-day and to-morrow.'

"While I do not look for any large advance, I do look for a firming up in the prices when the wholesaler begins to realize that the production is going to be so heavily cut this next year, and that this production cannot be increased after arrangements for the season are made after the crews go to the canneries.

Pass It to Buying Public

"One factor that would help out and would increase the demand for salmon, is the passing along to the consumer of the big drop in prices that the manufacturer has taken, and which in most cases has not been passed along to the buying public. Whether the price is held up by the wholesaler or retailer I do not know, but I feel sure that when the reduction that should be given to the public is brought about, the demand for the cheaper grades will increase, and that the distributor who realizes this fact and uses judgment in placing his order for the cheaper grades to see that he gets quality rather than a low price, will benefit by so doing."

Increasing Sales in Bacon

Building a Reputation for a Good Line, Together With the Service That a Meat Slicer Provides, Means Much in the Volume of Sales In Smoked and Cooked Meats

"A FIRST-CLASS bacon and a meat slicer will bring extra business," remarked Mr. Benson, of Benson Bros., Guelph, Ont., to a representative of Canadian Grocer a short time ago. "We certainly can trace some of our accounts to the fact that we have a good meat slicer; and building a reputation for a number one bacon will also do a great deal in the way of attracting business to the store. A reputation for a bacon is a splendid one for any grocer to have. People are very particular about bacon, and if they think the kind you carry is the best, it will in most cases sell other goods for you as well."

Can Give Better Service

There is much to be said for the way in which it is put up, according to Benson Bros.' idea. People want bacon cut a certain thickness, and this is only possible, of course, with a meat slicer. "A meat slicer will eliminate practically all waste, resulting in a profitable saving for the average grocer," stated Mr Benson. "But apart from the saving, it enables the grocer to give much better satisfaction to the customer, and this improved service, in our case at any rate, has meant increased sales."

Benson Bros.' sales of bacon are heavy, and they claim that this bigger volume of business is due to the fact that they have made a special effort to carry only a reputable line, and the splendid service that a modern meat slicer permits.

Dairy Countries Lead in the Consumption of Oleomargarine

Pre-war Production of Oleomargarine for the Entire World Was 1,500,000,000 Pounds and Denmark and Holland Had the Biggest Per Capita Consumption

Written for Canadian Grocer by T. M. COURON, Winnipeg

OLEOMARGARINE is a comparatively recent food. It was first discovered about 1870 by a French chemist during the Franco-Prussian war, and that event gave it its first big sales. The recent world war has given further impetus to the production and sale of this product. A prominent English manufacturer a short time ago read a paper, stating that the consumption of oleomargarine in Great Britain is two and one-half times what it was before the war, while in the United States it has more than doubled.

Dairy Countries Lead

There has been much discussion of recent years regarding the caloric or vitamine value of oleomargarine. Some of our greatest authorities on this have now come to the conclusion, and are backing their opinion with facts, that oleomargarine does contain a high caloric value. Materials used in oleomargarine are being used on tables or in the kitchens of practically every family today, in some form or another, and these same materials congealed in a solid mass, worked with the whole milk, and pure butter added, certainly must be a food of intrinsic value.

The principal oil used in the manufacture of oleomargarine is also oleo oil that is pressed from the inside body fats of the beef. By that we mean the protective fats that cover the vital organs. Cattle are fed on vegetable matter that produces both the interior fats we have just mentioned and butter fat drawn through the udder, and inasmuch as both fats come from the same source, it is reasonable to expect them to be practically the same chemically in food value and flavor.

Is Popular in Canada

The sale and manufacture of oleomargarine in Canada is a war-time measure which expires August 31st, 1921. During the time that oleomargarine was permitted by the Canadian government to be manufactured in the Dominion, it has enjoyed very much popularity, and some very favorable comments have been made regarding oleomargarine by some of the very best Canadian authorities.

Manufacturers are hoping that inasmuch as this is a good, clean wholesome product, made in Canada, by Canadians, that the Canadian government will give it favorable consideration and permit its sale and manufacture in Canada at the expiration of the war-time measure.

Qualla Salmon Has Still The Heaviest Demand in Fish

Repeat Orders to the Producers at the Coast Have Been Necessary—First Shipments of Frozen North-West Whitefish Are Arriving.

By D. B. DRYSDALE

QUALLA salmon is still leading in sales, with possibly a little preference being shown for the pink. During the past week repeat orders to the producers at the coast have been made necessary by the heavy demand for this line.

The first shipments of frozen north-west whitefish have arrived, and are in splendid condition. These fish are caught through the ice in the provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan. As they are taken from the water they are thrown on the ice and with the thermometer registering zero, or perhaps lower, are frozen while practically alive.

The flesh of these fish is a little darker and possibly a little coarser than Lake Ontario whitefish but are very fine eating, and thaw out equal to any fresh caught fish.

New Brunswick Smelts

The first carload lot of fancy No. 1 New Brunswick smelts arrived recently and it has been necessary to cut orders in order to give everyone who has been waiting at least a small share of their order. With colder weather on the coast smelts will, of course, become more plentiful, and shipments more regular, but with the mild weather which we have had lately standing orders have been placed with wholesalers in order for the retailer to secure at least enough of these fish to make a display.

Large orders for Canadian caught fish are being received from across the line. Halibut and haddies with a few other smoked lines seem to have the call.

Pan frozen yellow pickerel have been reduced 1 cent per pound. These are a good eating fish and very similar in quality and flavor to black bass.

All Fish in Demand

There is a good supply and a better demand for practically every known kind of edible fish at the present time, and barring bad luck with the weather, there is no doubt but what this season's business will be away ahead of last year's.

SAMUEL DUCKWORTH AGAIN FINED FOR SELLING ADULTERATED BUTTER

Samuel Duckworth was fined $100 and costs in the Toronto Police Court by Magistrate Cohen for selling adulterated butter. The costs of the case only amounted to $2.35, rather to the surprise of the attorney for the Department of Agriculture, who expected to get counsel fee, cost of analysis and all other incidentals.

In a previous conviction, when the accused was found guilty, he was only fined $50 and the costs were $42. It was shown in evidence that he had sold the oleomargarine to Mrs. Delia Sellers, who keeps a grocery store on Dundas Street, Toronto, and had said at the time that it was good creamery butter. It was seized in her possession. The defendant is a produce peddler, and stated that he had purchased the goods from a farmer at his door and sold it in good faith.

BUSINESS IN 1920 TOTALS $243,000

Simcoe, Jan. 18.—The Norfolk Farmers' Co-operative Association has been formed into a co-operative share capital company, with shares at $10 each. When the association was formed three years ago the members gave their notes. The business done in 1918 was $91,000; in 1919, $141,000, and in 1920, $243,000. The members will this year receive 3 per cent. of the business done, as against 2½ per cent. last year.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—The feature of the produce market this week is the easier market for hogs, with a reduction in prices paid for live hogs of 50 cents per cwt. The quotations on smoked and cured meats are, however, steady, with a good demand. There is no change in the quotations on barrelled meats. The lard market has become very weak as a result of a light demand from the trade and the weakness in the hog market. There is a reduction in some prices quoted on lard. The shortening market is in consequence in a weak condition. Both butter and cheese are very strong with an advance in the quotations on cheese. The demand for butter has greatly improved and a better movement of stocks is experienced with an advance in some prices. The egg market is holding firm at the lower quotations, but prices vary considerably for strictly fresh eggs. From eighty to ninety-five cents per dozen is being paid, and in some cases strictly fresh eggs are selling retail at $1.15 per dozen. Lower prices are given this week on halibut and B. C. salmon. There is an improved demand for fish and the colder weather is facilitating handling.

Hog Market Weaker

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—A larger offering of hogs on the market has resulted in further weakness through this week in the hog market. Prices generally have shown further decline with a less urgent demand from the leading packers. The most pronounced change for the week was a decline of 75 cents per cwt. in some cases, but in most cases 50 cents per cwt., making the price for live hogs weighed off cars $17.00 per cwt. Most of the prices on cuts of pork are unchanged, but trimmed shoulders are slightly easier being quoted from 27 to 28 cents. There is no change in the market for beef. Supplies are no better and prices remain unchanged.

Egg Prices Vary

Montreal.

EGGS.—The egg market holds firm this week at the lower quotations. Prices vary considerably on the market, some quotations for new-laid eggs are as low as 85 cents, but the ruling price seems to be 90 cents. The supply is better than it has been for some time, but eggs are selling from the retail trade at as high as $1.15 per dozen for strictly fresh eggs. These eggs however have been bought direct from the farmers and carry the personal guarantee of the retailers.

BUTTER.—A stronger and better feeling has prevailed in the local butter market this week, owing to a steady improvement in the demand for supplies from both local and outside buyers, which resulted in a very active trade being done in car lots. The butter market showed every tendency to strengthen up to an advance.

FRESH FISH.—The demand for fresh fish has increased lately and the colder weather has facilitated the handling. The quotations on fish are in some cases a little easier this week. Frozen halibut, medium, is quoted at 21 to 22 cents per pound. British Columbia dried salmon is lower, quoted at from 20 to 21 cents per pound. The list of fresh fish offered in the market is cut down considerably at this season. The supply of haddock, steak cod and market cod are sufficient to meet the present demand.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—The hog market is slightly firmer although packers were trying to bring prices down; in this respect they were unsuccessful owing to the small number offered and the heavy demand. Dry salt meats are reduced. Cooked meats and smoked hams and bacon are unchanged. The egg market is holding firm, due to the fact that storage stocks are practically cleaned up and new laids are not arriving in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. The result of the rapidly decreasing stocks of cheese and butter is that the markets for both these lines are in a strong position with prices slightly higher. Lard and shortening are unchanged, but the tone of the market continues easy. There is a brisk demand for fish and all lines are well represented with the exception of smelts. Smelts continue very scarce and the only way to procure supplies is for the retailer to place orders ahead. Poultry supplies are arriving satisfactorily, but prices are up one to four cents per pound.

Hog Market Unsettled

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—Owing to light receipts and a heavy demand, packers were unable to bring down prices to the basis that they were offering, in fact the market considerably stiffened and prices were slightly advanced since Canadian Grocer went to press last week. The hog market is more or less unsettled and future prices will depend altogether upon the receipts as packers generally are short of supplies. The supply of cattle at the Union Stock Yards was fairly heavy during the week and prices were ruling steady. Quotations on dressed meats are unchanged.

We Sell EDDY'S For You

As a matter of fact your stocks of Eddy Matches are sold before they reach your shelves.

Persistent consumer advertising does this. In every Canadian community the name "Eddy" is looked upon as a guarantee of matches at their best.

Eddy's Indurated Fibreware is equally saleable. Light, durable, and sanitary utensils that are far superior to the old-fashioned article of wood or metal. Deservedly popular wherever introduced. Have an ample stock of both these Eddy lines always on hand.

ORANGES

Retailers who are anxious to keep their sales and profits up to par during the dull months (January and February) can easily do so if they would but put a little extra effort into their orange business. Few lines that they sell show such quick, clear, and clean profits. If properly bought and displayed they will many times repay you for your effort.

We are exclusive agents for the famous "Golden Orange Brand Sunkist Navels."

We believe this brand to be the best shipped from California. It is distinguished by its rich, high color, smooth thin skin, fine flavor, and extraordinary keeping qualities, warranted same quality from top to bottom of the box.

To the grocer who wants always the best and is willing to pay a little more than for the ordinary, we would suggest that he stock only "Golden Orange Brand Sunkist Navels."

PRUNE PRICES TO BE LOWER

At the present time prune quotations are several cents per pound below opening prices. Owing to the fact that there are still large stocks of 1919 crop of prunes to be disposed off and the fact that prunes have not been moving as freely as other seasons, it can be reasonably taken as an indication that prices will again be reduced. It has been intimated that these lower prices will take effect the end of this month and the recessions will be such that a more stabilized market can be looked for.

BUTTER PRICES LOOK HIGHER

Stocks of butter held in storage both in Montreal and Ontario are rapidly becoming depleted. It is estimated that at the present rate stocks will be exhausted long before the new grass butter becomes plentiful. This is an indication that butter prices may be considerably higher before the winter months are past.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Imperial Floor Dressing comes in one and four-gallon lithographed sealed cans and in half-barrels and barrels. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for prices and a demonstration.

Draws Trade--Holds Trade

FLOOR DRESSING

A spotless store advertises itself. It draws steady trade from old customers and creates new customers. Freedom from dust is the first essential of a spotless store—Imperial Floor Dressing will do the job quickly and effectively.

Why? Because Imperial Floor Dressing holds dust to the floor. It cleans and preserves floors and prevents warping and checking. It fills in the pores and cracks of wood, and regular sweeping with a stiff broom removes all the accumulated dust and dirt.

Imperial Floor Dressing does not gum or evaporate. One gallon is sufficient for treating upward of 700 square feet. One application will last for several weeks.

It is the most sanitary and economical dressing you can buy for your floors. It is also a fast-selling, profitable line to handle.

The Imperial Oil salesman will gladly demonstrate the superior quality of Imperial Floor Dressing the next time he calls on you.

APROL
THE SWEET OIL OF PERSICA

In all your displays, and suggesting the many uses of this pure, wholesome, vegetable oil at the many social functions at which hundreds of your customers will play the part of hostess this winter.

AprOl is a nutritious oil of delightful flavor, pressed from the ripe kernels of apricots and peaches. It is a distinct improvement on olive oil when used as a salad component, being entirely free of that greasy, nauseating after-taste. It fries beautifully, requiring about half as much of it as would be used of lard or butter, and can be used over and over again—is an excellent shortening and is decidedly economical and highly digestible.

AprOl offers a good profit margin. Try a sample order; display it and watch it repeat.

MAN! MAN! MAN!

Where is that man you need so badly?

Well, no use grouching, is there? Best thing to do is to advertise for the man you want. Use CANADIAN GROCER as the best and cheapest medium. Use dailies if you think they're better. It's up to you.

All we know is that you get to a sifted class when you use CANADIAN GROCER. The replies you will get will be from men now in jobs—not slackers nor idlers, not job-chasers. It will cost you three cents a word first insertion to use CANADIAN GROCER, and you may have to use several issues before the right man puts himself on your hook. Nobody knows in advance just how much you'll have to advertise. But we all know good men are scarce and don't have to look for jobs. You'll have to do some inducing, perhaps, to tempt the man you want to leave his present employer.

But you never can tell who's open for your proposal. Climate, inclination, the boss's bad temper, a fancied slight, desire to get into a new field — all these are explanations of why men change; all these are pegs on which you can hang your hopes.

So send along your advertisement. Better order it to run "until forbid." It will be cheap enough if you find the right man; and anyhow, there's no other cheaper or better way of finding your man.

Three cents a word for the first insertion, two cents a word for each insertion after. Five cents extra per insertion if addressed to Box Number. Payable in advance.

Does Not Fear Mail Order Competition

Milton, Ont., Merchant Does Not Look Upon the Competition of Mail Order Houses and the United Farmers' Organization as Difficult to Meet—Establishing a Confidence Between Seller and Buyer

IN a small town in Ontario, less than an hour's ride on the train from Toronto, one would think that the merchants would be, to some extent, handicapped by mail order business and such other competition as might be offered by town merchants. The town of Milton is within a short distance of Toronto. It also has established there a branch of the United Farmers' organization that is carrying on a business in general merchandise. Discussing with a merchant in Milton the matter of such competition as is created by the existence of two such factors as a U.F.O. branch, and also mail order houses, the opinion is expressed that no serious inroads have been made into the trade of any store as a result of these two competitive organizations.

Does Not Fear Mail Order Houses

Inquiring of J. L. Sanderson, who conducts a general store in Milton, as to the effect of the town's proximity to cities like Toronto and Hamilton, Mr. Sanderson told a representative of Canadian Grocer that he did not consider mail order houses a menace, nor their competition particularly disturbing. "Before there can be any sale there has to be established," he said, "a confidence between the seller and the buyer. The people of any community pretty well know their merchants. If a retailer has been established for any length of time in a place he is more or less interested in its well being, identified in one way and another with its activities, and generally concerned in its progress. I know the people about here and they know me. Many of them have found from their own experience that the same goods can be bought in my store at just as reasonable a figure as through the mails. Then, in addition to this feeling of confidence that has been created between merchant and customer, the latter has the advantage of seeing what he or she is buying, which, of course, is much better than just viewing merchandise from the pages of a catalogue. I can safely say that my business has not suffered because of mail order houses, nor by reason of the fact that Milton is in such easy reach of Toronto. There are certain special lines that it does not pay the general merchant in a town of this size to buy, for the reason that very often people will buy them when in the city. On the whole, however, we carry a very fine line of goods in general merchandise and find plenty of demand for the same from our own townspeople and from the people in the surrounding country.

The U. F. O. Competition

"What has been the effect of the United Farmers' organization opening a branch in Milton?" Mr. Sanderson was asked.

"I do not think the merchants of Milton have suffered to any extent as a result of the opportunity to buy goods throughout the farmers' organization. In a great many instances where farmers ceased buying their groceries from their regular merchant they have all come back, and where there are price differences the farmer is more or less inclined to go where he can purchase at the lowest figure. Some time ago the U. F. O. brought in a heavy consignment of molasses to sell to their members. Merchants in Milton were at that time selling molasses cheaper than it was possible for the farmers to handle the same. The result was that members of the organization, a good many of them, bought from the stores. The same is true of soap. Selling soap at a certain price, I got more customers from the U. F. O. than I ever lost because of their competition. Keen opposition meets them every time, and they are not able to compete with the prices made possible by good merchandising.

In the period of declining prices farmers' organizations have been caught with high-priced goods on hand, as well as other merchants, and they have not been able to meet the declining markets.

"Co-operative buying of this kind has certainly not affected our business to any extent. We conduct our business at a fair profit in line with ideas of correct merchandising, and by so doing we believe that we can meet competition."

At Replacement Values

Mr. Sanderson, in speaking to Canadian Grocer in regard to the readjustment of prices, stated that at the present time he was pricing all goods at replacement values. Early in the war, back in 1914, Mr. Sanderson stated that he followed the advice to mark all his goods up as the markets advanced. He had done so right up to the time that the peak was reached. When prices commenced to decline he marked his stock accordingly, and he believed that such was the only policy to pursue. In this way he is confident any loss is unlikely, the advances in the rising market offsetting declines at the present time.

An Unwise Policy

Mr. Sanderson believes that the merchant who is not valuing his stock at the present time at replacement values is making a big mistake. He considers it an unwise policy to endeavor to secure prices realizing a fair profit on what the goods cost, in view of the fact that the replacement value is very much lower. The merchant will find it much more to his ultimate satisfaction if he follows the market downward, pricing his goods on the basis of current market quotations, and making a quick readjustment to conditions as they now prevail.

The grocer who is following this plan will do much to maintain the confidence of his trade at a time when people are looking for and expecting price reductions. If the merchant is still holding out for a figure on the basis of old and higher costs, he will more than likely see the people taking advantage of lower quotations elsewhere.

Grocers Complain of Lack of Clerks With Selling Ability

Montreal Merchants Are Experiencing Much Difficulty in Getting Real Salesmen—One of the Greatest Handicaps in the Grocery Trade

By Staff Correspondent

MONTREAL.—A number of Montreal grocers report that they are experiencing much difficulty in getting either experienced grocery clerks or men who make good clerks. The question is: "What happens to the men who have had experience in the grocery business?" Among the larger groceries in Montreal it is found that after a clerk has had a few years in the business and has, by putting all his interest in the work, made himself of value to his employer, he generally goes into business for himself. Many other cases are found where the experience obtained by the clerk has fitted him to go on the road for some of the manufacturing firms. Whatever the reason is, it is quite evident that there is a dearth of experienced grocery clerks in this city and the same may be the case in many of the other large cities. Good clerks are indispensable to the grocer, who is endeavoring to develop all the business possible.

This fact has been brought to the attention of Canadian Grocer by a number of leading grocers. The manager of one of these stores said: "There are great possibilities in the grocery business to-day, but one of our greatest handicaps in taking advantage of these opportunities is the great difficulty in getting experienced grocery clerks, or even men who will take an honest interest in the business. A good salary has to be paid to a man who knows the business, and they could easily be worth if it they were only obtainable. The grocer to-day finds himself continually training men only to find that the man either does not take an interest in the work or is attracted to something else.

Great Need of Salesmanship

"By a 'good clerk,' I mean one who is really a salesman and not simply a hand-out man, one who will look for business. Courtesy and attention to the customers is one of the main factors in making a purchaser a customer, and the grocer's idea is to make regular customers of all those who come into his store. This can only be accomplished by the co-operation of the clerks since in a store of any size the owner or manager can only wait on a very small proportion of the customers. It is then very necessary that the grocer can have confidence in the clerks who work for him. So many employees to-day feel that they are doing their full duty if when a customer asks for a pound of butter, they parcel it up and hand it to them. In three cases out of five that customer would buy something more if a few suggestions were made or a little attention was given to them. The geniality of the clerk helps considerably too. A pleasant word or a little courtesy often insures further business for the store. It is interesting to notice how many clerks will go and open the door for a customer, or how many will take special care to do up a number of small parcels so that they will be more easily carried. These are the little things that count and the things that the grocers are finding it hard to find these days.

Carelessness That Costs

"It is surprising what carelessness results when a man does not really put his heart into the business. This is most noticeable in weighing bulk goods or in counting out eggs, oranges or any of the lines that are sold by the dozen. For this reason it does not pay the grocer to hire a man who does not take an interest in the work, even if he is being paid only half the salary of an experienced clerk. The big question is: 'What is the remedy?' A few years ago it was not hard to get real grocery clerks, and to-day it is almost impossible and most of the old ones have gone into business for themselves. It is only natural, however, that a man who was really a success as a clerk should take advantage of his knowledge and start his own grocery. The man who does not take an interest cannot make himself worth enough to his employer to pay him to stay and so the grocer to-day is almost continually looking for a good grocery clerk."

What Is The Remedy?

It is interesting to note that three of the leading grocers in Montreal to-day were at one time clerks in the one store. They spent from five to twenty years with the one firm and then branched out into business for themselves. To-day the firm that gave them their training canont find "real grocery clerks" to take their places. The manager of one of the grocery stores in Montreal states that he would pay thirty-five dollars a week for a good clerk but he cannot find one. Still there is a large army of unemployed in this city and in other large Canadian cities. Are there no men in their number who would take a real interest in the grocery business? The grocers state that their business is in a more promising position than it has been for some time but trained men are lacking.

Improperly Labelled Salmon Gets This Dealer Fined

Vancouver Merchant is Fined $52.50 and Over Two Hundred Cases of Salmon are Confiscated —Three Points to be Observed

VANCOUVER (Special). — Under date of January 7 Canadian Grocer warned the trade that the Dominion fisheries inspectors were "on the warpath."

On January 19 a local retail store was charged in police court as follows:

"—did unlawfully expose for sale white spring salmon packed in cans which were not marked with a true and correct description of the contents of such cans, including the vernacular name and the minimum weight in avoirdupois of the contents plainly printed in a conspicuous manner and the name of the place where same were packed."

Is Fined $52.50

The defendant was convicted and the fine and costs totalled $52.50. Also, it is understood that the Department confiscated the canned salmon complained of, to the extent of about two hundred and seventy-five cases. Although the wording of the charge described the fish as "white spring," the packer advised Canadian Grocer that the salmon packed under the label which the salmon bore was actually "chum" salmon.

There are considerable quantities of salmon in the hands of the trade with labels printed several years ago, which do not now comply with the requirement of the Act (the Meat and Canned Foods Act as amended 1908, 1910 and 1917).

Mr. Harrison, acting for Chief Inspector Motherwell during his absence, advised Canadian Grocer that there were three points to watch on salmon labels:

1. The name and address of the packer or the name and address of the fish dealer obtaining it direct from the packer, such as wholesaler or broker using private label.

2. The species or variety of salmon, such as: Sockeye salmon, red spring salmon, white spring salmon, cohoe salmon or silver salmon, pink salmon, chum salmon or qualla salmon—together with place where packed (such as British Columbia).

3. The minimum net weight of contents in avoirdupois weight.

Believes The Groceteria Is Here to Stay

E. F. Mason, Peterborough, Ont., Who Is Now Opening His Third Groceteria, States That the Self-serve System Will Be as Much Appreciated in Normal Times as in Times of High Prices

E. F. MASON, Peterborough, Ont., believes that the groceteria is here to stay. Contrary to the opinion of some men prominent in the trade, that the groceteria was merely the creation of a period of high prices, and would pass out when values returned to normal, Mr. Mason is firmly convinced that it has been a success, and will continue to be such, even in normal times. It fact Mr. Mason is backing up his belief in groceteria by establishing a third store, conducted in this way, in Peterborough.

Mr. Mason first opened a groceteria near the market, and it proved such a success that he inaugurated a groceteria section in his main store. Now his third one is shortly to be opened in the southern part of the city. He still maintains the old way of doing business, taking orders over the telephone and delivering to all parts of Peterborough. He does not intend to eliminate this feature, but the people who are his patrons in this department are regular, steady customers, who pay their bills periodically, but they are always sure. Business of this kind is almost as good as cash and he does not intend to let it go.

The Cost of Delivery

"What led you to open your first groceteria?" a Canadian Grocer representative asked Mr. Mason recently.

"I think, perhaps, it was the occasional sale that is made in every grocery, particularly the ones that come over the telephone, asking you to deliver a small loaf of bread before a certain hour. I have had this experience and I am sure every grocer who is doing business with a delivery service has had it many times. Very often these people are not regular customers. They just want you to suit their convenience, and if you suggest, as you frequently do, a number of other lines, they only want the service you are giving to bring to them the thing they mostly need at the moment. That is what encouraged me to take up the groceteria idea. The cost of delivery for such a small order is more than any profit you can make. People who want a regular delivery service, and place their orders from week to week, can still do so, but the occasional buyer, and the person who just drops in for a few things while down town, can best be looked after in the groceteria."

Near the Market

The groceteria situated in close proximity to the farmers' market is doing a very fine trade, according to Mr. Mason. The market is a popular place for housewives on Saturday and the groceteria attracts a great many at this time. Being on the main street too, it is easily reached by the downtown shopper.

Mr. Mason believes that one of the chief essentials in the successful conduct of a groceteria business is the necessity of carrying only the best lines procurable. He has made a feature of stocking the best goods that can be bought, and eliminating the delivery on this high-grade stuff, Mr. Mason is able to sell at reduced figures, at the same time building up a reputation for high-class merchandise.

"The return to normal prices will not mean the elimination of the groceteria," Mr. Mason reiterated. "With men earning perhaps less money than in the days of the war, lower prices, possible only in a business on a cash and carry basis, will be appreciated as much as in the days of inflated values. Yes, I think the groceteria is here to stay, and it has proved very satisfactory in my experience."

The Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, are holding their annual banquet at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on February 4th. Among the speakers will be Rt. Hon. Sir George E. Foster, and Chief Justice Riddell.

"BUSINESS IN 1921."

By A. MOSSMAN

"WE are being told that business will be unsettled throughout this year, but as a matter of fact, business has been in a condition of unsettlement during the past six years and it is now hoped that in this year we will be able to 'settle up' so that we may 'settle down.'

"We Canadians have generally been 'sot in our ways' and our ways have generally been commercially orthodox, but we were led away from the 'straight and narrow path' of ethical merchandising because of the knowledge that we could sell anything, at any price, and rules and reason became unnecessary and were temporarily discarded. But all is changed and rules and reason must be again enthroned to ensure the rehabilitation of business upon a safe and sound basis.

"So much is being said and written by competent authorities about the absolute soundness of Canada, that it is unnecessary to discuss the subject here and in any case no Canadian doubts or has ever doubted that the resources of our country are boundless, so what we are now concerned about is the future of our businesses.

"Almost every merchandiser has had both eyes concentrated upon profits, but it must now be remembered that profits are only secured through sales and that therefore the turnover is of equal importance.

"A great deal of the reported contraction in trade is due to prices carrying war-time profits. No one likes to take a loss, or even a reduction in profits, but the 'objective' of every progressive merchant in 1921 is a revival of turnover. The fact has to be faced that the purchasing public has to some extent lost confidence in its suppliers. For several years prior to the war the high cost of living was a popular topic among consumers, but resentment did not take the practical form of a partial 'boycott' until recently. Canadian business men have, as a rule, shown a sensible appreciation of a difficult situation, and are trying to meet its requirements calmly and practically and progress is being made steadily toward former levels of prices without the panicky slaughter of merchandise of which we read so much in the United States news.

"In the readjustment of prices the public is entitled to a square deal, nothing more, nothing less, but the wise merchant will keep closely in step with the downward trend of prices, which advanced during the war. This is a time for activity; for five years business sought the dealers, but now the dealers must seek the business and seek it diligently.

"'The croakers' are not all dead, and we occasionally hear the man who 'will not buy anything just now,' but he is not numerous and we hear much more frequently of merchants who have progressive plans for making 1921 their banner year.

"Someone has said that 'difficulties are made to be overcome' and we will surely have some to overcome in 1921, but with good buying, vigorous selling and prompt collections, most of our troubles will be behind us at the end of this year."

"Why it Costs Us Less to Deliver"

Managing Director of Large Concern Decides That Delivery Costs Are Too High, and Now Declares That Charge of Ten Cents for Each Delivery Fully Covers the Cost of the Same, in Spite of Opinions to the Contrary

By JOHN MENCH

"WHEN a customer in our self-serve grocery store pays 10 cents additional to have her purchases delivered, anyone acquainted with ordinary delivery costs is likely to be surprised," stated John Mench, managing director, Duffy Powers Co. "Only 10 cents?" is frequently asked. "But that does not cover the cost of delivery."

" 'Oh, yes it does,' " we are able to tell him—" 'covers it completely.' It formerly did not, but it does now.

"It used to cost us much more than 10 cents every time one of our delivery men stopped at a house; about a year ago I decided that delivery costs were too high and set out to cut them. There is after all only one way to cut anything, whether cloth or timber or expenses, and that is to set up a measuring rule and top off everything that goes beyond the mark. We decided what the correct figure on delivery costs should be; then I arbitrarily cut the allowed expenses to that amount, beginning on the very day the decision was made.

"If the manager is right in his first judgment that the activity is costing too much, the labor force will learn to accomplish with the remaining apparatus the same service as before.

Make Action Profitable

"The best means of getting people busy is to make action profitable to the individuals concerned. On the day I cut the appropriation for deliveries, therefore, I called in the trucking superintendent who had been getting $35 a week and boosted him to a salary of $3,000 a year. At the same time I told him that he would get his salary so long as he ran the department on or under the new appropriation, but that if at the end of one month he could not deliver service on that appropriation his job would automatically terminate. I asked him whether he could do it. He said he was strong for his new job, and would earn it or break something. So we got together to make a survey and to do a little figuring. We both made the survey, and I let him do the figuring. Any intelligent man acquainted with his work can figure out in theory the proper thing to do in a given situation. The art of management, if it is an art and not a job, is simply to go ahead and put into operation the things his figures show him.

First Move in Cost Reduction

"We had had 13 trucks and a garage to keep them in; also a horse and two wagons in a rented barn. Following the truck superintendent's figures, the next day I cut the number of trucks in use to 7 and sold the horse and wagons. The trucking superintendent turned half of his men over to the employment manager for use as porters and elevator men. To the remainder of his men he passed on some of the selfish benefits it was assumed they would thereafter earn, in the shape of increased wages plus a bonus.

"We now do our delivery with 7 trucks instead of 13, in spite of the fact that the number of our deliveries has increased two-thirds. The other day, in view of the increased business, I offered the superintendent another truck. He refused it, saying he didn't need it—for we are giving our customers high-grade service without it. This man, promoted by the hair of his head and with responsibility thrust upon him, kept his job and he is earning his salary.

"A favorite motto of mine is that when you are looking for salaried people you do not have to search the country for them; if you take the man who is already on the job in your own organization, he can easily learn to deliver results commensurate with a good salary. It is only necessary to get the average man stirred up in the right way and to pay him for a vigorous exercise of his brains. Our trucking superintendent is now worth more to himself, worth more to the company, worth more to the men under him, and it is a greater pleasure for him to work and for the people to work with him. His extra salary pays us. He was not selected because of any personal qualifications, but because he was the man already on the job.

"As for the truck-drivers, they have earned their increased wages and a good bonus by giving better service, too.

It does not do to have one man do all the planning in cold blood, sitting down at his desk and to expect other men and women to do all the carrying out, without a share in the planning and in the payment.

Used Paper Baskets

"There are a great many problems in the physical work of delivering which call for the use of brains. For example: our drivers use paper baskets for delivering groups of packages. The paper baskets are easier to handle than wooden baskets or boxes, and when empty they collapse and take up practically no room in the truck as it continues on its way to other deliveries. The wooden box takes up just as much space, empty or full, and during that half of the time that it is empty it is a nuisance to the delivery man.

"We give the driver 1 cent for each paper basket he returns to the store in good condition. All the baskets come back—none of them now remain behind at the house with the bundles as they used to. They are handled carefully, to keep them in good condition. So our baskets return to be used again and again, until they are worn out. The drivers can earn at least 10 cents on each basket during its life of about 10 deliveries. So we get less expense and the driver gets a good bonus.

"Each truck driver's record for service to customers is also gone over periodically. Every six months a committee consisting of the truck superintendent, the store manager, and one or two department heads goes over the records and gives each driver a bonus of $1 for each week during which he has not made an unreasonable number of wrong deliveries or other errors.

A Bonus for No Mistakes

"There is no predetermined allowance of mistakes, as that would be unjust to both the drivers and the store—some mistakes in deliveries are the fault of the customers who gave us the addresses. But the possible bonus of $26 every half year is a sufficient inducement to keep before the drivers the importance and value of care.

"The department chiefs on the truckers' bonus committee are not the same persons from month to month, but are selected from different departments each month. Thus we get sincere views on the efficiency of our delivery service directly from the various departments the sales of which are delivered by the truckmen. Often department heads will not complain about a service condition on the ground that it is not their official job to do so; but when they are called upon to be members of this committee, they sit in judgment.

Better Service Than Promised

"We give what I think is an excellent delivery service. It is not so fast as the service from some other companies; but speed is not so important an element of service as is usually supposed. What a customer wants is to know that the goods will be at her house when we promise them. We make it a practice

Window Displays That Will Sell Goods

The Trimming of a Shop Window Should Not Be Treated as an Art or a Knack—It is a Serious Branch of Store Salesmanship And Should Be Utilized to the Best Possible Advantage of the Various Departments

SOME window displays sell a lot of goods. Every department of the store reflects the sales punch in a good window display. People talk about the showing and purchase largely of the goods that are exhibited.

On the other hand some window displays fail almost entirely to affect sales in a satisfactory manner. The goods on display move no more rapidly than ordinarily; there is no comment among the customers on the display and the whole thing is a dismal failure.

What's the answer to this condition of affairs? Why do some displays sell goods while other displays fail entirely to do so?

The answer, of course, lies in the display itself. Here's the way one Western store manager, who began his career as a window trimmer, sums up the situation:

"Of course now that the principles of display salesmanship are so thoroughly understood by all window trimmers, it is a fact that most of the show windows are exceedingly successful in selling goods. But even the best of trimmers is apt to go off on a tangent every now and then and put over a display that proves to be an out-and-out 'flivver.'

"For instance," continued the speaker, 'we had an instance of this kind in this store not so very long ago. I hadn't been paying much attention to the windows, except to get regularly weekly reports on the displays and the results, until one week when I got a report which showed that a display had entirely failed of getting any results. Absolutely the window didn't do a single thing toward boosting sales in the line shown, and I knew at once that something was wrong. I went downstairs and out to the street and looked at the display. I saw instantly just what the matter was.

"Going back into the store I called into the office the man who had trimmed that window.

"'Your display has been an awful flivver,'" I told him. "It didn't sell a single article."

"The trimmer hung his head.

"'That's what I've heard already,' he replied.

"'Do you know why it's a flivver?'

"'No.'

"'Then I'll tell you. Its because you've left off all the price tags. Why did you do that?'

"'I thought the tags spoiled the artistic effect. The display was beautiful and I thought that people were kind of tired of always seeing price tags, anyhow, so I left them off!'

"Can you beat that?" went on the store manager. "Of course that was the cause of the trouble—women simply won't come in to our store and make inquiries regarding the prices of unmarked goods shown in our displays. They have gotten the idea, from experiences with other stores who have shown unmarked goods in the show windows, that when articles are not marked it means that they are so high-priced that the stores are afraid to display the prices. So I had the trimmer put on price tags in the display and continued the display just as it was, with the tags added, for another week. That was all the display needed, the display immediately began to function properly and to sell goods the way it should.

"That is just one example of the way that a man is liable to get off on the wrong foot every now and then in the matter of show window display. And there are a lot of other ways in which a good display can be killed.

An Overdone Display

"I remember one time when I was a trimmer myself how I labored over a display of a high-priced line. The goods weren't moving in anywhere near the way they should and so the store wanted something special, and I determined to give it to them. I got up an elaborate lay-out for the display and then spent about three times as much time working it out as I ordinarily spent on a window. When I had finished I had a display that I thought was a world beater

"But—it absolutely failed to sell!

"What was the trouble?"

"The trouble was that I had made the display altogether too elaborate and fancy. I had spent too much time on backgrounds and frills and all that sort of stuff and too little time on the goods. I had a window that was jammed with ingenious ideas, that had a number of moving objects, elaborate painted effects, novel lighting schemes and everything else, but it was so crowded with my stunts that but very little space was given up to the goods, and onlookers were so much interested in looking at my stunts that they quite missed the purposed big point of the display, which was to induce them to enter the store and buy.

"Right then and there I learned a thing about window displays which has always struck me as being highly important. The point is this—do not overelaborate the accessories. Remember always that the show window's chief purpose in existence is to help the store sell goods. This being the case, the heavy emphasis in a display should, with some few rare exceptions, be placed on the goods that are offered for sale. The stunts and backgrounds and accessories should always be toned down so that they will turn attention to the articles which the store wishes to sell instead of grabbing off the major portion of the onlookers' attention for themselves.

"Personally, I feel that it is highly essential to watch our windows carefully to see that there is no overelaboration of non-essentials. You see it is so easy for an artistically-inclined window trimmer to over-emphasize some minor point of the display, with the result of practically killing the sales value of the window.

"Still another important factor, to my mind, in the framing of window displays that will sell the goods, is that of hammering home only a single point or so in a single display. In other words, keep the windows simple. Don't let them look confused so that the onlooker won't be able to get the real point of the display. I am a great believer in having a single dominating idea behind each display and in having the trimmer realize definitely just what this dominating idea is and frame his display accordingly. If the display is designed to sell seasonable lines, then everything should be subordinated to that one idea. Let nothing creep in that will, perhaps, give the folks the idea that a special drive is being made on something else. Don't let the prospective customer take away a confused impression of the displays. They are much more apt to remember the displays and to talk about them if the displays are simple and direct than if they are confused and wandering. At least that's my idea about it, and it's what we work out in this store to good effect.

"Window trimming," concluded this store manager, "is more than a knack or an art. It is salesmanship. And the windows that sell the most goods are not necessarily those that are the most artistic but rather those that contain the most forceful elements of good salesmanship. That's the point about window trimming I try to emphasize with our trimmers, and I believe it's a point that all stores could emphasize with good effect."

Replies to Edmonton Correspondent

Western Grocer's Suggestion as to the Remedy for the Man Who Is Doing $115,000 Yearly and Apparently Making No Money, is Dealt With in Interesting Discussion.

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A FEW weeks ago a grocer with a long established business, who was doing $115,000 a year and making, apparently, no money, asked me for a suggested remedy. Judging from the meagre data furnished, I told him to advance his prices. A grocer in Edmonton, Alberta, writes very courteously, saying that he hesitates to take issue with me, but nevertheless thinks that, in view of the fact that this man's delivery expenses are high, it would be better for him to reduce his prices, institute a non-service store and put on definite charges for delivery and credit. Thus those who preferred to buy without service would not pay for service they did not use, and those who used service would pay for exactly what they did use. He suggests that such systems are now in operation and must be all right because they work.

It is true that non-service, limited service and self-serve stores are in successful operation in practically every section of the country, but seldom or never can two or more systems be operated successfully in the same store. In cases where this has been tried, the usual result has been that after a few months, when the novelty has worn off, the customers have elected to take full service and pay the price and the store has reverted to the original method.

It is true that many limited service stores are in operation where a definite charge is made for deliveries. But in such stores the original plan has been no service outside the store. The great bulk of the business is strictly non-delivery, so much so that the trifle of delivery orders might be turned down and the store not suffer. Hence whether satisfaction accrues to those who want delivery is a matter of indifference to the owners of the stores.

Upheaval of Entire Business Serious Matter

In the case under discussion we had a merchant with a well established, full-service business doing $115,000 a year. No question of dissatisfaction with the service or prices entered the discussion. It was simply a question of how this merchant might be sure he was making some money—how he might get something for himself and be sure he was getting it. Surely I should hesitate long and thoughtfully before I should counsel such a man to make a complete upheaval of his business. To do anything like that would be to jeopardize his life-work and that of his father before him. For this is a growing business with customers coming every day, evidently pleased to continue. Apparently they are the kind of people to whom price is secondary and service with quality primary considerations.

Surely, it seems to me, that the wise thing for this man to do is precisely what I told him. Advance his prices to insure adequate earnings for himself. But, just the same, I am glad my Edmonton friend wrote. "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety!"

The Cost of Handling Sugar

I have said frequently enough that sugar, though handled below the average cost of doing business, is profitable on a margin of ten per cent. Now I have dug up my figures to prove the contention. They were gathered from a large Western store and are as follows, based on costs and prices of 1917. Similar examination, based on to-day's values, will show the same percentages, I believe.

The business and premises are large, hence the unusual total for rent and the opportunity to segregate costs.

About twenty sacks are sold daily, coming in lots of 50 sacks regularly from a local jobber every three days and an extra load occasionally. So the turnover averages about 100 times a year. At $7.50 the hundred, this is a business of $45,000 a year. And that figure is near enough to present conditions to serve for illustration.

The first charge must be for the rent of the actual space used for and occupied by sugar. There are 28,000 square feet in the entire store and the rent is $24,000, or a trifle under eighty-six cents per foot per year. There is a main floor and basement of equal size and a second floor two-thirds as big as the main floor. Plainly not every foot is of equal value. Some of the main floor must be worth four times the average, while a rear corner of the basement cannot be called worth more than one-fourth the average, or 21½ cents per square foot year.

The sugar is slid directly from the jobber's trucks into the rear of the basement, where the space in which it is piled, plus that occupied by counters, tables and weighing machine is not over 285 sq. ft.—call it 300. This figures $64.50 for annual rental, at 21½ cents per foot, which, on $45,000 business, is .1433 per cent., or let us say one-sixth per cent., to make convenient computation.

The sugar man gets $16 per week and about half his time is devoted to handling sugar. That figures out to $416 per year, or just over nine-tenths per cent —call it .9 per cent. Bags at three-fourths cent each are one per cent., or $450 per year—taking ten pound bag as the unit.

Let Us Include All Factors—Even Doubtful Ones

The owner of the store estimated delivery at two per cent. I think that is high, considering how sugar goes along with other goods; but let it go at that —$900. He also insisted on selling expense, but I do not think that belongs because nowadays nobody sells sugar. It moves on consumer demand strictly and the handling is down to the minimum of standardized motions. But let that go, too, at his estimate of three-fourths per cent.—$337.50.

So we get a total of $2,169.00, which divided by sales of $45,000, works out to the barest fraction over 4.8 per cent. Let us say it is five per cent. Then let us add one per cent., or $450 a year for heat, light, insurance and any other charge you like. Let us then add another one per cent. for increased wages and cost of bags, even though all those things are due for the same kind of readjustment that groceries are now experiencing—$450 the year more—and we shall have the grand total of seven per cent. as the outside burden on sugar.

If this reasoning is correct—and I am ready to have it analyzed by anybody and shall welcome any such analysis—then my contention is established. I hold that sugar at ten per cent. gross is an exceedingly profitable item. We show above that thus it will pay us three per cent. net—or more than the average net on groceries to-day.

Another Good Sales Stunt

When I consider the department store with its average expense of over 26 per cent., which yet makes money more uniformly than the grocer with around seventeen per cent., I conclude that the backlying reason is that the department store sells things, while the average grocer's comment on his goods is that they sell or they do not sell. Get the idea? It's a great thing to study sales stunts and put them in practice. Here's a letter which tells of another one:

Dear Sir:—Here's a little "nut story" that may interest you. Our average nut business for years has been 11,000 pounds, divided as follows: Jan.-Oct. 3,900 pounds; Oct. and Nov., 3,300 pounds; December, 3,800 pounds.

We buy almonds and walnuts direct from the associations, so have to guess about what we can handle. Last spring I guessed pretty high. When the nuts came in there wasn't much other stuff to sell, so I got a special window in and got busy. Cleaned up my year's stock of almonds in about ten days! Had to go on the open market for more (tough luck!).

Naples walnuts came along, quality fine and price right. Took on 50 bags and cleaned them up in two weeks. From Oct. 1 to Nov. 15 sold 7,000 pounds. From Nov. 15 to 26th used 5,700 pounds—our year's supply in six weeks.

Last week we found some number two California walnuts in good condition and got busy. Put them on Thursday, the week after Thanksgiving, and sold 1,200 pounds; Friday, 1,400; Saturday, 2,200; Monday, 600; Tuesday, 500; Wednesday, 600—6,500 pounds in six days. Sold other stuff, too. Question is: What will we do for Christmas?

We had rotten weather for Thanksgiving—rain Monday and Tuesday and dirty Wednesday. In spite of it all, beat last year by about $300.

Now, let me tell you a little about the help I have. Day before Thanksgiving business was slow. At two o'clock I cleaned up all slips and found about 700 sales. Believe me, I was about ready to quit! I had six clerks on the counter from two to eight p.m. They made over 2,000 cash sales, put up their goods and handed them out to the customers. That's what I call going. It was a pleasure to see them work. But I didn't have much time to watch them, for it kept me busy getting the stuff up for them to sell.

Last Saturday two girls handled the trade on the 2,200 pounds nuts—all small sales, and they had to weigh them all, for I had no idea that the people would all go crazy (nutty?) on nuts! We simply could not get a chance to get up any ahead. I got in about three hours on the scales in the afternoon. They handled it alone the rest of the day.

Get the Idea of Selling Things!

That is the story of a big establishment, but that cuts no ice. The same kind of thing can be done in any store in proportion to its size. Nothing that has been demonstrated during the past few years has been more striking than the way in which buying habits in walnuts have been changed by the intelligent advertising of the walnut association. Formerly merchants used to put away what nuts were left after Christmas and forget them until next Thanksgiving. Now they are sold the year round as a staple food.

It is up to each grocer to cash in on these things. He can hitch his selling to the general campaigns of the associations and cash in on their expenditure, or he can say it "can't be done" and stagnate while "the world goes by!"

Grocers In This Montreal Suburb Are Swindled

Montreal, Jan.—The revival of an old method of cheating the unwary was the cause of the loss of five dollars to Louis Chabot, a Montreal grocer at 118 Island Street, recently. Several grocers and butchers in Point St. Charles, a suburb of Montreal, have been victimized by purchasers who take advantage of busy hours or preoccupation of clerks to swindle five or ten dollars by sleight-of-hand tricks in changing money. Mr. Chabot made a complaint to the local police against Viau and the latter's nephew, Rodolphe Viau, for the theft of five dollars. In speaking of this to Canadian Grocer Mr. Chabot said:

"The other evening my store was visited by the two accused, one carrying a suitcase. The other asked me for a jar of jam. He bought it and I wrapped it up. He put it in the suitcase, telling the other man to take care to put it in the middle of the other parcels. I saw that he had a lot of small parcels in the bag. He tendered me a five-dollar bill in payment for the jam and I put this in the cash register, taking out four dollars and twenty-five cents, and gave it to him as his change for the five-dollar bill. The change he left on the counter, adding seventy-five cents and asking me to give him a five-dollar bill for this. I took a five-dollar bill from the cash register and gave it to him. He left this on the counter for a minute and drew my attention away by talking about buying a loaf of bread. He then asked me if I could give him a ten-dollar bill for some change. I took a ten-dollar bill from the register and gave it to him and he tendered me the five-dollar bill I had given him a few minutes before together with the change on the counter I had neglected to put in the cash register, in exchange for the ten-dollar bill. The result was that I was out five dollars. I did not reason out the whole transaction until the two had left the store."

Another grocer, J. Bedard, also reports the loss of money by the same process only a few minutes after this pair had left Mr. Chabot's grocery. This practice was evidently carried on systematically since in the suitcase was found a number of small parcels, including bread, potatoes, canned goods, vegetables and meat. Upon investigation by the detective department it was found that the elder Viau had been arrested in 1917 for manslaughter. Rodolphe Viau was acquitted by the judge.

AN INTERCHANGE OF LIQUOR AND SALMON IS NOW SUGGESTED

Vancouver, B.C.—That an order-in-council be passed providing that all purchases of liquor made under the Moderation Act shall be placed in countries prepared to purchase an equivalent value of British Columbia's natural products, was the novel proposal made to Premier John Oliver here by a delegation of prominent salmon canners. The Premier said he was favorably impressed with the idea.

As one of the basic industries, it was pointed out, salmon canning would benefit. There are about 750,000 cases of salmon on hand and the market is dull.

It was urged that the government should export direct from France, where there are large supplies of brandies, wines and liquors, which owing to prohibition in the United States the French people have been unable to dispose of.

never to tell a customer that her goods will be delivered on the same day that they are purchased—what we say is that the goods will be in her home on or before the following noon. Then they are always delivered hours before the promise runs out—usually, in fact, on the afternoon of the day they were purchased. When they arrive ahead of the promised time the customer is surprised and glad. Consequently we have a reputation of giving better service than we promise. We are credited, in fact, with giving quicker service than some other stores in the city which actually exceed our speed. The difference is that we meet our promises in mighty near 100 per cent. of the cases, instead of having a percentage of what the customer considers tardiness.

"Meanwhile we have had the advantage of greater time in which to sort and route our bundles and we sort them into large delivery groups so that our trucks deliver packages for every mile they travel, and our expenses are consequently less on each bundle.

IMPROPERLY LABELLED SALMON

With these points carefully observed any dealer may easily make sure whether he is complying with the law.

Will Secure Information

If any merchant finds that the salmon he has on his shelves is improperly marked, he should procure from those from whom he purchased the salmon the proper description, weights, etc., and mark with pen or otherwise the needful information on the labels and make sure that his further purchases comply with the act.

If any merchant is unable to get the required information, Canadian Grocer will obtain (through its Vancouver office) the requisite information from the packers concerned.

Whether the grocer feels that he is being unfairly dealt with or not, so long as the Department is taking this action each dealer will be well advised to avoid a fine, rather than be put to the expense of action after he has been fined.

MUCH IMPROVEMENT NOTED

THE whole consensus of opinion gleaned from the remarks of men in the front ranks of business is to the effect that conditions are decidedly improved since the turn of the year. The tendency appears to be all towards improvement. The general aspect, including the temper of business men, is better.

As has been stated on previous occasions the principal reason for apparent dullness in some lines is that the purchasing public is waiting for such information as will influence it to conclude bottom prices have been reached. In a good many lines the bottom, it is believed, has already been reached, and in others further recessions will take place before stablized levels are established. Retailers, in a good many instances, are following the practice of marking their stocks at replacement values, showing a disposition to make adjustments necessary to bring about complete readjustments, promptly disposing of stocks and of getting into a financial position which will enable them to proceed in the regular way. The quicker this is done in all lines the quicker will there be a return of good business.

It is generally the case that after any movement of importance commences, as it progresses it gathers speed, and will, within a short time, reach a momentum that means early completion of the movement.

"I see increasing signs of a disposition on the part of producers and wholesalers to recognize conditions," remarked a man in close touch with affairs at the present time. "They are submitting to such reductions in selling prices as are necessary before a return to a normal volume of business."

BURGLARY INSURANCE

THE number of storekeepers that have suffered from burglaries in recent weeks brings to mind the important question of burglary insurance. How many merchants are insured against this loss? It is stated that the number is not large but the losses that have been incurred by burglaries of late in all parts of the country invite earnest consideration of the subject. Thefts of considerable sums of money, to say nothing of large quantities of goods, have been reported. In effecting and successfully carrying out these burglaries too, very often damage of serious account is committed.

The merchant who is guarding against loss of this nature, as he would against fire, is pursuing a wise course. In a period of a certain amount of unemployment, and more or less quiet and unsettled industrial conditions, burglaries are more or less frequent, and the merchant who wants to avoid loss and inconvenience of this kind had better see to it that he is carrying sufficient burglary insurance. The outlay for such protection will not be a burden. The insurance company will likely insist on every safeguard being taken to prevent the entry of burglars, but in complying with the regulations of the underwriters in this regard merchants are only taking precaution against their own loss.

TEN PER CENT. SUGAR

THE article appearing in this issue by Henry Johnson Jr.,. is one which should be read and studied by every grocer who considers that in selling sugar at a profit of only ten per cent. he is selling at a loss. The truth of the matter is that if you can only sell enough of it, sugar at ten per cent. margin is one of your mainstays in profit-making. Two or three years ago Canadian Grocer published a series of articles from a contributor which were written with a view to proving that it was not the margin of profit alone which had to be taken into consideration, but the frequency of turnover also. One hundred dollars turned over four times a year at a net profit of 3 per cent. represents a profit of 12 per cent. per annum on the investment. The same amount turned over 50 times a year at one per cent. means a profit of 50 per cent. on the investment.

At the same time that the articles above referred to appeared Canadian Grocer issued a questionnaire to grocers in all parts of Canada asking their opinion with regard to the profit to be made on sugar. Replies received showed that about half the grocers in Canada considered sugar one of their best lines as a profit-maker, while the other half regarded it as something they were bound to sell to oblige their customers, but which brought them no profit, in fact, they would be better without such business.

Mr Johnson's article in this issue puts the matter very clearly and shows which of the two opinions is the correct one.

Turnover is Just as Definitely Connected With Collections as Salesmanship is With Service and Satisfaction in Any Business

Profit Does Not Depend So Much Upon the Amount of Money Invested in a Business as it Does Upon the Way in Which That Money is Made to Work—It Should be the Grocer's Chief Occupation to Make His Dollars Work

TURNOVER of stock is the goal of of every business undertaking and frequent turnover is the profitable turnover. An investigator for Armour & Co. has given an analysis of turnover and the essentials that enter into sales and frequent turnover.

To obtain turnover the merchant must make sales. Sales are the life blood of the profitable turnover of working capital. Those two factors are more inter-related than any other two in business. Time was when some manufacturers considered their sale completed when they shipped their goods to the retailer and the retailer considered his sale completed when the transaction across the counter had been closed. But now both of them realize that the sale is not completed until satisfaction has been given, and that satisfaction has not proved until the customer has been brought in again. The sale that every merchant wants in his store is the sale that reproduces itself in repeat business.

Meaning of Turnover

Turnover means the investment of dollars in goods, the sale of those goods, reinvestment, resale—repeating the process often and at a profit. When the merchant invests money in merchandise, then sells the merchandise and extracts his profit, that is one turnover. When he invests again and resells, that is another turnover. The merchant does not turn over goods. He sells goods and that turns over the working capital invested in them. Every merchant should know how many times a year he turns over his invested capital. Profit does not depend so much upon the amount of money invested in a business as it does upon the way in which that money is made to work. Dollars are workmen and the faster they work, the more they accomplish for the merchant. It should be the merchant's chief occupation to make his dollars work, to repeat investment and sale, to get immediate collection of accounts. Turnover is just as definitely connected with collection as salesmanship is with service and satisfaction.

The Essentials of Turnover

Here are the essentials of turnover:

First—The merchant must study the needs of his community. He must anticipate his community's needs.

Second—He must stock the goods, and there should be a variety of products; but too large a variety of brands of each different product is a scattering of investment, that is certain to complicate buying, selling and bookkeeping, with a resultant slowing-up of turnover. Every product selected should be judged as to sale quality. The trade mark should be well known, so that it will not need an introduction. It must be of a quality that will bring repeat calls.

Third—Customers must be given facilities to buy. In other words, the merchant must have adequate space for an attractive display of his goods.

Fourth—Collections must be made promptly. Past due accounts are obligations for the merchant. The moment payment becomes overdue, the merchant ceases to be a merchant giving credit accommodations, but becomes a banker who lends money without interest.

Some of the Results

Advertised quality goods make quicker turnover than any other kind. Recently a well known newspaper of national reputation discovered that advertised goods were turning over three or four times faster than those that were not advertised and comparison of advertised and non-advertised goods was made by this newspaper. The amount of capital invested in stock was the same in each case—$10,000. It was assumed that profits were 10% of the sales.

Here are the results:

Non-Advertised Goods

$10,000	Capital.
40%	Mark-up.
$14.000	Retail value of stock.
3	Number of Turnovers.
$42,000	Total business for the year.
10%	Percentage of net profit.
$4,200	Net profit at end of year.

Advertised Goods

$10,000	Capital.
20%	Mark-up.
$12,000	Retail value of stock.
6	Number of turnovers.
$72,000	Total business for the year.
10%	Percentage of net profit.
$7,200	Net profit at end of year.

It will be seen that, though the mark-up was twice as large in the case of non-advertised goods, yet they yielded a smaller profit than the advertised. This is due solely to the fact that the turnover of the latter was twice as fast.

Better Take Loss Now Than Be Put Out of Business

Toronto, Jan. 26.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association last night the best method to meet the chain store competition was discussed at some length. Reference was made to a recent article by Henry Johnson in Canadian Grocer, of which reprints were given to the members present. It was pointed out that one reason chain stores were obtaining such a grip on the public was that they were alive to market conditions, and were taking advantage of all price recessions, not only in buying but in using every reduction as an advertisement and in reducing prices in line with cost of replacement. Some members declared that if this were done in every instance, serious loss would result. Other members emphatically declared that it was far better to take a loss now than to be put out of business by a chain store organization that is using every price reduction as a lever to pry business from the regular retail grocer.

The matter of collections and the best method to collect accounts was also touched upon. The making of the returns for the income tax was mentioned, and it was decided to invite an official from the income tax office to address a future meeting on this important question.

In the absence of Robt. Dowson, president, George Riley occupied the chair.

NIAGARA FRUIT GROWERS PLAN ASSOCIATION

The formation of the proposed Niagara Peninsula Growers' Limited, a co-operative organization aimed to handle and market all the fruit grown in the entire Niagara district, has practically been completed. Following a four hour conference with the Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture, T. J. Mahony, president of the Niagara District Grape Growers, Limited, and J. P. Bridgman, president of the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers' Association, announced that the scheme had tentatively been adopted. The plan has not been made public, but it is stated that the interests of the fruit growers have been well protected.

Retailer's Relations With His Banker

Merchant Can Do Nothing Better Than Submit Periodical Financial Statement to His Banker—All Retailers Not Good Business Men—Details Bankers Require to Know—Exactness Necessary.

By a Banker

WE bankers are human, even if some of you business men think otherwise.

Now, the truth of it is that the banker is a good business man. Regard for the law and his depositors, to say nothing of his own financial welfare, demands that he exercise good judgment in place of sympathy when the average merchant asks a loan.

Don't think that we chuckle fiendishly when you need money to pay your notes or the interest on the mortgage, and have to come to us. Don't call us ugly names because we happen to refuse. It's all in the interest of good business. Personally, I might like ever so well to make a loan to Jones or Thompson, who are neighbors and friends, but if I am convinced that it would be poor business, friendship must not count beyond a certain point. To grant loans in some cases would work positive injury to the borrower, as well as to the bank, for borrowing often teaches bad habits.

Why So Strict

Many retail merchants cannot understand why bankers are so strict—why financial statements are demanded and why many of these are unsatisfactory. The answer is that not all retail merchants are good business men. They do not possess enough information about their business to make up a reliable statement, as a rule. If they cannot show sufficient cause why they should be trusted with a loan, why should these merchants blame the bankers?

The day of loose business methods is passing fast. Margins of profits are drawing closer and closer, so that it is necessary to do more figuring and better managing to find a profit. Besides, retail businesses are becoming so complex as to stock and seasons and discounts that much greater efficiency is needed to-day than grandfather needed in his general store twenty years ago.

A Businesslike Statement

That is why the banker asks a business-like statement and one that he can rely upon. No guesswork will do. The retail merchant might fool himself about his present worth and profits, but it is not so easy with the banker, who doesn't carry dead stock and dead accounts on his books year after year.

Whom should a banker trust? That depends on a number of things. The merchant may have a rating in some credit bureau. The banker may have had dealings with him before. There may be security or references to look up. A number of things will go to help the banker, as well as the wholesaler or any other business man, decide whether a certain applicant should be accommodated.

This much is true in all cases, however, The retail merchant can do nothing better than to submit a periodical financial statement to his banker, his wholesalers and jobbers and to selected mercantile agencies. Frankness, absolute frankness and honesty, will pay in the great majority of cases, and will serve to give the applicant a better rating than he would otherwise be able to get.

Protect Credit Jealously

It is safe to say that there are many merchants who do not enjoy the high rating they deserve. This is because they do not take advantage of their cash discounts and because they are not able to furnish a financial statement that does them justice.

Credit is a thing to be jealously protected. Good credit enables a merchant to buy where otherwise cash would be demanded. Reputable wholesalers and manufacturers are coming more and more to favor their best dealers in a number of ways. But the best part of building up a good line of credit is that the merchant is thus prepared against the time when either cash or good credit is needed and needed badly.

What Statement Should Contain

What should a good financial statement contain? It should tell in detail the assets and liabilities of the merchant, and his profit or loss for the past six months or year. There should be no equivocation or false valuations in such a statement. It is surprising how many retailers place artificial valuations on their stock or property, allowing nothing for depreciation, and think they have made an honest, conscientious statement. A statement is untrue if goods are entered at more than their market price or more than they cost, and if fixtures or other property are valued at more than they will bring at a forced sale.

A Well Kept Set of Books

Most banks and credit bureaus can supply statement forms. In cases where, because of a poor bookkeeping system, the seeker of credit is unable to arrive at his net worth, the bank sometimes undertakes to audit his books for him. The best preparation for a financial statement is to have a well-kept double entry set of books. These will yield all the information necessary.

It is through his demand for exactness and truthfulness that the banker stands between the retailer and loose business methods. Much credit is due banking and other institutions which are endeavoring to raise the plane of business methods and financial credit. They are a factor in the big struggle for efficiency.

GETTING THE BEST RESULTS FROM WINDOW DISPLAYS

JACKSON & SON, Guelph, Ont., get results from their windows all the time. The windows are selling goods for this firm continuously. A few weeks ago, Mr. Jackson filled his window with a certain line of pork and beans. It was on a Friday and a Saturday that the window was used to help the sale of these beans. "We sold five cases of them on this occasion," remarked Mr. Jackson to a representative of Canadian Grocer. "The beans had not been selling very freely, and placing them in the window where they caught the eye of the people as they passed by, they were practically cleared out in a day."

On another occasion when Mr. Jackson wanted to introduce a line of pancake flour he had not previously carried, he made up a window of the same, along with a nice display of maple syrup. The combination proved attractive, and Mr. Jackson successfully introduced his pancake flour, selling a considerable number of packages of the same. The present is a good time to boost the sales of pancake flour, and a window such as Mr. Jackson prepared will do much to increase the sales and to get the people asking for it at this season.

Woodstock Grocer A Victim of Bandits' Attack

Ben Johnston, grocer on Dundas St., Woodstock, Ont., succumbed to wounds received at the hands of bandits who held him up in his store on the evening of January 20.

Two masked men entered the store just as Mr. Johnston was preparing to close for the night, and each pointing a revolver, ordered him to put up his hands. Feigning compliance, Mr. Johnston jumped to attack one of the men, but was stopped by a bullet. Scared when they saw the grocer lying on the floor, the robbers bolted to their McLaughlin six, which was waiting outside, and sped away to the west, as if bound for London. They did not wait to look for money or other loot in the store.

Ben Johnston was formerly employed at Johnston Bros. bakery in London, Ont. He left in 1914 to go to Listowel and later started for himself in the bakery, confectionery and restaurant business at Woodstock.

MAY RECONSIDER PRESENT TARIFF PLAN

Montreal, Jan.—According to advices from M. H. Nickerson, Commissioner of Fisheries for Nova Scotia, who has been to Boston in connection with the movement launched by the New England Fisherman's Union for an emergency tariff on fish imported into the United States, the first demands of the Union will probably be much modified. Mr. Nickerson pointed out to the leaders of the movement that a tariff on fish would seriously affect the United States fishing interests on the Pacific Coast, which frequently use British Columbia ports as a base of operation as well as being extensive importers of fish caught by Canadians in British Columbia waters. This aspect of the question appears to have made a strong impression.

Pleads for Protective Fund to Protect Retailers Against Unjust Laws in Coming Years

EXTENDING 1921 greetings to retail merchants throughout Canada, J. A. Banfield, president of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, emphasizes in his message to the trade the necessity of safeguarding retail interests against unjust legislation. His message reads:

"I take great pleasure on behalf of the Dominion board and Dominion executive council to send their greetings to the members of the retail merchants throughout Canada for their loyal support to the good work of our association. The past year has been one of the most trying years to retail merchants at large. First, the Board of Commerce, with its dictatorial methods and assumed power to run our business which had to be watched at every turn, and which eventually had to be run to the ground owing to its ridiculous orders, and I trust that if it ever be resuscitated that it may be on constructive, not destructive lines, and we will welcome anything for the betterment of the trade in general and the upbuilding of Canada.

Passing of "Snap Laws"

"Then along comes our government with their system of sales and luxury tax, the latter being a cumbersome tax on the retailer, and not by any means accomplishing the purpose for which it was passed. This method of passing snap laws without consulting with the businesses affected should be relegated to the records of the past, and it is up to us to so thoroughly organize that no such legislation will again besmirch the laws of Canada. The power lies entirely in our own hands, and we should see that every merchant, however small, should now be enrolled in our association. Every merchant we have not enrolled into membership is counted against us. We must start a thorough organization campaign and for this purpose at the last meeting of the Dominion board it was decided to ask our members and all retail merchants to assist in the raising of a $100,000 fund to be used to protect us against unjust legislation such as we have had to fight in the past, and that, undoubtedly, will continue to crop up, and for special propaganda work and generally for the use of the association.

Age of Organization

"This is an age of organization, as can be seen by such large organizations as the manufacturers', farmers' and labor organizations that are collecting millions for their future protection. We must not be behind in our work. All we have is in our business, and we must see it is fully protected.

"We have signs of a readjustment of conditions, and we must be ever watchful and fully safeguard the interests of the country to which we are so closely linked. Don't think by paying your annual dues that you have done your share. Give assistance to our organizers, and see that the year 1921 will be a banner year in the enrolment of members, as the greater the membership the greater the service."

MONTREAL WHOLESALE GROCERY FIRM HAS CIRCULATING LIBRARY

Montreal.—In connection with the offices of Hudon, Hebert & Co., wholesale grocers, Montreal, there is a circulating library for the use of the office staff and the travelers. The books in this library are written in both English and French and treat of commercial subjects such as banking, salesmanship, accountancy and other subjects of business importance. Besides these books there are others on the manufacture of a great number of the lines carried by a wholesale grocer. There are also books on the geography and history of the countries from where our imported foodstuffs come. A very small fee is charged for the use of the library, and members of this club are allowed to keep books out from two to four weeks, depending upon the subject of the book and its length. A Canadian Grocer representative was informed by the management of this firm that this library has proved to be very popular among the staff, and that the books are kept continually in circulation. The subjects dealt with are of such importance to their business that the reading of them increases the efficiency of the staff. By gifts from the firm and by the money collected from the members of the club the librarian is able to add to the library from time to time, until at the present time the number of books runs quite large. Besides a circulating library there is also a reference library, which contains dictionaries and encyclopedias written in four different languages. These books are printed so that the different languages appear in parallel columns and in this way the readers may become more conversant with other languages than their own.

GERMANY NEEDS 3,000,000 TONS OF GRAIN THIS YEAR

Berlin, Jan.—Germany will be obliged to import 3,000,000 tons of grain to meet home needs in 1921, according to an official reply to a question put by the Italian delegation in Brussels concerning the country's immediate requirements of foodstuffs from abroad. The government admits the appraisal submitted at the Spa conference will prove inadequate owing to the failure of last year's crop, which did not come up to the expected yield.

Fodder amounting to 1,500,000 tons will also be required in addition to the wheat, while 1,000,000 tons of raw products for the manufacture of oleomargarine during the current year constitutes a further item on the government's list of food commodities to be imported. The requirements of meat and bacon are estimated at 150,000 tons.

The gold mark value of the above commodities, based on their present market prices, is estimated at 3,200,000,000.

Catalogues and Booklets

Canadian Grocer is in receipt of a number of copies of the Gipsyville Journal, a house organ published by Hargreaves Brothers and Company, of Gipsyville, England, polish manufacturers. This journal was begun in July of 1920. It recounts in an interesting manner the activities of the employees of the company as well as the officials. The articles include news of outings held by the employees, social functions, sports and movements of officials. One interesting article deals with an airplane trip made by the managing director of the firm, George P. Hargreaves, from London to Paris and return.

Seek Relief in Present Situation in Exchange

Western Canada Fruit Jobbers' Association Discuss a Number of Questions Pertaining to Fruit Handling at Their Annual Convention.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25.—(Special.)—The Western Canada Fruit Jobbers' Association, at their second annual convention here a few days ago, discussed a number of questions pertaining to the handling of fruit. Over one hundred delegates were in attendance. President S. S. Savage was in the chair. Mayor Edward Parnell officially welcomed the delegates.

Mr. Savage reviewed the work of the past year. Much had been accomplished by the officers and executive of the association. He spoke of many conferences held with the railways, which, in some instances, had resulted not only in improved service, but also in much improved equipment. The Dominion department of agriculture had carried on experiments during the summer to find the most suitable cars for the handling of fruit, and he believed the association should pass a strongly worded resolution expressing its opinion on the unsuitability of the brine tank refrigerator system for fruit transport.

Adjusting Exchange

On the question of exchange on currency between Canada and the United States, Mr. Savage said every effort had been made to secure relief. He had received word that the Dominion board of railway commissioners, the interstate commerce commission, and the railways and express companies are about to meet to consider a division and settlement plan by which Canadian railways will be paid their share of the haul in Canadian currency, and the American roads their share in American currency. Should the plan work out, it would mean a great saving to the Canadian public.

Many other important matters were discussed at this convention, and interesting addresses were delivered at the noon-day luncheons by Hon. Edward Brown, Provincial Treasurer of Manitoba, and Mr. H. Bruce Walker, Dominion Government immigration agent. A banquet and a theatre party also were features of the entertainment side of the convention.

A Novel Stunt That Brought Big Business

A business boosting stunt that was most successful was put on on Saturday last by the merchants of Tillsonburg, Ont. Taking advantage of the fact that a trained animal show was in the vicinity they got together and pooled expenses and secured the attraction for Saturday afternoon. The show was given absolutely free and hundreds of farmers with their wives and children came in from all over the countryside. The performance took place on Broadway, the mainstreet of the town. The merchants had fixed things with the weatherman and an ideal day was handed out. The performance was a strictly high-grade one and the visitors were greatly pleased and were not at all backward in commending the merchants on their enterprise. The results in dollars and cents were most satisfactory and scores of the farmers took advantage of the trip to town to make large purchases. The merchants made a big turnover at a period when trade would ordinarily be dull and in addition won the good will of the people of the district.

LIBBY, McNEILL AND LIBBY SALESMEN MEET

Libby, McNeill & Libby Co., of Canada, held a conference of their agents and salesmen throughout the Dominion last week. There was an optimistic tone throughout and with the new price reductions all round, which come into force immediately, the salesmen and management anticipate a good year.

Once an elderly lady was being shown over Nelson's ship, the Victory. As the party approached the spot where Nelson met his death, the attendant pointed to the brass plate fixed in the deck, and said, "There is where Nelson fell." The old lady was impressed, but not in the right way. "No wonder," she said, "I nearly tripped over that thing myself."—Holland Magazine.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE markets continue to show signs of stabilization. In Montreal the wave of price cutting is still in evidence but not to the same extent as a couple of weeks ago, wholesalers having apparently reduced their stocks to a point where replacement costs are slighty higher than the prices at which many lines have been selling and have therefore advanced their prices accordingly. There is a certain amount of irregularity in prices in Toronto but not nearly to the same extent as existed in November and December. And with the better tone that has been noted in business since the turn of the new year, wholesalers are striving to conduct business on a more normal basis.

The demand for refined sugar is more or less inactive and prices are holding steady at the refiners' basis. The raw sugar market is fairly steady although there is a slight easing in prices owing to heavy offerings. The harvesting of the new crop Cuban sugars is not progressing rapidly, due to the unfavorable weather conditions delaying some factories from commencing and retarding the work of others and at the same time keeping the cane green and immature and with low sugar content. The primary markets for nuts have developed a firmer tone with prices advanced. The situation in teas is showing steady improvement and in the opinion of importers the market is in a healthier condition. The volume of business in teas is much larger and retailers are ordering more freely. Cabled information from Colombo shows that prices on the commoner grades of tea have advanced 2 cents per pound and on the finer grades 6 cents per pound.

Southern rices continue easy and lower prices are named, although the primary markets show indications that the bottom has been reached and that prices are now at a stabilized basis. Eastern rices are still holding at fairly high prices in Ontario, but in the West prices are considerably lower.

Spices are showing a firmer tendency in primary markets and it is felt that many of the price recessions have been too drastic and that some lines will be moved upward in view of low stocks held in primary markets.

Practically all brands of pure jams have been reduced. Sockeye salmon is scarce and firm. Canned vegetables also have a firm undertone.

Hogs and hog products are fairly steady although prices on lard and shortening show reductions in Montrèal which brings quotations more in line with those in Toronto and the West. Butter and cheese are in a strong position throughout the Dominion, due to shortage of storage stocks.

Receipts of eggs continue to increase but with storage stocks about at an end the demand in consequence is being thrown almost entirely on fresh. The market in Eastern Canada has taken a decidedly firmer tone and prices have advanced. In Ontario and the West this same condition practically exists with the exception that prices are steady to slightly lower.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—The sugar market remains steady. There is no change in molasses, but one brand of golden corn syrup is reduced in price. There is a very strong tone to the nut market but the prices on shelled almonds have been cut by some dealers this week, and a reduction of 4 cents per pound is made on shredded cocoanut. Package cornmeal is reduced, and a small reduction is made on minute tapioca. In the vegetable market the feature is the big advance in the quotations on sweet potatoes. Local potatoes remain steady in price with a good supply. The rice market is still in its weak unsettled condition and further reductions are made in the price of fancy Carolina and Honduras rice. The rolled oats market shows weakness with reductions in quotations. Japan tea is predicted for a stronger market but some reductions have been made in these prices this week by some of the wholesalers. Paper bags are cheaper.

Montreal.

NUTS.—Although the nut market as a whole is much stronger in view of the depleted stocks on hand, some firms are quoting shelled almonds a little lower this week at 48 cents per pound. Jumbo roasted peanuts are advanced a little in price this week to as high as 18 cents per pound. Pecans are also much dearer this week and supplies are limited. Bulk shredded cocoanut is reduced 4 cents per pound this week to 33 cents per pound. The demand for nuts on this market is very good and supplies everywhere are limited.

Price Cutting on Prunes

Montreal.

California 70-80s are quoted as low as 12c per pound. Sultana raisins are very firm in price, there being a big demand for them and not very large stocks on hand at the present time.

Tea Market Still Quiet

Montreal.

TEA.—Although the tea market in London has during the past two weeks shown a little more strength, the effect on this market has not been very marked. The demand for tea has shown but very little improvement. There is every likelihood that the Japan teas will be much stronger as soon as the movement of stocks begins. The importations this year were very small and if there is any demand at all it will mean a shortage in this country with higher prices.

Some Jams Reduced

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—Following the big reductions made two weeks ago by some of the Montreal wholesalers on canned goods, the prices on the better grades of canned salmon have returned to the high level and Clover Leaf salmon is now quoted at $5.20 per dozen for the one pound tall tins and $5.25 for the flat tins. Some brands of jams and preserves are reduced in price this week to meet competition. There are reductions on E. D. Smith's jams amounting to 90 cents per dozen on strawberry jam and on a number of other lines.

Paper Bags Lower

Montreal.

PAPER BAGS.—The discount on paper bags has this week been increased from 35 to 50 per cent., which decreases the cost of the bags. This is a result of the lower cost of paper.

Higher Prices for Oranges

Montreal.

FRUIT.—Higher prices are noted this week. California oranges are now selling as high as $6.50 per case and Floridas at $5.75. Tangerines are offered on the market at $4.25 per case. Grapes are very scarce this year and much dearer. They are selling retail at as high as $1.25 per pound. Almerias are quoted at $16 per keg. While apples are unchanged in price the supplies are not large and a shortage may result from the big export demand.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—Reductions are announced on lamp chimneys, cotton clothes lines, powdered milk, paper and paper bags. Refined sugar is generally holding steady at the refiners' price basis, although some wholesalers are underselling. Flaxseed and linseed meal show slight reductions. One brand of package cornmeal is lower. Canned lobsters are lower, also jams. Canned vegetables have a tendency to firmness. Currants are in an easy market with prices reduced. Shelled walnuts and almonds in primary markets are higher, but spot stocks are unchanged. Tea quotations are unchanged but the market has a healthier feeling in view of the higher prices in primary markets. Blue Rose rice is quoted lower. Potatoes and other local vegetables are easy with a tendency for lower prices.

Sugar Market Steady

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The demand for refined sugar is more or less inactive and the bulk of the business is going to the Ontario refinery. Eastern refineries quotations are holding steady on a basis of $10.71, although there is some irregularity in quotations from wholesalers, some jobbers continue to undersell this basis. The harvesting of the Cuban crop is progressing slowly, the unfavorable weather conditions delaying some of the factories from commencing and at the same time keeping the cane green and immature with low sugar content. The production of the new crop up to January 15 was 77,865 tons as against 421,655 tons the same date last year. The carry over of the old crop sugars at shipping ports now stands at 151,903 tons.

There is no change in shelled almonds since our last report, but the demand is quiet and supplies are coming along very freely. TEA.—The latest report from the primary tea market stated that at this week's sale over one million pounds of tea was offered, but the selection was very limited and quality generally rather inferior. The market was again active for fine and good medium tippy broken orange pekoes and broken pekoes. Low medium quality brokens were very irregular and inclined easier. Leaf grades, both orange pekoes and pekoes, remained unchanged. Common teas generally were much neglected and were difficult to sell. Fine grades were dearer, other qualities and dusts were steady.

PEPPER SUBSTITUTE

Lendner states that the powdered unripe fruits of bitter orange are extensively used as an adulterant for pepper and recently a mixture of this powder and pimento has been placed on the market as a substitute for pepper. One of the characteristic constituents of unripe oranges is hesperidin, which occurs in the shape of more or less rounded yellowish masses. This substance, classed among the phloro-glucosides, is split up into rhamose, glucose, and hesperetin the latter, in the presence of caustic potash, yields phloroglucin and isoferulic acid. Upon the production of phloroglucin the author sought to discover a test for the presence of unripe orange powder by placing small amounts of the pepper to be examined on a small board of fir wood, and adding concentrated hydrochloric acid, in some cases after the addition of caustic potash. The wood was washed with water after an hour's action and the formation of a reddish-carmine stain demonstrated the presence of phloroglucin. This test, however, did not yield good results in the case of a mixture of ingredients, and Lendner recommends a method permitting the recognition under the microscope of the characteristic structure of unripe orange by adding 5 per cent. caustic soda to the powder on a slide which dissolves the hesperidin and after removing the excess of caustic soda by washing with water, one drop of Congo red solution is added. The unripe orange cells are recognizable by their red coloration, and by the shape of the colloeytes.

CANADA'S TRADE

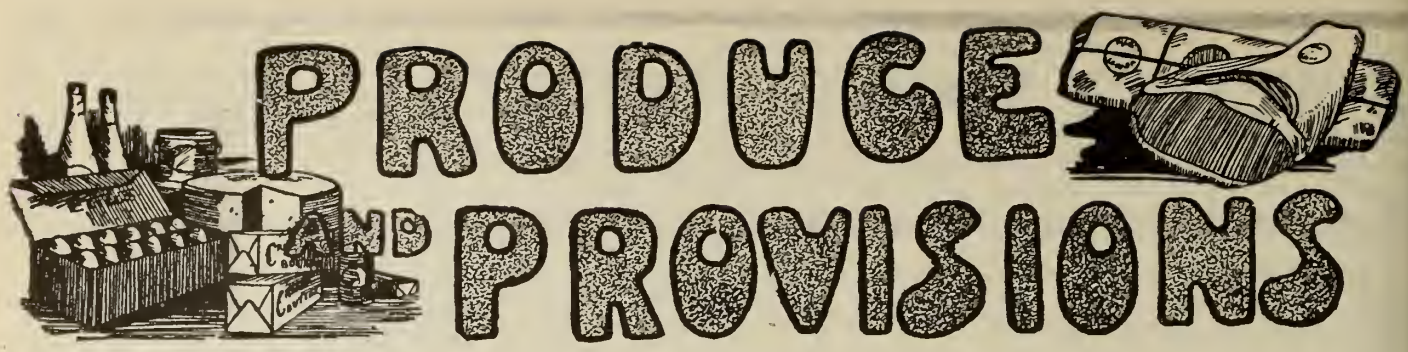
Canada's trade for the twelve months ending December totalled $2,639,726,135, of which $1,336,921,021 were imports and $1,302,805,114 were exports. The figures show an increase of nearly $400,000,000 in imports over 1919, and an increase of about $8,000,000 in exports over the corresponding period of last year.

An actual increase of approximately $30,000,000 is shown for 1920 over 1919 in purely Canadian goods. There is a decrease of some $23,000,000 in the export of foreign goods from Canada. Customs duties show an increase of about $34,000,000 over 1919.

The greater amount of imports came from the United Kingdom and the United States. From the United Kingdom there was imported $231,479,294 and from the United States $921,625,825.

In 1919 only $87,659,198 worth of goods were brought in from the British Isles.

Export trade with the United Kingdom shows a reduction from $528,036,604 to $341,168,451. Export trade to the United States shows an increase from $454,595,204 in 1919 to $559,956,669 in 1920.



Proposed Egg Regulation Means an Embargo

Produce Men Protest Against Any Law Insisting on Inspection of Eggs From the United States—"Prohibit the Bad Eggs," They Say.

PRODUCE men do not look for the enforcement of the proposed legislation insisting on the examination of all eggs imported from the United States. This new proposal would practically mean an embargo. The Toronto Produce Association has strenuously objected to the regulations, and the same will not go into force without the approval of Hon. Dr. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture, and such approval will not be given until the produce men have been heard.

"We have sent a strong protest to Ottawa," stated J. T. Madden, secretary of the Toronto Produce Exchange and also of the Canadian Produce Association, to a representative of Canadian Grocer. "Such a law is absolutely absurd at this season," continued Mr. Madden. "We can't get along unless we get U. S. eggs. The law really means an embargo. If it were to exclude Chinese eggs we wouldn't say a word. Let the Government take hold of the bad egg situation."

Means No Importing

Any regulation that no eggs can be imported unless inspected and passed as No. 1 eggs by a Government inspector means that commission men cannot import. At present they can order a carload by wire from Chicago one day, have them delivered the next, and distributed and sold the following day. Under the proposed regulation they would have to locate an inspector and await his inspection. During the busy season it might take days to complete a carload lot. In the meantime the eggs would spoil, or fail to pass the standard. The market price might also drop.

Prohibit Bad Eggs

The dealers favor a law prohibiting the handling of bad eggs, either buying or selling. They claim it would improve the egg as sold, bring down the price, and help business. It was tried out under the Food Board during the war and proved a success. The Dominion Government now pass the matter on to the provinces for action.

That is, the Federal authorities profess not to have authority to grade an egg as "bad," though they do grade them as No. 1, No. 2, etc.

Another change proposed in regulations is that hereafter no shipment of 100 cases or more of eggs may be made unless it has had Government inspection. Heretofore, this restriction has applied only to shipment from one province to another. A shipment of 99 cases may go unrestricted, but the added case calls for an inspection.

Display Will Increase Fish Sales

The Most Important Factor in Building Up a Fish Business—Appeal to the Eye in An Attractive Manner.

By D. B. DRYSDALE

A LOT of grocers expect a fish business to grow without any cultivation. That is quite as much astray as the farmer who expects a good crop without taking proper care of his ground and cultivating it until it is harvested. According to one of the best authorities in the fish business, display is perhaps the most important of all methods to build up a fish trade. His reasoning is after this manner. Nine families in ten never have a fish on their table and the quickest and easiest way to bring it home to them is to appeal to the eye in an attractive manner. Whole volumes might be written on the question of the value of fish from the standpoint of nutriment, health, or other reasons, but it would be difficult to get a prospective consumer to read it. If we are to learn by the experience of successful farmers of California, Oregon and British Columbia, their products sold because they appealed to the eye and it seems only reasonable that if their success is built up on this basis then the fish business should be treated in like manner.

This is not altogether a matter of theory either. It is a matter of actual fact that as the most fish is sold by the dealers who have the best display in the city of Toronto, any person familiar with the business can assure the reader of this fact as it is one of common knowledge in the fish trade. There is a tremendous field for the live grocer or butcher who decides to handle fish and is open to learn from the experience of the regular fish dealer and it would pay any person large dividends to find out, when in Toronto, where good fish displays can be seen and to make it a point to visit them and take notes.

Of course this is only one of the many features that will go to build a fish trade, but as a starter it is worthy of more than passing note.

Plan Now Being Used to Restore The Sockeye

Vancouver (Special).—A great deal of interest is being taken in the Oregon system of fish hatcheries. Various ones interested have been to Bonneville Hatcheries, near the Columbia Highway, recently and have been thoroughly converted to the "rearing pond" method of developing the fry.

It has been found, for instance, that in the old system the young fry were liberated shortly after hatching, and were simply slaughtered by the trout and larger salmon as they lingered in uncertainty around the spot where they were deposited.

Now the plan is to take a small lake, entirely rid it of all fish life, and then screen both ends and liberate the young fry in this protected pool. They are kept in this pond and fed for a year. Under his method, an eighteen-month-old sockye will be large enough and speedy nough to successfully reach the ocean, where he apparently is well able to look fter himself till he returns in four years a sockeye of commercial size.

Canadians Impressed

The rearing pond method as in use in Oregon has passed from the experimental tages. The Canadian authorities are ow making surveys along the coast with view to locating running water and ake beds suitable for conversion into earing ponds. Streams that were prac-ically barren of fish five years ago witessed runs that swamped the canneries ast year. On the Columbia River the un of salmon was doubled in four years, nd since 1914 that has not been a fail-
re. The British Columbia cannery men re keenly interested in what the govrnment will do toward an early re-tocking of the Fraser in a practical anner.

AX OF TEN CENTS PER POUND PLACED ON NEUTRALIZED BUTTER

Chicago, Jan.—The decision of Attor-ey-General Palmer that neutralized utter made from rancid cream is tax-ble at the rate of 10 cents per pound ay cost packers and butter manufac-rers $500,000,000 a year.

"Eighty per cent. of the butter made the United States is neutralized," an ficial of a butter company said. "Since ost of the butter fat has to be trans-rted from 300 to 1,000 miles to the ntralized butter-making districts, the eam is usually rancid before it arrives the plants. This does not hurt the eam, but before it can be churned it ust be treated with lime to reduce the idity.

"The decision of the Attorney-General ill mean that 80 per cent. of the butter anufactured is to be taxed. The amount revenue to the government could not ickly be figured, but at a guess I ould say it will net a half billion dol-rs a year."

The opinion was rendered by Attorney-eneral Palmer after several weeks' instigation and conference with W. W. illiams of the Department of Agri-lture. The decision is based on the w that says all adulterated butter is be taxed at ten cents per pound.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—There are a number of changes this week in the produce market, both on advancing and declining prices. This market is very active with a good demand in nearly all lines. This market shows more strength with slightly higher prices, due to supplies not being quite sufficient to meet the demands of the packers. Bacon and smoked meats are a little easier in price, due to better supplies being offered, with not quite as big a demand. The feature of the week is the big decline in the prices quoted on lard and shortening, which brings the price down to a level that lard has not been quoted at for some time. Butter is advanced one cent per pound on account of an active market with a big demand both locally and for export. The cheese market also shows added strength. The depletion of the supplies of storage eggs has caused higher prices to be quoted on fresh eggs although the receipts show an increase over the previous week. There is a big demand for eggs, especially new laid eggs. Smaller offerings of poultry with the prospect of bigger demands in the near future, due to the approaching Lenten season, has resulted in higher prices being quoted on poultry. There is a good demand for fish.

Hog Market Stronger

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—A stronger feeling for live hogs prevailed early this week owing to the inability of the supplies offered to meet the demands of the packers. As a result, quotations made here are a little higher than they were a week ago. From $17.25 to $17.50 per cwt. is being paid for live hogs. There are no changes in the quotations on beef. Beef cattle are arriving in only fair supply but sufficient to meet demands and prices are steady.

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS. — Despite the stronger market for live hogs there is an easier feeling in the smoked meat market. This has resulted in a reduction in most lines, amounting to one or two cents per pound. Smoked hams are also a little lower in price. This reduction is due entirely to the bigger offerings on the market with only a fair demand.

Montreal.

EGGS.—There is an increase in the production of eggs for the last week of between 25 and 50 per cent., as compared with the previous week. There is a big demand locally for fresh eggs and on account of the depletion of storage stocks there is a stronger feeling on the market for eggs and prices have advanced. The farmers at country points are being paid from seventy to seventy-five cents per dozen for eggs and they are selling retail in the city at from 85 to 90 cents per dozen.

POULTRY.—A much stronger feeling prevails for poultry with some higher prices quoted. Choice and good turkeys are quoted from three to four cents a pound dearer with smaller offerings on the market. ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—The butter market is holding strong with prices up one to two cents per pound. Some Western butter is arriving but not in sufficient quantities to affect the market. Cheese continues firm and quotations are slightly higher. New laid eggs are arriving more freely but with storage stocks about at an end, quotations on fresh are holding fairly firm. The hog market is in an unsettled condition. Local packers continue to quote lower prices, but the demand from outside packers and butchers is so large under light receipts that prices are held fairly steady. The tendency is, however, that live hogs will be lower. There is no change in cured and cooked meats. Lard and shortening are also unchanged, but the market is inclined to be easy. The fish business is brisk and all lines are well represented. Quotations on pickled fish have declined slightly. Poultry market is firm under a good demand and light receipts.

Hog Market Unsettled

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—A feeling of uncertainty prevails in the market for live hogs. Local packers have been endeavoring to bring down prices for some time, but owing to the demand from outside packers and butchers and the light receipts, they have been unsuccessful in forcing prices down to any great extent. This same condition exists in the market for cattle and the indications are that lower prices will be in evidence in the near future. Dressed meats are unchanged.

TAKE your average profit-margin —about 20 per cent., multiply it by the number of times your Macdonald stock is turned over in the year, and you have your annual gross profit on your original investment—about two or three hundred per cent.

Then figure in the extra profits you make on the 4 to 6 plug overrun in every 10 lb. caddy—and remember that the demand for Macdonald's is constantly on the increase.

Is it worth while to push Macdonald's in your store?

Could you retire in 20 years?

Perhaps you don't want to—but all the same it is a very pleasant feeling to have enough gilt-edged securities tucked away that if your earnings are cut off you haven't the slightest worry.

A few days ago, there came to our office a merchant from a small Western Ontario town. Perhaps his business was not as big as it might have been, but he was pretty shrewd, for he knew that profit was profit only when you had it safely invested in gilt-edged securities.

For twenty years he had quietly invested his monthly savings, getting his information from the Investors' Enquiry Service of THE FINANCIAL POST. We had noticed his frequent letters, but we never knew just how he used them until he dropped in to see us.

Now his financial worries are over, having sold out and gone to live in sunny California. By following the Investors' Enquiry Service as a subscriber he quietly put away an investment that gave him a sure income sufficient to cover all his needs.

The big point is this—savings are not savings until safely invested and bearing interest. There is so much of the average man's earnings that is frittered away in non-essentials, when he might create an estate separate from his business load.

THE FINANCIAL POST points the way to safe, sane investments in sound securities. Through the Investors' Enquiry Service you get the bed-rock facts behind any and all investments. Before you buy—write.

The $5.00 invested in THE FINANCIAL POST service for a year will mean hundreds of dollars to you, if you follow the hints, tips and suggestions in the investment of your profits. When so many have found its pages valuable to them, will you not fill in the coupon and find out for yourself just how valuable THE FINANCIAL POST can be to you?

End This Extravagance, Says Mackenzie King in MACLEAN'S

"There is the greatest need for an end to extravagance, and for the exercise of the strictest economy in the administration of public affairs," says W. L. Mackenzie King in the January 15th issue of MACLEAN'S.

HE adds, further: "The first aim of the Liberal party in Canada to-day is to bring about such co-operation and co-ordination of effort among men and women of liberal aims"—(a small "l" please note)—"and aspirations as will ensure defeat of the combined forces of a reactionary Government, and make possible, in matters of Government, the re-assertion and ultimate triumph of liberal" — (still a small "l")—"principles and policies."

Is This a Message to Mr. Crerar?
Is This a Plea for Union of Farmers and Liberals?

Other Big Features in January 15th MACLEAN'S

There are fifteen other big feature articles, serials, short fiction and regular departments. These include:

"The Human Speedometer"
By Charles Christopher Jenkins.
The story of a Canadian who "times" race-horses as a profession.

"The Hat" By Frederick Niven.
A vivid word-picture of a feature of our West which strikes this war correspondent.

"My Flirtation Ends"
By Mrs. "Margot" Asquith.
Wife of former Premier of Great Britain tells how her eight years' dalliance with Peter ends.

"Our Lost Immigrants" By Miss Agnes C. Laut.
She tells some cold, hard facts, and explains why hundreds of thousands left Canada.

"Scarlet and Gold"
By Colonel George Ham.
Who gives here a few chapters from the romantic history of the Royal North West Mounted Police in earlier days.

"Paying the Doctor to Keep You Well"
By Ethel M. Chapman.
A worth-while and timely article, depicting the work of the Life Protective Association.

"A Canadian Child Poet"
A little bit about twelve-year-old Miss Rae Maltby Verrill, of British Columbia, whose work seems to show promising talent.

Interesting Fiction

"The Big Time Man"
By C. W. Stephens.
A bottling-business romance.

"The Act of God"
By Beatrice Heron-Maxwell.
A near-murderer's escape.

"Jane Ann's Rival, Mabel"
By Archie McKishnie.
A Lenix Ballister episode.

"The City of Peril"
By Arthur Stringer.
A romantic, Bolshevistic serial.

CANNED VEGETABLES LOOK HIGHER

Canned tomatoes, corn and peas which have been selling at prices below the canners' opening prices, have recently developed a firm tone. Some wholesalers, who have had fairly large stocks and were apparently anxious to reduce them, have advanced their prices more in line with canners' quotations. Some of the cheaper brands are also about cleaned up which coupled with the improved movement has caused a stronger feeling on the market.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Oleomargarine Sales are Increasing Daily

Because the merits of this wholesome and economical product are becoming so universally known. But Our Consistent Publicity Makes EXTRA SPECIAL Demand for

Swift's "Premium" and "Gem Nut" Oleomargarine

Our advertising not only points out the purpose and advantages of Oleomargarine, but is driving home these Names. Thousands of housewives have already been convinced why it pays to use only Swift's "Premium" and "Gem Nut," and many more are daily insisting on these famous brands in preference to all others.

This Means Steady Repeat Business for every dealer who links up with our advertising by featuring Swift's Oleomargarine by counter and window displays.

Why Buyers Like to Deal at Some Stores—Why They Avoid Others

YES—I do like to buy at "Blank's Grocery"—it always seems as if THEY wanted ME to deal there.

That's what customers say about the successful store. Now why do they say it?

The goods are right. Yes. The proprietor and the clerks are courteous and know their business. Yes. But there is something more than mere personality about the place—there is the concrete evidence of Service on all sides.

There is proper store decoration. There is cleanliness. There are modern show cases. There are cash registers, account registers, adding machines and proper store lighting. There are, of course, International Dayton Scales (and enough of them), International Dayton Meat Slicers and Cheese Cutters to serve patrons quickly and well. The successful modern store invests in all these proven items in store service—why?

Because they make possible more intelligent buying, they save your time and are visible proofs of the merchant's desire to give a square deal.

International Dayton Scales cut out the "murderous" down weights. You get paid for every fraction of an ounce you weigh.

International Safety Meat Slicers shear with the speed of Electricity—right to the end of the meat, where your profit is.

International Dayton Cheese Cutters save cheese—build up trade—make it profitable. "It weighs and slices—it saves and prices."

So—the "Service Store" is just to itself and customers alike; it gives a full dollars' worth for nothing more or less than a dollar—and it is generally "Internationally" equipped, for upon that equipment modern successful grocery and butcher store service is built.

$2,500.00 IN CASH PRIZES

Are you at work to win your share of the easy money being offered in the great

DAYTON SCALES WORD CONTEST?

It is open to merchants and their clerks in Canada and Newfoundland of the five kinds of stores that use scales, meat-slicers or cheese-cutters. If you haven't seen the details in our trade paper announcements, write for information and entry coupons. How many words can you make up from the letters that spell Dayton Scales? Begin your list now. Contest closes March 15th.

BRAND

EVAPORATED

MILK

Effective Feb. 5, 1921

PRICE DECLINES

of 50c to $1.00 per case, according to Brands and Territories.

Your Jobber has particulars.

Why it improves all cooking and lowers the cost

St. Charles Brand (the milk with the cream left in) is so rich and creamy that it requires so much less of it in comparison to ordinary milk in recipes, etc., to give an improved creamy flavor that it soon proves its greater economy to the housewife.

It is also so rich in butter fats (over double the amount in fresh milk) that it requires little or no butter in recipes which call for butter.

Tell your customers these facts—urge them to try their favorite recipes the improved Borden way and you can depend upon it that they will be steady users of "the milk that cuts the cost of cooking."

WE send men from town to town every month to help retailers make profit-winning fruit displays in their windows. Such displays are the life of a fruit-business.

Sunkist crews work daily in all parts of the United States and Canada. When one of the "boys" enters your store, be sure to greet him as a business friend. He's paid by us to serve you.

This is just one of the many ways we help grocers. And there are many other ways, as well.

Ask the C. F. G. E.

WE have a wide variety of material for merchants who sell fruit. It's all been carefully tested for effectiveness in retail stores. Write for our free sets of Sunkist cards, "strings" and banners for your counters and windows. You'll find it worth while.

We'll gladly send you free "cuts"—for use in newspapers, price-lists and on letter-heads—and free Sunkist Lantern-slides with your name in striking colors.

Write us your problems. We've an experienced retail man whose job is to give you the benefit of his thirty-six years behind the counter. His name is Paul Findlay. Hundreds of grocers welcome his brass-tacks talks.

—Why We Do It

THE C. F. G. E. is a co-operative agency. Years ago, when haphazard marketing nearly ruined the citrus industry, it was formed by thousands of California orange and lemon growers to sell their fruit at actual cost. And now a fraction of a penny per dozen is given by these growers to create a fund for aiding merchants to handle these fruits at a safe profit. Wise co-operation—nothing else.

Anybody who sells or grows California oranges and lemons is entitled to our help. Last year over 10,000 retailers asked for our services; and they profited. Were you one of them?

To bring you more profit—and to lessen your selling costs — our Dealer Service Department works always for your benefit. And we're ready to help you as much as you'll allow—so it's entirely up to you! Call on us any time. Write us today or mail the coupon.

Quality is Secret of Big Fish Sales

The First Essential in the Conduct of a Successful Fish Trade is the Necessity to Always Have Fresh Supplies—Montreal Firm Sells From Twenty to Twenty-five Thousand Pounds of Fish Every Week

By Staff Correspondent, CANADIAN GROCER

"QUALITY is by far the most important factor in the sale of fish," said J. E. Gatehouse, the anager of Henry Gatehouse & Son's sh and poultry store, Dorchester Street, ontreal, when speaking to a Canadian rocer representative about selling of sh. "There is no business," continued r. Gatehouse, "that is as easily killed careless handling as the fish business. o matter how cheap fish is, if it is t fresh it cannot be sold. We sell on average from twenty to twenty-five ousand pounds of fish every week. To ep this up we must be able to guartee quality both to our own satisfacn, and to the satisfaction of our cusmers. I have found that when a firm tablishes a name for the best quality fresh fish and the customers have ith in the merchant, then price is only minor consideration. At that even the arest fish is cheap compared with ner meats.

Killing Fish Sales

"First of all, the merchant himself ust be absolutely sure that the source m which he buys his fish is perfectly reliable, and be confident that the fish he purchases is all that is claimed for it. Secondly, he must have things so arranged that the supply of fish turns over quickly, and see to it that he does not buy more than he requires. To do this he must develop the business slowly. He must have regular customers and to have and to hold them means that he must always give them quality. If a customer once gets a bad piece of fish, it is not like getting a bad pound of butter. They do not simply sent it back and ask for another piece. In nine cases out of ten they will throw the fish away and refuse to buy any more from any merchant for some time, depending on how long it takes them to forget the bad piece they once had. In that way the merchant who sold the stale fish is not only spoiling his own trade but spoiling it for the merchant who does not sell doubtful fish. Accidents, however, will happen in the best arranged establishments.

System Means Quality

"In order to get quality in fish a system of buying and selling must be arranged. Perhaps an explanation of our system may help others to perfect their fish departments. We are in touch by wire continually with from ten to twenty fish depots on the Atlantic coast, so that if one depot has had a bad catch on account of the storms or like hindrances we can fall back on another source of supply. Supposing the fishing vessels come in on Wednesday. Then on the Monday previous we get a wire from the depot telling us what they expect the catch to be. We reply what we are in the market to buy and on Tuesday the wire comes confirming our order and relaying the advance information from the fishing fleet. Wednesday the ships come in and our order is packed and a wire is sent to us telling us what is being shipped. This supply is put on the train that night and sent by express to Montreal. It travels all that night and on Thursday morning our trucks are at the station to meet the trains which arrive at from seven in the morning up till nine. As we have received the wire stating what has been shipped, we are able to prepare the store to receive the shipment and have already booked orders for perhaps a big part of the shipment.

A splendid display of fish that meant increased sales, as well as much favorable comment for its tempting arrangement and artistic decoration.

Five Deliveries a Day

"As soon as the fish is in the store the staff starts to parcel up the orders on file and in some cases the fish have to be cleaned. When the orders are put up they are put in one of seven bins, each of which represents a district of the city. We have five deliveries a day, beginning at seven a.m. and seven motor delivery cars. The drivers have simply to take the parcels from the bin and start out. This system does not mean any more work for the clerks and it lessens the work of the drivers, also saving a lot of time. It will then be seen that by this system we are able to have the fresh fish on the table of our customers twenty-four hours after it leaves the water. We are therefore not one bit doubtful of its quality. Too much stress cannot be laid upon quality where fish is concerned.

Will Pay for Quality

"In my opinion it is foolhardy for a fish merchant to advertise his business on a basis of price. The quality of an article is remembered long after the price is forgotten. People are willing to pay a little more for quality and in the case of fish it costs more to insure quality than it does when the merchant takes a chance, as we pay express rates instead of freight. Perhaps, too, there is a suggestion of quality in the higher price that appeals to a large number of people."

Haddock and Cod Popular

Mr. Gatehouse states that haddock and cod have proved to be the most popular fresh fish among his customers and that in the winter months there is a big demand for finnan haddie. This store handles nothing but fish, poultry, eggs and vegetables and specialties in these lines. Big, glass-topped ice boxe display the fish in the front store and i the window a big tin tray with runnin water makes an attractive display o oysters in the shell, lobsters an shrimps. In the back store there is refrigerating plant and the necessar equipment for cleaning and dressing th fish. This firm has made a special stud of the sale and handling of fish and Mr. Gatehouse stated the secret of th development of the business is in qua ity alone.

Coffee Market Stronger and Higher

Lowest Level Was Reached at the End of December—Since the First of the Year Prices Have Been Steadily Climbing

COFFEES apparently reached the bottom level at the end of the year, as since then the market has been stronger and higher. The low price level that coffees had reached at the close of the year was considered by importers to be an artificial one, attributed partly to the fact that the United States importers were forced to liquidate their stocks and partly that they were anxious to clean up before stock-taking.

Since the first of the year there has been a continuous rise, amounting to about two cents per pound on good quality Santos and from four to five cents on fine quality Mexican, Colombia an Maracaibos. Low water on the Ma dalena River in Colombia has result in temporarily cutting off supplies Colombia and Venezuela coffees. Th condition undoubtedly accounts for th fact that these coffees have advance more rapidly in price than others.

The quality of coffee being shippe from Brazil is very irregular and goo coffees are commanding a substanti premium. It is estimated that stock held in Canada by coffee roasters ar the smallest on record. Business in general way is considered active an shows steady gains in consumption.

Good Friday Sees Heaviest Fish Sales

Manager of Fish Department in R. Barron, Ltd., Toronto, Believes That the Real National Fish Day is Good Friday—the Opportunity for Every Grocer to Make Fish Sales Worth While

"OUR customers do not worry about the price as long as they are getting the finest quality obtainable," remarked Bert Greenaway, manager of the fish department of R. Barron, Ltd., Yonge Street, Toronto, to a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day. Barron, Ltd., conduct a high-class fish trade, and make a feature of only the best grades of fish. Their sales in the aggregate run into big numbers. "Ninety per cent. of our fish business is done over the telephone," Mr. Greenaway intimated. "We sell fish all the time. Of course there are seasons when there is more demand than the regular sales from week to week, but we find that there are a great many people who make fish a regular article of diet, and are weekly customers for the same.

Good Friday Sales

"Our biggest fish day in the whole year, and what I believe is the real national fish day, is Good Friday. We sell more fish on the day before Good Friday than on any one occasion in the entire twelve months. Last year at this time we disposed of ten tons of fish, an apparently very large amount, but the demand for fish for Good Friday consumption assumes very large proportions the day before. Every person, irrespective of creed, seems to eat fish on Good Friday, and I believe it has become our real national fish day."

A Chance for Every Grocer

There is a splendid opportunity for every retail grocer to take advantage of this occasion to boost the sales of fish. If he sells but little fish throughout the year, the day before Good Friday presents a chance to make fish sales really worth while, and the man who puts in a good stock will have little difficulty in getting them disposed of. As Mr. Greenaway states, "everyone eats fish on Good Friday," and there is no reason why every grocer should not make a profitable turnover in preparation for this day.

Discussing the sale of fish throughout the Lenten season, Mr. Greenaway told the representative of Canadian Grocer that there was a certain amount of increased buying, but their experience has been that fish sell well throughout the entire year, and Lent sees very little difference in the consumption, apart from the heavy sales on the one big day, as already referred to in this article.

Some Weekly Fish Sales

"I find that if you give the people the best in fish that you can secure, your trade is assured, and people will purchase fish just as consistently as any line in the grocery trade. We bring in a lot of our fish direct from the sea, and in this way believe we have them fresher, enabling us to give better quality. We do not handle any storage fish at all. This has been the first winter that we have had fresh spring salmon, but we are bringing it direct from British Columbia, and we are disposing of from four to five hundred pounds of it every week, in spite of the fact that the price is a fairly high one. Sales of this amount of such a high-priced fish proves my contention that if you give the public quality, they will not grumble about the cost. We are also bringing in fresh cured boneless haddies, and selling them at a figure that possibly in the ordinary run of prices for haddies represents a high quotation, but in reality is good value in view of the top quality.

Illustrating the fish department of Barron, Yonge St., Toronto, where weekly fish sales are heavy.

800 Pounds of Haddies

"Our sales in these special boneless haddies total around eight hundred pounds every week, and very frequently, if it was possible to get more of them, we could very readily dispose of them."

Fresh smelts from Chatham, N.B., find a ready sale in Barron's. Mr. Greenaway told Canadian Grocer that these smelts are big sellers. On the occasion of the visit of the Canadian Grocer representative he was displaying them on the counter. The fact that they were out where people could see them sold a goodly quantity of the same. Two hundred pounds of fresh lobster is the record sale per week of this fish in Barron's fish department. Lobster at this time is a high-priced article, and is classed more or less as a luxury, for the reason that at present it is bringing one dollar a pound.

Display is Valuable

In spite of the fact that the bulk of the fish business in Barron's, Ltd., is done over the telephone, the value of display is not lost sight of. Mr. Greenaway pays particular attention to the window in this department, and situated as the Barron store is, a good deal of catch trade is attracted. "We sell fish all the time," Mr. Greenaway reiterated. "We have our regular telephone customers, and, in addition, we show our various kinds of fish in the window. If we have anything special we display it, and a good display means sales every time."

TEN THOUSAND TONS A YEAR OF MAPLE SUGAR AND SYRUP

Ottawa — Approximately 20,000,000 pounds of maple sugar and syrup are produced in Eastern Canada annually, according to a pamphlet just issued by the Department of Agriculture. Of this quantity more than two-thirds is produced in the Province of Quebec, while Ontario is reported to yield 5,000,000 pounds. The Maritime Provinces produce half a million pounds annually, and the production of the other Provinces is practically nil. It is estimated that the value of the yearly manufacture of sugar and syrup approximately is two million dollars.

Sells 1,000 Pounds of Haddies Weekly

Big Opportunity for Retailers to Boost Sales of This Valuable Fish—A "National Fish Day" Sign Suggested For Dealers' Windows—Food Value of Fish.

Written for CANADIAN GROCER by A. H. BRITTAIN.

THE fish business covers so many important phases, and is capable of unlimited development, that it is almost impossible for me to give you a message which would give the industry justice on such short notice.

Again I would impress upon the readers of your paper the great asset which we have in our fisheries on the Atlantic coast. When we talk of a sixty million dollar industry it really does not indicate anything like the great possibilities, and again, fish being a cheap food the tonnage represented by this sixty million dollars is enormous. With encouragement and co-operation from the public and the dealers, and a widespread advertising campaign, there is no reason whatever why this industry should not be one hundred and sixty million dollars in a short time instead of sixty millions as it is at the present time.

Value of the Finnan Haddie

The retail and wholesale trade who read Canadian Grocer are perhaps more interested in something which they can merchandise at a profit. With this in view I would particularly send a message to the retail grocery and provision merchants, urging upon them the wisdom of featuring smoked finnan haddies as one of the principal articles of fish food. Smoked finnan haddies are to-day a staple fish food, and I don't think this article requires any introduction to the general public. Neither does it require very much advertising, as every time a householder buys a finnan haddie there is created a permanent user of this delicious sea food.

Few people in the inland parts of Canada know exactly what a finnan haddie is. A great many of them are under the impression that finnan haddie is the name of a certain kind of fish. I think it would be interesting for readers who have not given this any thought to be told that a finnan Haddie is a smoked Atlantic haddock, one of the best all round fishes available. As I have said, a haddock smoked is known as finnan haddie; a haddock fresh and used by the householder, fried or boiled, is a delicate fish diet, and at the same time haddock is one of the most reasonably priced fish on the market to-day. There is more real value behind a finnan haddie diet than in any food available at the present time, and now that the public are commencing to look at the value of a dollar bill and see how much it will buy, it is, or it should be, the duty of the retail distributor to help educate the public as to the food value attached to this product, and not let them feel because finnan haddies are cheap that there is naturally something wrong with them. I know of some retail grocers who handle from 500 to 1,000 pounds of finnan haddies every week, and when one realizes that this is a steady turnover, it is something worth while any retailer featuring and pushing for all he is worth.

Remember National Fish Day

A weekly turnover of a product like this is one of the most profitable articles to handle, and every time a retailer sells a finnan haddie to the consumer a permanent customer is created. Let every retail grocer and provision dealer feature Canada's National Fish Day, February 9. If you have no sign, put up a hand-made sign in your store, and see that every one of your customers eats some class of fish on that day. There are now many ways in which fish can be purchased, such as canned, smoked, salted, fresh, and even the old-fashioned hard-dried codfish is still available. If every retailer throughout Canada will boost National Fish Day, February 9, he will be doing a service to the hard fishermen, who, at the present time, deserve every consideration and help possible.

Executive of Can. Wholesale Grocers Meet Next Week

The executive of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association will meet in Toronto next Wednesday in the offices of the secretary, A. C. Pyke, in the Board of Trade Building, Yonge and Front Sts., Toronto. Several matters of importance are to be discussed, including the question of the standardization of weights, in regard to such commodities as rice, beans and table salt. The fact that there have been repeated increases in freight rates and no advance in parcel post rates, is to be discussed by the executive and some action will likely be taken. Other matters to come before the executive will be the deciding where the next convention will be held. Several cities have extended an invitation.

Heavy Crop California Oranges

This Year's Yield Will Be About 50,000 Carloads—Crop Will Run Mostly to Smaller Sizes—Heavy Increase in Freight Rates Tends to Keep Prices Up

"THE present season's California orange crop will, unless unforeseen weather occurs, be in excess of any movement since the banner crop in 1916-17," stated J. E. Brownlow, district manager California Fruit Growers' Exchange, Toronto, to Canadian Grocer.

"The central and northern California crops have been pretty well forwarded, and the total shows 25 per cent. more navel oranges than last year, the movement being in excess of 4,000 cars at the end of December."

Reports indicate that navel oranges are running to smaller sizes than usual, which shippers feel is an aid, inasmuch as it enables merchants to sell at moderate prices. It is estimated that the California navel crop will total 50,000 carloads and the Valencia crop will run 21,000 carloads, about 50 per cent. greater than last year. Other miscellaneous varieties will total in the neighborhood of 2,000 cars.

The California Fruit Growers' Exchange considers that the high freight rates are apt to operate against the successful handling of this year's crop. In two and one-half years the rates on a car load of oranges have increased $337. In addition to this enormous increase in freight rates, the growers have produced the present crop under the highest labor and material costs in the history of the industry.

FOREIGN INQUIRIES

2688. Trading on alimentary products with France. — The sole representative for the United Kingdom and the colonies of the largest French firm dealing in alimentary products wishes to establish an exporting and importing business with Canada. This firm, which is specially interested in selling high-grade qualities of preserves, chocolates, sardines, etc., are also buyers of dried fruits, canned or smoked fish, fresh apples, and powdered dried fish for fertilizers.

An attractive interior view in the store of Wm. Rowntree & Sons, Dundas St. West, Toronto. This view is part of the shelving behind the counters, showing the method adopted by the store in carrying out their idea of displaying jams in quantities.

Making Jam Sales Count this Season

The Opportunity is Now Before the Grocer to Increase His Sales of Jams at a Time When Housewives Are Looking for Something Different From the Home-made Varieties—What Some Grocers Have Done

THE season is now approaching when the fruit cellar is taking on a lean appearance, and the housewife is looking around for something to help out her fast diminishing supply of preserves. There are certain kinds of fresh fruits to be sure, but they are hardly adapted for making tarts, for hubby's toast in the mornings or for the children's "piece" when they flock in after school, ravenously hungry.

The housewife then naturally turns to the grocer to make some suggestion to help her solve this problem that she is confronted with. The merchant being alive to the situation is already prepared for the annual question by having displayed in the store in a prominent position, piles of jams and marmalade in various size containers.

The Real Time to Sell

"We always consider that the proper time to sell jams is during the latter part of the winter months and during the early spring season," stated H. R. Rowntree, manager of the grocery department of Wm. Rowntree & Sons, Dundas Street West, Toronto, to Canadian Grocer. "Of course there are quantities sold throughout the entire year, but it is the first few months of the year when the largest sales are made. We recognize the fact that the housewife's supply of preserved fruit is becoming exhausted, and we aim to keep this fact before her, by displaying in the store and the windows quantities of jams in the different size packages. In my opinion, to sell jams in any quantity, it must be displayed in quantity. A window must be filled up, and large piles of it placed around the store. This gives the customer the right impression, and she cannot look at the display without the thought coming to her mind, that her supply of preserves is fast disappearing and that a jar or a can of jam is just the thing to make the supply of home preserves hang out until the fresh fruits come in.

"Another thing I consider is a good idea in pushing the sale of jams is to have an odd price. This need not necessarily be a cut price. In fact, often an extra cent or two can be added without interfering with the volume of sales. The odd price is an attraction and gives the idea that the goods are being sold at a reduction, whether it is the case or not."

Sales of jams in the Wm. Rowntree & Sons store for the past two or three years have averaged two carloads a year. This large turnover is attributed entirely to display both in the window and in the store, especially during the winter and spring season.

Selling the Large Package

There are some merchants who believe it is a good policy in making sales on jams to suggest the larger packages, especially the four-pound tins. This fact was recently demonstrated to a Canadian Grocer representative during a visit to the store of R. H. Robinson, Orangeville, Ont. It might be well to state that Orangeville is a country town, whose business is drawn almost entirely from the surrounding farming community and whose population is composed mostly of the class called "retired farmers."

Merchants carrying on business in similar locations have considered this fact as a handicap in selling jams, as the farming community is not usually considered heavy buyers of this commodity. Notwithstanding this fact, R. H. Robinson has built up an extensive business on jams, usually confining his stock to one or two brands. During the visit of a Canadian Grocer representative, orders were being assembled on the counters and invariably every order contained a four-pound tin of pure jam. Commenting upon the apparent heavy sales on jams, the writer was informed by P. Harding, the manager, who, pointing to the windows, said, "We consider the windows the best advertisement we can get for anywhere near the cost. Windows to my mind are the eyes of the store, and we aim to keep them frequently changed. Displays of jams are put in at this season, and when a customer asks for jams, it is our policy to sell a four-pound tin. We do not always wait for the customer to ask for jam,

MUST FOLLOW MARKETS

INVESTIGATIONS prove that some retail grocers are not marking down their stocks in line with replacement values. Many retailers are, and after all is said and done, the ones that are pursuing this course, will be financially ahead. Canadian Grocer again repeats what it has said in its columns now for some months, the merchant is well advised, and must if he is to carry on successfully in the future, mark down his goods, on the basis of present day costs.

Making inquiry among a number of grocers in different parts of the Dominion, it is learned that most merchants are selling staple lines on the basis of present invoices, but on a great many other articles of foodstuffs, that possibly do not come under the heading of staples, and yet are every day being asked for, the merchant is holding out for his profits, on the price that he paid for the goods some months ago. He complains that he cannot sell these lines, and it is not fair for him to take a loss on them. He is entitled, he maintains, to a reasonable profit on the figure that he paid for them. But people will not buy them at the old price. They are looking for reductions and insist upon them.

The wise merchant will get rid of these goods just as quickly as possible—the quicker the better for all concerned. He will do well to mark them to the very minimum of profit or even to cost and under, in order that they might be moved, and replaced with goods at the new prices. Every article in the store should be placed at prices that mean sales in these days. If the retailer follows this course, his loss will be quick and final, instead of spreading over weeks and months, encouraging him to think that business is bad, and nobody will buy.

ACTIVITY IN JANUARY

REPORTS from wholesale firms for the month of January indicate that the grocery business has experienced a prosperous month for the beginning of 1921. If the first month is any indication of what the year holds for the grocery business, 1921 should prove to be a splendid year for the grocers throughout Canada.

The manager of one of the wholesale fruit and importing firms of Montreal in conversation with a CANADIAN GROCER representative said: "January has been the most prosperous month in the history of our business. The demand for all our lines has been excellent with quick movements of all stocks. During the weeks after Christmas the demand for fruit kept up well, and as a result we were able to give the retail merchants full advantage of buying often on the primary market. The result has been that prices have reached new low levels. At the first of the year many spoke of the hard times in store in 1921, but there has been no indication of these, and the old cry is forgotten and business has steadily picked up until the end of the month shows a decided improvement over any month in the previous year."

ADULTERATED FOODSTUFF

RECENTLY a merchant was fined thirty-five dollars and costs for selling adulterated honey. The conviction was made under the new Food and Drug Act which was passed at the last session of the Dominion Parliament.

This instance again brings home the lesson that merchants cannot be too careful in making purchases of honey, butter and other foodstuffs. From time to time Canadian Grocer has pointed out the result of buying from dealers who drive up to the store and offer goods at a lower price than the legitimate dealers. In nearly every instance where convictions have been made under the Pure Food Act, the merchant has stated that the article was bought from strangers. This proves the fact that merchants should buy from reliable sources, where the purity of the article cannot be questioned.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

THE wiser merchants are cutting their prices in many instances more in line with wholesale prices and in consequence customers are gaining more confidence and sales are increasing.

Canada's Problem in Marketing Fish

Over Three Hundred Species of Fish Are Caught in Canadian Waters, But of These, Only About Fifty Varieties Are Marketed and Only Twenty or Thirty Well Known

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL.—Prof. E. E. Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries of the Dominion, speaking recently on "Our Dominion Fisheries—Their Present Condition and Future Development," pointed out that in the public's estimation there is always a note of uncertainty about fish and fishing. "A fish story" has become a synonym for a myth. "Even St. Peter," he pointed out, "said, 'I go afishing.' He did not say, 'I go to catch fish or I am going to catch some fish.'

Canadian Fisheries No Uncertainty

"This note of uncertainty, however, is not present," said Mr. Prince, "when we speak of one of Canada's great natural resources, fishing. The fish are there, we know that they have been there for at least four hundred years and will likely always be there in the same abundance. We know that we can catch them. We know that they are multiplying steadily, but in order to take full advantage of this bounty of nature our chief concern is how are we going to succeed in marketing without waste what we have for simply the taking."

Avoiding Waste of Fish

Prof. Prince proceeded to point out that there were over three hundred different species of fish caught in abundance in Canadian waters. Of these perhaps only fifty are marketed and only about twenty or thirty species are well known. The rest are practically wasted. European countries have learned to use and appreciate fish for which there is no market in Canada. As an example, he spoke of the eel, for which many people have an abhorrence. Yet in France this fish is served up as a delicacy and Americans and Canadians over there have tasted this dish, not knowing what it was, and expressed appreciation of its flavor. In cases like this the people of Canada have to be educated not only to use these species but how to serve them.

The Problem of Marketing

"There is a great field for improvement," said Mr. Prince, "in the manner and facilities for marketing fish in Canada. In the first place, although our fishermen have been plying their art for many years they have not yet learned how to properly handle fish when once they are caught. Secondly, Canada needs more ports with better equipment for handling and transhipping the supply of fish. These lessons can be easily learned from some of the small fishing towns in England where the catch is handled speedily and with the utmost economy. There is a big opportunity too in Canada for improvement in the transportation facilities for fish. A fish-train should have a certain right of way, that it has in some European countries. This would lessen the losses and give our people in the interior of Canada better grades of fish. The rates for express and freight on fish should be just as low as possible, since primarily fish is very cheap and in order to give our people the full benefit of nature's gift everything should be done to put it on the market as cheaply as possible.

Advantages of a Bigger Demand

"There seems to be one great remedy for all these points and that is a bigger consumption of fish. This can be accomplished by every man, whether he is in the fish business or not doing all in his power to popularize the use of fish, because, as Canadians, our fishing industry is our common heritage and it is to our advantage to do everything in our power to advance it. If the consumption of fish is increased the cost per pound will be less since it costs almost as much to market half of the catch as it would to put it all on the market. Then, too, if the industry were developed to its full extent, or even to a greater extent, its power to impress those in authority with the importance of better facilities and privileges in transportation would be greater and better service would result.

Cultivating a Bigger Demand

"To accomplish our aim to increase the consumption of fish in Canada, each one of us should begin at home and use on our own tables more of this cheap, nourishing food. We should remember our national fish days and celebrate them and then remind our neighbor of it. We should give more publicity to these days set apart as days when fish should be a part of the menu at every Canadian table. It is not propaganda on the part of those interested in the fish business but Canadian propaganda for the advancement of one of Canada's greatest and richest resources that has no fear of being depleted and that has not nearly reached its peak of development or revenue to our common treasury. Big results can be obtained by both personal and public effort.

"Many people, particularly city people, have a dislike for preparing fish or to their neighbors cooking fish and for that reason I believe that there is a big opportunity for developing to a far greater extent our fish-canning industry. British Columbia owes a great part of her wealth to this industry." At this point the speaker gave figures showing the big development of this industry in our Pacific province and the great wealth that had been derived from it. He pointed out that otherwise it would have been impossible for Canada to take advantage of the salmon fishing and that Eastern Canada would never have been able to enjoy fresh salmon from the western coast. "This," Mr. Prince continued, "I believe to be one solution to the problem of marketing without waste a far greater amount of the fish caught in Canadian waters.

Prepared Fish Very Popular

"It seems to me that it is not a case of forcing fish on our people, they want it but they want to get it served to them in the handiest manner possible. We can see this in the case of other lines, for instance cereals. The great popularity of prepared breakfast foods is a proof that the people want their food prepared for them. If they can buy a particular line of foodstuff in package, it seems that the packaged line will be the most popular and I believe the same to be true in fish. A woman will complain about paying twenty-five cents a pound for finnan haddie, perhaps she is right, it could be cheaper, but she will pay thirty to fifty cents for a little pot of prepared fish for sandwiches in which there is only a small fraction of a pound. Yet she is satisfied, she wanted it prepared and she is willing to pay for it. People do like fish, it is becoming more popular all the time but it seems that they want to be relieved of the trouble of preparing it. If this is true Canada should forge ahead, not only in the canning industry but in other methods of preparing her great supply of fish for the market."

Prof. Prince then gave figures to show the food value of fish. He stated that reports from research at Cambridge University showed that herring had only a slightly lower percentage of fats and proteins that has beef steak. Fish is a highly nutritious food.

CURRENT NEWS OF THE WEEK

Canadian Grocer Will Appreciate Items of News from Readers for This Page

QUEBEC

W. Finlay is managing temporarily the grocery store of the late E. J. Quinn, Montreal, who was killed a few weeks ago in an automobile accident in this city. It is not definitely decided yet what is to be done with the store as the estate has not yet been settled.

Chas. Chapman has opened this week a specialty store in the provision line at the corner of Dorchester Street and Beaver Hall Hill, Montreal. This store will carry potted beans, hams, cheese and English delicacies. The character of the store is indicated by the sign that now hangs above the window, "A Little Bit of Old Chelsea."

W. G. Patrick & Co., Ltd., have opened their new offices at 128 Bleury Street, Montreal, in the Southam Building. W. J. Lafave is covering the retail grocery trade in the city and R. C. Blackburn, formerly of Winnipeg, is calling on the wholesale, manufacturing biscuit and confectionery factories. W. H. Rick is also on the staff of this firm in Montreal and is chiefly engaged in work throughout the Province of Quebec.

ONTARIO

Wm. G. Hutchinson, Toronto, has sold to Harry W. Scott.

J. & A. Dalley, Toronto, Ont., have sold their business to A. Hodges.

W. B. Stringer, fruit broker, Toronto, left last week on an extended trip to Italy. He was accompanied by Mrs. Stringer.

Bert Smith, Sheridan Avenue, Toronto, was arrested recently, charged with the theft of wax candles and lye to the value of $50, from the store of William Wilson and Sons, 155 Sheridan avenue. He is said to have gained access to the store by a rear door.

The death occurred at his home, 593 Euclid Ave., Toronto, of James Sargant, secretary of the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada for the past forty years. He was known all over Canada by travelling salesmen. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, as well as by a brother.

Henrietta Weir, Ontario street, Toronto, is charged with defrauding grocers in that city. Her scheme, it is stated, was to enter a store and order a quantity of groceries. Part of these she asked to be sent c.o.d., while she herself carried all her arms would hold, so as, as she put it, to lighten the load of the delivery man. When the delivery man called at the address with the other groceries, he was told that nobody by that name lived there. In this manner five grocers were defrauded before the woman was caught.

Why the Cash and Carry Plan is Now Adopted

J. E. Hill, general merchant, Ancaster, Ont., has recently decided to place his business on the cash and carry basis. In announcing this fact to his customers he has had delivered in his neighborhood handbills which read as follows:

"STOP PAYING ANOTHER MAN'S EXPENSES—AFTER JANUARY 14.

This store will be run on a cash and carry basis with quality and service.

Delivery and stationery is a big item, and the consumer pays for it.

We can cut out overhead expenses to one half. With credit there are losses, and must be a greater margin put on goods to meet the same. 90 per cent of credit is more a habit than a necessity, and you pay big interest for the privilege.

With cash and carry you see what you are buying, and it pays big interest, and the transaction is finished when you leave the store.

Evidence is better than talk. Pay cash and save money.

TRAVELLERS' MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY ELECT OFFICERS

Officers and trustees of the Commercial Travellers' Mutual Benefit Society of Toronto were recently elected for 1921, as follows:

President, Chas. S. Parsons; vice-president, S. M. Sterling; treasurer, S. R. Wicket; secretary, Richard Ivens; trustees for Toronto, Robert Forbes, W. J. Sykes, R. Maxwell, J. Burns, J. Curtis, L. R. Arnett, A. J. Tipping, E. Fielding and H. L. Willmott.

The report for the year 1920 was presented by the president and adopted. Th total assets are now $194,712 as against $174,369 a year ago. $342,000 new insurance was written during the year compared with $257,000 written in 1919, an increase of over $200,000, after deducting $33,500 paid in death claims during the year.

Cancel Insurance Policies on Stocks Of Tobacco Leaf

London, Ont., Feb. 2.—Tobacco growers all through this district got an unpleasant surprise on Monday when insurance companies holding policies on stocks of leaf stored in barns announced that they had cancelled them. No reason is given for this action but it is believed to have resulted from the recent case in Raleigh township where a farmer and his wife were sent for trial on a charge of having burned their tobacco and then tried to collect the insurance. It is estimated that about ten million pounds of tobacco is held by various growers in this section and many of them are decidedly uneasy. Buyers have just started making their purchases and are paying prices varying from 30 to 35 cents for flue cured tobacco. This quotation in many cases will not be more than enough to enable the grower to break even owing to high wages paid to help. There is a tendency on the part of some farmers to hold back for high prices.

Presentation to Secretary of the Guelph Grocers

The retail grocers of Guelph, Ont., held their annual banquet last week, and as usual the event was greatly enjoyed by all present. The chair was taken by the president, Charles Borden, and the interesting feature of the evening was the presentation to the secretary of the association, E. J. Drake. After reading an address expressing appreciation of the excellent work done by him during the year, and telling that it was largely due to his energy and progressiveness that that association has become the fine organization that it is today, Archie Bennalick presented Mr. Drake with a very handsome club bag. The presentation was suitably acknowledged by the recipient.

Alvar Simpson, of the Simpson Co., wholesale grocers, Guelph, gave an address on the subject of trade organization. George W. Walker, of Guelph, and Mr. Orr, representing the E. W. Gillette Co., also spoke.

Following the banquet and speeches, progressive euchre was played, the prizes being won by Sam Wiggins and Mr. Stewart.

Dominion Fisheries Now Has a New Chief Inspector

Vancouver.—With the retirement on December 31 of Col. F. H. Cunningham, late chief inspector of Dominion fisheries for British Columbia, this officer established a record of over thirty-seven years' uninterrupted service in the one Government department.

Col. Cunningham, during this long term of office, has held a variety of appointments, but always in connection with the regulation and development of Canadian fisheries.

The new Chief Inspector of Dominion Fisheries, Vancouver, B.C.

His work is being taken up by one who has worked with Col. Cunningham and whose appointment to the post vacated is a source of general satisfaction to those vitally interested in the success of British Columbia's third greatest industry. Major J. A. Motherwell has to his credit long commercial and official experience. Much is expected of him.

Charles H. Howell, representing the Kraft-McLaren Cheese Company, of Montreal, was on an extended business trip to Winnipeg, Manitoba, and renewed acquaintances with their Western representatives, Richardson, Green, Limited. Mr. Howell interviewed several of the wholesalers and retailers while in the city and was very much pleased with the confidence shown by the trade. He feels very optimistic regarding their future trade relations.

MAY MAKE PROPRIETOR PUT HIS NAME ON STORE WINDOW

The Vancouver branch of the Retail Merchants' Association is going to make an attempt to make it obligatory for grocers to put the proprietor's name in the window. This is, of course, aimed at the foreign, more especially Oriental, owners, who operate at present under such firm styles as City Grocery, Sunset Grocery, etc.

Chinatown Styles In Equipping This Grocery Store

Vancouver. — The Granville Grocery Company (Chinese) have equipped their store in the fashion of the general stores in Chinatown. The most noticeable departure is the gallery which runs around three sides of the narrow store above the counter. In other words, the shelves stand where the counter usually stands in a grocery store, and a long opening, or "wicket," in the shelves serves as a counter. Against the wall there are the usual shelves.

Whatever other features this arrangement may have, it certainly permits of an unusual amount of shelving in a very small and narrow store. Besides the usual shelving on the wall, the goods are both displayed on the shelves in the gallery facing the public, and stored on the gallery shelves in front of the clerk.

When a Canadian Grocer representative was in the store, it was accommodating about all the customers that it could. The prices are cut quite close on all lines, and all the business is cash. All the customers were white customers. There is no sentiment to the consumer.

Managers of Western Grocers Have Conference

A conference of the branch managers of Western Grocers, Limited, wholesalers, of which W. P. Riley is the president and general manager, took place last week. The company now has thirteen branches, one in Ontario, at Port Arthur; two in Manitoba, Winnipeg and The Pas; five in Saskatchewan, at Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Yorkton and North Battleford; two in Alberta, at Edmonton and Lethbridge, and three in British Columbia, at Cranbrook, Nelson and Vancouver. The financial report is expected to be very favorable for 1920. The company has written their merchandise down to a replacement value.

Representatives in Town

The representatives of the company who were in Winnipeg included H. Crawford, of Yorkton; R. G. Griege, of Lethbridge; W. A. Blair, of Moose Jaw, and W. H. Kennedy, of Regina.

Other managers of the company who were also in the city included W. S. Stewart, of Edmonton; A. J. Schell, of Cranbrook; T. H. Caudwell, of Cranbrook; J. D. Sullivan, of Port Arthur; A. Badenoch, of Vancouver; W. A. Campbell, of North Battleford, and M. H. Salstead, of The Pas.

Managers who have come to the city agree that business has been quieter than usual in all parts of the West. At some points on the prairies trade has been nearly normal, and business conditions have not been unduly disturbed.

Mr. Riley stated that the decline in quotations had necessitated the writing down of the inventory to a large amount, and he calculated that if the fall continued for three or four months longer the trade would be back to pre-war conditions.

British Columbia Retailers Will Meet in Sections

Vancouver (Special).—This year the British Columbia Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada has decided to make a change in the method of handling the annual convention. The entire sessions will probably occupy three days. The first day and a half or two days will be spent by the various sections separately. Thus the grocers from the whole province will discuss grocers' problems; the automotive sections, the dry goods sections, the tailors' sections, etc., will each meet separately and decide what they want the association as a whole to get behind. Then on the final day, the massed convention can take the necessary action, and all at high speed. The automotive section of the Retail Merchants' Association in British Columbia, which has been making great progress in the last six months, and doing great work for themselves, is an outstanding example of the success of this provincial section scheme. At some of the meetings of the automotive section of the Retail Merchants' Association there were more present than the total attendance at the provincial convention last year.

The Wholesalers' Policy

Canadian Grocer is advised at this year's convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of British Columbia, a list of questions has been prepared dealing with wholesale practice re selling to consumers, giving special quotations to large cash and carry stores, etc., and all the Vancouver and Victoria wholesale grocers will be invited to have a representative address the convention on these subjects. As the secretary states: "Any wholesaler is absolutely entitled to his own policy as to sales, but the merchants also are quite within their rights to require to know just what that policy is, and to govern themselves accordingly. What we consider right, a wholesaler may consider not feasible; we are all willing to be shown."

Moosejaw R.M.A. Is Optimistic at Annual Meeting

Moose Jaw, Jan.—At the annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of this town held recently a great feeling of optimism was in everything apparent. Reports presented reviewed the work accomplished during the past year, particularly with the measures taken to have the luxury tax abolished, also changes in the pure food regulations, transient traders, insurance and the small debt recovery act.

It was recommended by the executive committee that the membership fee be reduced from $45 to $30. The thanks of the association was tendered the retiring officers.

Six members of the Regina Retail Merchants' Association, including President Morton, were present and extended greetings from the capital city. The president of the Regina organization made a wager of a new hat that his association would have more members at the provincial meeting in Saskatoon than would Moose Jaw in proportion to the membership. President McMicken of the provincial association was also present, and gave an address. He dealt with the work of the provincial executive during the past year, while he also made some recommendations to the local body al the lines of dividing the organizat into sections, so that all business wo be in its own particular section, and e section could meet to discuss the vari problems peculiar to its own line business.

The new officers elected are as f lows:—

President—W. G. Marshall.
1st vice-president—Charles Willia
2nd vice-president—Harry Hart.
Honorary secretary—H. Humber.
Honorary treasurer—W. Hembroff.

Executive committee—Clem Alexa der, A. J. Wilcox, W. Hembroff, and C. Crichton.

Prices of Canned Fish Easier But Costs Are Highe

Vancouver.—Mr. Millerd, of Goss Millerd Packing Co., stated that althoug prices of canned fish are easier than la year, a great number of the cost facto are considerably higher for 1921 tha they were for 1920. He pointed out th the new prices for cans, just out, quot 15 cents a case higher for No. 1 tall tin and 28 cents a case higher for halve The nets used are also quite 50 per cen higher than last year, and the cases ar the same as last year. Labels will co on an average 25 per cent. more than la year. The can prices will also affe many lines of food commodities such a jams, coffees, marmalade, etc. The in crease in can prices is claimed to b caused by higher freight rates.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE markets continue to show signs of stabilization, and buyers are commencing to have greater confidence in the situation. Depressed stocks that have been partly to blame for the slump in many of the markets are practically all liquidated, and many lines are now showing a firmness. This is particularly the case with teas and coffees, which are showing considerable strength with prices in primary markets steadily advancing. These advances, although not as yet materially affecting quotations in Canada tot the retail trade, are bound to react sooner or later.

Spices have also developed an upward tendency, especially peppers, both black and white. Rices are now generally considered to have reached the bottom level, and although prices on spot in some sections continue to show recessions, they are more in the nature of adjustments on stocks that are arriving, bought on the lower level.

Refined sugar is holding fairly steady, but the raw market has developed a weak tone with prices lower.

Shelled walnuts and almonds continue in a strong position, and there are indications that replacement costs will be higher than the present prices.

More interest is shown in canned goods and dried fruits. Canned vegetables are moving freely, and prices have stiffened. Prunes are in a better demand and there is more inclination to buy in larger quantities. Currants are easy, while raisins continue to hold firm.

Potatoes are easy and lower. Heavy crops and small demand is said to be the cause.

Hogs and hog products are unsettled and there is a tendency for lower prices. Fresh eggs continue to arrive more freely and prices continue to show recessions. Cheese is firm and butter generally is holding steady.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 2.—The feature of the week in general groceries is the reduction in the quotations on molasses which makes the price 95 cents per gallon in all parts of the Island of Montreal. The sugar market stands firm. Oranges are very low in price and California navel oranges are so cheap that importations of Florida oranges have almost ceased. There is a good supply of apples, but the quality is not of the best, since the demand for export trade has taken the best of Canadian apples to Europe. Potatoes are lower this week, and the supply seems almost inexhaustible. Onions, too, are very cheap. Yellow onions are selling here as low as one cent per pound. Canned goods are much stronger in price than they have been for some time. The reductions in price that were made a few weeks ago by local wholesalers have caused stocks to move, so that it is very likely that the prices will be advanced again in a very short time. Rolled oats are much stronger in price this week and some dealers have advanced their quotations. Hominy and package cornmeal are reduced in price. Fancy Carolina rice and tapioca are again reduced in price. Wrapping paper and toilet paper are lower, and one brand of shoe blacking is reduced.

Rolled Oats Higher

Montreal.

CEREALS. — The market for rolled oats has firmed up considerably this week with advances on the prices being made by many of the wholesalers. The new quotations given vary from $3.55 to $3.60 per bag, which is an advance of ten cents on the prices quoted last week. Pearl hominy is reduced fifty cents per bag, making the lowest quotations given $4. Split peas are reduced by some dealers to $5.75 per bag.

CANNED GOODS.—A little time ago some reductions were made on nearly all lines of canned goods by local wholesalers. Since then the demand has been so increased that wholesalers are contemplating an advance in the present quotations which are at present very low. The canned goods market is very firm indeed and an advance in local prices during the week would not be surprising. There is a very good movement of stocks.

Dried Fruits in Big Demand

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—There are no changes this week in the market for dried fruits. The supplies on hand are limited and jobbers are only able to fill orders for immediate demands. Consequently the prices quoted are very firm. The prune market alone shows weakness and varied quotations are made by dealers on prunes. Sultana raisins stand firm in price but currants are a little easier in price. Importers state that there is difficulty in getting sufficient supplies to meet the demands and that with the wide difference in price between currants and raisins that now exists currants are being used more.

Low Prices on Oranges

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The striking feature of the fruit market this week is the very low prices quoted on California navel oranges. Prices ranging from $4.75 to $5 per case are given on these oranges and as Florida oranges are quoted at about the same price not many of them are being brought in. There is a good supply of apples on the market, but they are not of the very best quality and many representatives of English firms are in this country buying at the present time, which is a rather unusual thing at this season of the year. There is an excellent demand for oranges just now.

Sugar Market Steady

Montreal.

SUGAR.—There is no change in quotations on refined sugar this week. Refiners report an improved movement of supplies and the sugar market generally is in a better condition. The raw market, however, is a little weaker this week but not sufficient to make any change in the condition of the market for refined sugar. This market is standing very firm at the basis quoted below and there is no indication of any change either an advance or a decline in the near future.

Potatoes And Onions Cheaper

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—Prices on vegetables are being fairly well maintained except on potatoes and onions. Potatoes are further reduced this week and are selling as low as $1.50 and $1.60 per bag, while yellow onions are as cheap as one cent a pound and red onions are selling at $1 per 75-pound bag. Onions at that price are not selling very well and as one dealer said, "When they get as low as that it makes people suspicious of them and they are afraid to buy." That seems to intimate that prices must either advance and sell what can be sold or else let them be destroyed. There seems to be a very good supply of potatoes ready for the market and prices in some parts of the United States are much lower than quotations given here.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—Reductions are announced on one brand of condensed and evaporated milk; also condensed coffee, peanut butter, salted peanuts, and one brand of shoe dressing. The flour market is easy, with prices down 20 cents per barrel. Shorts and middlings are reduced $2 per ton owing to the easy condition of the grain market. Sugar syrups in 2-lb. tins are lower. One brand of package self raising flour shows reductions. All brands of jams are quoted lower and canned goods generally show a firmness. Quotations on Southern rices are again reduced, but the condition in primary markets is now considered at the bottom level. There is a better buying movement noted for prunes. Currants continue easy. Shelled walnuts and almonds are holding firm under a strong demand. Teas are firm and higher on all grades. Coffees are also in a strong position. Spices generally show a tendency to firmness. Potatoes are easy and lower.

Beans Show Good Movement

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is a good demand for beans but generally in small quantities. Ontario hand picked are holding fairly firm at $3.25 per bushel.

Coffees in Strong Position

Toronto.

COFFEES.—Since the first of the year coffees in primary markets have been steadily advancing. These advances amount to about two cents per pound on Santos and four to five cents on fine quality Mexican, Colombia and Maracaibos. This condition is bound to reflect more or less on the local market as stocks in Canada held by coffee roasters are estimated to be the smallest on record. Locally the demand is active and both roasters and wholesalers report a freer movement with orders arriving more frequently and for larger quantities.

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Wholesalers report a continued improved movement in canned goods, especially vegetables and salmon. Canned vegetables are considered in a firm position and prices in many instances have been moved up slightly. All makes of jams are reduced, 16 ounce jars are down about one dollar per case and fours are all quoted at slightly less than one dollar each.

Prunes Show Better Movement

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—An improved movement is noted for prunes, both wholesalers and retailers have apparently more confidence in the situation and are buying more freely than they have been at any time during this season. One importer reports a sale of a car of prunes to a wholesaler who previously had been buying in five and ten-case lots. Raisins are holding firm but there is a good buying movement. Currants are still easy with a tendency for lower prices, but the demand is very limited. Evaporated apples are in rather a quiet position for local trade, but there is a good demand from the western provinces. There is a fair demand for figs, especially the natural pulled in 30-pound bags, which are quoted at 12 cents per pound.

Messina Lemons Lower

Toronto.

FRUITS—Heavy shipments of oranges and grapefruit are arriving daily. Prices generally are unchanged. The shipment of bitter oranges that was due to arrive last week failed to make its appearance but is expected to be here this week end. Wholesalers are not bringing in the quantity of bitters this season as they have been in the past and one dealer stated that their shipment is practically all sold. Messina lemons are lower in one quarter, being quoted at $4 in single cases and 25 cents less in five case lots. Other quotations on Messinas range up to $4.75 per case. Ontario apples are not moving very fast. Boxed apples are selling freely at $3.85 per box.

Shelled Nuts Hold Firm

Toronto.

NUTS.—Shelled walnuts and almonds in primary markets continue in a firm position under a strong inquiry. Spot stocks are extremely small and one importer who has shipments floating stated that they have practically cleaned up the lot. Some sales have also been made for future delivery to merchants who are heavy purchasers, for the fall trade. This condition would indicate that shelled nuts at present prices are a safe purchase.

Local Rice Prices Lower

Toronto.

RICES.—Quotations on rice in primary markets are now considered to have reached about the lowest level. Local prices continue to be reduced as shipments arrive that were bought on the lower basis. Blue Rose is quoted as low as 8½ cents per pound but some wholesalers are selling as high as 9½ cents. One wholesaler stated that they have a shipment of Blue Rose rolling that they will probably be in a position to offer at around 7½ cents. Eastern rices are holding at rather high figures, but there is little inquiry for these lines as the Southern rices are offered at lower prices which in some instances are about one-half the price of the Eastern.

SUGAR.—Quotations on refined sugar are holding fairly steady. There is a certain amount of irregularity in prices, but not to any great extent as both wholesalers and retailers are holding prices on an even basis. The bulk of the business, however, continues to go to the Ontario factory.

Spices Take Turn Upward

Toronto.

SPICES.—The primary spice market has developed a firmer tone with quotations on many lines higher. The depressed condition that has been manifest for some months past on the United States market and also locally has practically disappeared and has resulted in a stiffening of the market and more in line with foreign conditions. Peppers, both black and white, are perhaps the firmest. Quotations on spot have not been changed but there is a tendency that some lines will be revised upward.

Tea Market Continues Firm

Toronto.

TEAS.—The situation in teas in primary markets continues firm on all grades with prices several cents per pound higher than a few weeks ago. One importer stated that he had made a purchase at a certain price but before the order had reached the seller the market had advanced six cents per pound and the order would not be accepted except at the higher figure. Spot stocks in many instances are now being sold at prices below replacement values. This condition has created more confidence in the market and buyers are placing orders more freely particularly on the grades that show good cup quality. Quotations on spot stocks are unchanged, but with the primary markets higher there is a tendency that local prices will also be revised upward.

Potatoes Again Lower

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—There has been a very small demand for potatoes, which has resulted in the market being easy and lower. Dealers are now quoting potatoes at $1.40 to $1.50 per bag and even lower prices can be expected as potatoes can be bought in car lots at country points as low as $1 per bag. United States market is also lower and as the crop in that country was a heavy one there is little encouragement for export. Canadian vegetables on the whole are quiet and dull but there is a good demand for the California varieties.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Feb. 2.—The improved condition of the grocery business that has been marked since the opening of the new year is still in evidence. Sugar is now showing signs of stabilizing, having advanced to $12.00 per cwt. during the week. Package cereals are steady, but rolled oats, peas and beans are easier. The tone of the canned goods market is much firmer and there are indications that these lines will advance in price in the very near future. Lower prices on dried fruits has stimulated consumption to some extent. Shelled walnuts are firmer. Rice on the primary market is firmer and adjustments on spot stocks will be made as new shipments arrive. Indications point to a strengthening on jam prices. Potatoes are lower. Toilet and manila wrapping paper have shown a decline.

Sugar Advances to $12.00

Winnipeg

SUGAR.—For some time the Western market has been below the Eastern market. This has been due largely to beet sugar competition during the selling campaign of this year's beet crop. Now that the marketing of the beet crop is well under way there seems to be an effort to get the Western market on the same basis as the East, plus the equalized freight rate. The present advance of one dollar is merely an adjustment and does not indicate any change in the condition of the sugar market.

Canned Goods Firmer

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—The undertone of the canned goods market is much firmer. Some of the cheaper lines which were offered by independent canners are becoming scarce and they are expected to be absorbed within the next few weeks. Higher prices are looked for and will probably be more in line with opening quotations.

Rich Market Firmer

Winnipeg.

RICE.—The primary market for rice is firmer and the general feeling seems that American rice has reached its lowest point. This week has been marked by the arrival of No. 1 Japan. This is being quoted at 8 cents per pound in 100-pound lots. There is some fancy Carolina rice on the market and this is quoted at 11½ cents per pound. Indications are that Siam rice, which has been sold at less than replacement cost, will be advanced to the new basis of 6½ cents per 100-pound lots.

FLOUR.—There is no change in the flour situation this week. Manitoba No. 1 hard flour remains steady at $11.35 per barrel and 98-pound jute sacks at $5.67½.

Jams Are in Demand

Winnipeg.

JAMS.—The demand for jam has revived and the past week has been marked by the heavy demand on wholesalers' stocks by the retailers. This demand is being reflected on the manufacturers' stock as no large quantities are carried by the wholesalers. Low price jams, which have been so noticeable, are now very largely absorbed and from present indications there is likely to be a strengthening in prices. Empress jams show a new revised price list, strawberry and red currant jelly in four-pound tins are quoted at $13.00. All other flavors are quoted at $12.00. There is no change in price on the one-pound glass or tins.

Winnipeg.

MAKING JAM SALES COUNT

but the suggestion is made when other articles are being purchased."

At this time the Robinson store had a nice display of jams in the window, and upon entering the store, one was attracted by a show-case, situated near the front entrance, wholly devoted to a neat display of jams in various size containers. On the counters were also displayed a few jars and tins which undoubtedly were the means of making many a sale. In pushing the sales of jams or in fact any other article, it is Mr. Harding's idea that window displays should be linked up with the interior display, or in some manner carry the suggestion that the window contains, right through the door to the salesman, whose duty it is to finish making the sale that the window has started.

CANADA'S PROBLEM IN FISH

ing banks of the Atlantic, showing where the different fish were caught, then up to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where big supplies of cod are found, then south to the salmon rivers of the Maritime Provinces, then along the St. Lawrence River to Lake Ontario and north to the rivers and lakes where fishing is indulged in as a sport. From there they journey in their imagination to the Pacific coast and saw the big salmon industry and other fishing. Then northward to where the fishing industry is just being exploited. Mr. Prince dwelt on the possibilities of those northern waters where, due to Steffanson's report, fishing for herring around Alaska has proved quite promising. The speaker pointed out that the fish in the cold northern waters are the finest and for that reason, since our fishing grounds are almost the most northern in the world, the fish are of the finest quality and demand a premium on the world's market.

The Domestic Market Counts

"It is after all the domestic market that counts most," said Prof. Prince, "and Canada is not using nearly as much fish as she might. Every patriotic Canadian should take the matter seriously, celebrate faithfully all of Canada's national fish days, using as much fish as possible in his own home and giving publicity to the industry whenever possible. Fish is nutritious, it is cheap and by so doing we will not only be saving money for ourselves but enriching our own Canada."

Eighty Thousand Fishermen

Mr. Prince gave figures showing the development of the fishing industry, stating that now there were between eighty and one hundred thousand men employed in the fishing industry in Canada. Ten thousand of these are engaged in marketing this catch and the remainder are fishermen. He showed how science had done much to put the industry on a more scientific basis. (Mr. Prince is one of the pioneers in this science.) Some startling facts have been revealed by science as to the spawning, feeding and migration of fish which have been of great value to the fishermen. The speaker gave some interesting illustrations of these researches. This interesting address might be summarized by saying "Canada should eat more fish."

Potato Market Shows Downward Tendencies

Prices Have Fallen Considerably During the Past Few Weeks — Heavy Crops and Little Demand Said To Be the Cause—Little Likelihood of Export Demand From United States

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—For the past few weeks potatoes have been in a gradually declining position, which altogether different from what was nticipated last fall. The demand is very mall and prices have declined consider-bly since the first of the year. The resent price to the retail trade is $1.40 $1.50 per bag, but one wholesale ealer stated that he could buy in car ts on the track at around one dollar er bag. When a representative of Can-dian Grocer was in Orangeville during he past week, potatoes were offered by he farmers, delivered to the stores at 5 cents per bag.

The situation is a very unsatisfactory ne, both to the wholesale dealers and the retailers, as many put in a large supply during the fall when the market was firm, and the talk of a dry rot was sending prices upward. Heavy crops in both Canada and the United States and the later report that the rumor of a dry rot was greatly exaggerated is attributed to the declines.

What the future will be is uncertain, but the general feeling is that there is nothing in sight to strengthen the situation. The United States market is also a declining one. With the large crop over the border there is little encouragement for export to that country as in other years. This export trade was a big factor in stiffening prices at this season.

B. C. Fruit Growers Believe 1921 Will Be Big Apple Year

Lower Selling Price for Apples is Also Expected —Every Effort Will Be Made to Successfully Market the Crop.

VANCOUVER, Feb. 2.—(Special.) At the convention of the B. C. Fruit Growers' Association at Nelson several speakers emphasized the act that the 1921 crop of apples and ther fruits would in all probability sur-ass in volume the high record of 1919. t was pointed out several times that an xtra effort would have to be made to narket the increased output, and that a ig advertising program should be laid ut to insure the movement of the crop.

Several delegates also warned the rowers that there would have to be a ower selling price for apples in confor-nity with the lower price levels in all ther foods. They stated that boxes would be lower and that paper was also uoted at lower prices.

All crop forecasts, however, are conditional on the absence of frost. Last year frosts in May and June did enormous damage to what promised to be a splendid crop. There seems to be plenty of moisture in the hills to insure adequate irrigation throughout the coming summer, with the heavy February snow falls yet to come.

If the B. C. apples are graded carefully, packed as well, and advertised sufficiently, there will be no question about Canada using all the apples that the Okanagan and the other fruitful valleys of British Columbia can produce. With good quality, and fair price to start with, the "made in Canada" movement should also assist the B. C. fruit growers.

Canadian Catch of Fish in December Worth $964,181

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—The total catch of sea fish landed off both coasts during the moth of December was 478,666 cwt., with a value in first hands of $964,181, against 433,939 cwt., valued at $1,282,283, for the same month last year.

Of the total catch for December this year 349,639 cwt. consisted of herring landed in British Columbia. This is 101,302 cwt. greater than the herring catch of that Province in the preceding December. The value, however, is $104,-504 less, owing to the state of the Oriental herring market, to which the bulk of the catch is sent.

The catch of haddock on the Atlantic coast was 10,000 cwt. greater than that of December, 1919.

Smelt fishing resulted in 15,649 cwt. being taken, against 28,741 cwt. last year. The decrease was due to the mild weather and lack of ice in the rivers and bays, fisheries branch officials state.

Lobster fishing in Charlotte and St. John counties, New Brunswick, since the season opened on November 15, gave a total catch of 6,336 cwt., against 4,528 cwt., for the same period in the year before.

There were 9,060 cwt. of halibut landed in British Columbia, against 14,344 during the preceding December. "It is worthy of note," states a report from the Marine and Fisheries Department, "that of the total landing of halibut at Prince Rupert in December last, 7,937 cwt. was brought in by American vessels and 808 cwt. by our own vessels."

W. R. Ingram, who has been assistant manager of the Swift Canadian Co., Winnipeg, has been transferred to the Toronto office, having been appointed general traffic manager for all the Swift enterprises in Canada, with headquarters in Toronto. He took up his new duties the first of this month. Mr. Ingram was tendered a farewell banquet in Winnipeg by the Winnipeg Manufacturers' Association.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 2.—The feature of the produce market this week is the lower quotations on eggs. There has been a steady increase in the production of eggs and this is quite evident by the offerings on the market. Coupled with this the supply of storage eggs is almost exhausted and the demand is now centred on fresh and selected eggs. The hog market shows more strength. Smoked meats are holding firm. The market for lard stands at a low level with only a fair demand for supplies locally. There is a good demand for both butter and cheese especially good export demand for cheese which resulted in a strong local market. Lower prices are quoted on finnan haddies this week and also on steak cod and fillets. There is a very good demand for fish which is expected to be even bigger next week in view of National Fish Day, February 9.

Butter Prices Hold

Montreal.

BUTTER.—There is no important change in the condition of the butter market this week, prices being maintained under steady demand for supplies for domestic consumption and for shipment to outside points. The Government reports for last week show an increase in the receipts of 662 packages over the same week last year and a decrease of 1,299 packages over the previous week. This tends to give the butter market a firmer undertone.

Lower Prices on Eggs

Montreal.

FRESH EGGS.—There has been a steady increase in the production of eggs throughout the country which has resulted in a weaker market and lower prices are quoted both on fresh eggs and storage eggs. At the same time there is a big demand for fresh eggs locally and buyers are taking advantage of the lower prices. The supply of storage eggs is almost exhausted and so the demand is centered on strictly fresh and select eggs.

Some Lower Prices on Fish

Montreal.

FRESH FISH.—With the continuing cold weather some lower prices are quoted this week on fresh and smoked fish. Steak cod is reduced to 9 and 10 cents per pound. Haddies are all reduced in price, as also fillets, smoked herring and boneless herrings. New kippers are a little higher this week and bloaters by the box are also advanced 50 cents a box. There is a very good demand for fish at the present time and there is every indication that the demand will be even greater next week. National fish day comes on February 9 and the dealers are making the necessary preparation and much publicity is being given the event.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—The hog market is unsettled with a tendency for lower prices. Beef is also lower under heavy shipments. Cured meats are unchanged, but the tendency if anything is for easier prices. New laid eggs are easier and prices showed a recession. Receipts of new laids are rapidly increasing, and with the United States market lower, the tendency is that eggs will continue to be easier and lower. The cheese market is holding firm but butter has a shade easier tone. Lard in one pound prints is down 1 cent, but on tierce basis is unchanged. The market for both lard and shortening continues easy. In view of the approaching Lenten season the fish business has taken on a brisk appearance and all lines are now well represented. Poultry is firm under light receipts with some storage stocks being drawn on for local consumption.

Egg Prices are Lower

Toronto.

EGGS.—Receipts of fresh eggs continue to increase and prices have been reduced five to seven cents per dozen. Some Chinese eggs have arrived, but the quality is so poor that they are not meeting with much favor and it is doubtful whether further supplies will be brought in. United States fresh eggs are arriving and are giving satisfaction. Prices in the United States market are considerably lower than in Canada, which is a factor in reducing prices here. Storage stocks are practically cleaned up.

Hog Market Still Unsettled

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—The hog market is still in a more or less unsettled condition. Packers have been trying to get prices down but were unsuccessful and the bulk of the sales were made at an advance over last week's quotations of about 75 cents per hundred. The tendency is that hog values will go lower and packers are offering one dollar per hundred less for the balance of the week. The cattle market is also unsettled and prices dropped about 50 cents per hundred. This decline is attributed partly to the lower prices that prevail in the United States and partly to the fact that the United States is likely to impose a tariff which is having the effect of causing the farmers to market their stock. Fresh meat cuts are unchanged.

The history of the day's business

Every time a sale is recorded on an up-to-date National Cash Register, a complete record of the sale is printed on a strip of paper inside of the register.

This strip of paper is called the detail-strip.

It shows how much business is done during certain hours, or during the merchant's absence.

It cannot be removed or changed without the merchant's knowledge.

It prevents the cash drawer being opened without a permanent record being made.

At the end of the day, the merchant takes the detail-strip out of the register and files it away.

It gives him a permanent, unchangeable history of each day's business.

The detail-strip is only one of the many features which make up-to-date National Cash Registers a business necessity.

This is a section of the detail-strip. For each transaction it shows (1) whether a receipt or slip was issued, (2) the initial of the clerk, (3) the kind of transaction, (4) the amount, and (5) the number.

Let our representative show you how it will help you make more money.

We make cash registers for every line of business

Mr. RETAIL MERCHANT: Would You Like to Employ an Expert Bookkeeper at $10.00 a Month?

Without any further trouble on your part than making out your sales slip when your customer makes a purchase, would you like this bookkeeper—

I. To give your customer, with each purchase, without offending him, a statement of the full amount he owes you to date?

II. When a customer wishes to pay his account it gives you, within 30 seconds, a complete statement showing every item purchased?

III. To make you out a yearly statement of your affairs to conform to the requirements of the Dominion Income Tax Act within three hours after you have taken stock?

IV. After 15 months to continue to give you this service for nothing as long as you remain in business?

That is what the Barr Register will do. Write us and let us demonstrate.

EDDY

ESTABLISHED A.D. 1851.

Why Eddy's Lead

No amount of publicity could, of itself, have won for Eddy's Matches first place in the estimation of the Canadian match buying public.

It took Quality as well as Publicity to do that. And it is this Quality, so evident in every box of Eddy's, coupled with constant consumer advertising that is keeping up Eddy popularity. The public knows that the name Eddy on the outside of the box is a guarantee of the matches within.

Link your store with the Eddy reputation. Let your customers know you sell Eddy's Matches and Eddy's Indurated Fibreware —the sanitary and durable utensils that never bulge or leak.

Here you find superior cup quality.

HOGS AND HOG PRODUCTS UNSETTLED

Hogs and hog products are in an unsettled condition. The big packers are not overly anxious to stock up on hogs at the present prices and every week set out to hammer down prices. They are not always successful, however, as the smaller packers and butchers generally take up any surplus of the offerings. During the past week receipts have been larger and prices slightly reduced, but packers continue to bid at lower levels. Until prices are reduced to the level more in line with the big packers' ideas there is little chance of the market for lard, shortening, and bacon becoming stronger.

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Eliminate Posting & Making of Itemized Statements

Simply—
①Bring forward customer's balance.
②Add to-day's charge purchase and file original in Register

Make One Accounting Operation Replace Three

If you could instantly reduce part of your expense 66⅔%, would you do it? Good business judgment says "yes." If there is a simple yet efficient method of reducing your accounting operations by 66⅔%, the same good business judgment says, "put that method in practice now."

You, as a good merchant, extend credit service to those customers who deserve it. But this service is costing you many times what it should in unproductive Work Hours now devoted to posting to ledger and making itemized statements. These two accounting operations in your present system are a costly drag which can be completely eliminated. Two hundred thousand retail merchants in this country alone have done it. These merchants have adopted the McCaskey System of Accounts.

With this remarkably simple yet efficient system all customers accounts are posted and balanced with a statement-to-the-minute accompanying each charge purchase, with but one writing—the original entry. This invariably pleases the customer and speeds up collections, yet at a big saving in your present accounting costs.

It will cost you nothing to learn what a McCaskey System of Accounts, devised and developed to meet the individual needs of your business, will do for you.

The Quality of the Insecticide is Everything

The mere spraying of fruit trees and vegetable plants is not by any means an assurance of protection against the destructive insect pest.

Best results can only be obtained by the use of first quality sprays.

Dealers handling

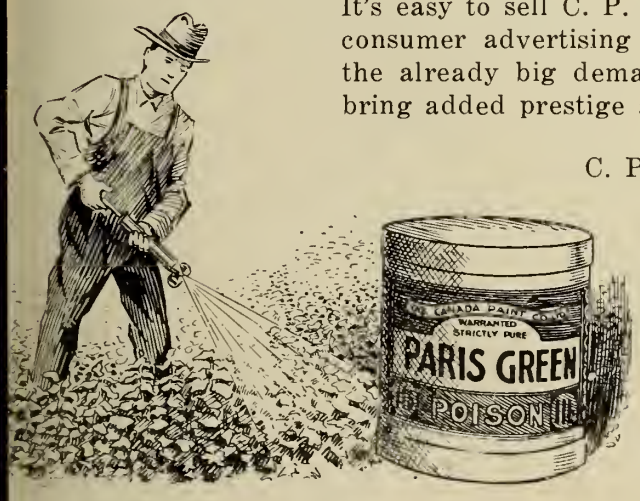
are in a position to meet the spraying requirements of every farmer and fruit grower with the right quality spray for every purpose. The poisoning strength and killing power of these Insecticides assure complete control over the insect menace without the least injury to foliage or fruit.



It's easy to sell C. P. Insecticides. A well-placed campaign of consumer advertising during the coming months will increase the already big demand for these effective Insecticides and bring added prestige and profit to the dealer selling them.

for your Profits' Sake

For over 600,000 housewives this famous book is the great daily reminder of what they require in the grocery line.

In its 1,001 recipes are repeatedly mentioned almost every profit-bearing ingredient you handle for baking purposes.

The dealer who stocks FIVE ROSES Flour is present in profit at every meal.

He collects his little royalties on every loaf and cake, every pie and pudding baked from its famous pages.

While we insist upon 40 cents in stamps before mailing a copy to the general public (and have mailed about 50,000 on this basis last year), we will send one copy FREE to any legitimate grocer on request.

And when you consult your copy, just bear in mind that this tremendous selling force is constantly at work in every second English-speaking home in Canada.

QUALITY FRUIT JAMS

WELCH Lades Quality fruit jams are absolutely pure and more than comply with pure food laws in the Dominion. Peachlade, Plumlade, Grapelade, Cherrilade, Strawberilade contain only the choice fruit for which they are named —and from which they are made. Nothing but pure sugar is added to any of them.

And Welch Pure Fruit Jams are 100% value because they are 100% eatable products. All are smooth and spread like butter. All are free from seeds, skins and pits. All are distinctly different from ordinary jams, each product having a flavor all its own.

Retailers should stock now this line of Welch Pure Fruit Jams. The No. 16 glass jars in which these jams are packed are just the size for frequent buying. And this year the sales will be quickened by more extensive advertising than ever before.

Your jobber will gladly give you full information and is ready to supply you immediately.

Do You Weigh For A Profit Or A Loss?

One of many outstanding features of a Brantford Scale is that it weighs the goods straight into dollars and cents. The result is that an inexperienced or untrained clerk cuts up cheese or bacon and weighs bulk goods, and you receive full payment for every fraction of an ounce sold.

You have worked for money most of your life. When your money is invested in a Brantford Scale, it begins to work for you.

We make a Scale for every purpose.

Imperial Floor Dressing comes in one and four-gallon lithographed sealed cans, and in half-barrels and barrels. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for prices and a demonstration.

FLOOR DRESSING

Imperial Floor Dressing is a great boon to storekeepers and dealers. It catches and holds at least 90% of the dust that would otherwise settle on goods and display shelves and detract from their appearance

Imperial Floor Dressing is a sanitary, wood-preserving preparation that definitely lays dust. It will not gum or evaporate, and it keeps floors and fixtures looking their best at all times.

Imperial Floor Dressing is conveniently applied and surprisingly economical. One gallon treats from 500 to 700 square feet. A single application is all that is needed for weeks.

Imperial Floor Dressing is a big seller for use in hospitals, churches, schools, billiard halls and institutions of every kind. Its use on your own floors is the best demonstration you can make. That alone will create a steady, profitable demand for this high quality dressing.

Ask the Imperial Oil salesman about Imperial Floor Dressing.

"Superior Brand"

MADE-IN-CANADA

Macaroni

CANADA imported $108,461 worth of Macaroni and Vermicelli from the United States during the year ending March, 1920. The figures for the period up to Nov., 1920, have not as yet been compiled, but as there was an increase in total imports of over 27% it is probable that there was a similar increase in Macaroni imports.

Canadian grocers who stock Superior Brand (made-in-Canada) Macaroni will have the double satisfaction of knowing that their Canadian dollar buys 100 cents' worth and they are helping to keep Canadian money in Canada, thereby assisting in reducing the present high rate of exchange.

Superior Brand Macaroni, Vermicelli, etc., is made in a modern Canadian plant by the most up-to-date machinery under the supervision of Macaroni Experts. Its flavor and quality is unsurpassed by any brand on the market, bar none. Only the finest Canadian hard wheat is used. It possesses a beautiful golden color, has no specks or spots and retains its shape and color in cooking.

Feature Canadian-made products like Superior Brand Macaroni and keep Canadians employed.

Sell "Made-in-Canada" Products

Canada imported $380,966 worth of milk food from the United States in the 12 months ending March 30, 1920. Figures on milk for all of 1920 are not yet available, but the increase in our total imports in 1920 over 1919 is $201,596.58, and it is presumed that there was a corresponding increase in milk products.

Malcolm's Made-in-Canada Products

There are three vital reasons why Canadian grocers should sell MALCOLM'S ALL-CANADIAN MILK PRODUCTS:

First—
In selling them you and your customers are getting dollar for dollar value and your Canadian money stays in Canada.

Second—
You are encouraging Canadian enterprise and keeping Canadians in employment.

Third—
You are helping to reduce the exchange rate on Canadian money.

MALCOLM MILK PRODUCTS are made from the purest, rich country milk under ideal sanitary conditions in an all-Canadian factory, financed by Canadian capital and employing Canadian labor. They offer grocers an excellent profit margin and their quality is fully equal to the most widely advertised imported brands. Make 1921 an all-Canadian year—feature MALCOLM'S MILK PRODUCTS. It will pay you well.

Present Sugar Prices Likely to Hold

Only One Refiner in Eastern Canada Is Now Working on Cheaper Raws—It Is Doubtful if Present Low Levels of Raws Will Remain Steady—A Firmer Market in Raws is Looked for.

By Special Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—A rather peculiar condition has developed during the last two weeks in the sugar market. The prices on raw sugar have dropped considerably, and New York is quoting as low as $6.85 per hundredweight for refined. Still there does not seem any prospect that there will be a decline in Canadian prices, at least as far ahead as can be seen at present. This after all may not be as regrettable as it might appear. The Canadian market has only recently come to a stable condition; the price of sugar has been cut in two during the last six months and still many of our refiners are using the same expensive raw sugar that they were refining when the price was 20 cents per pound.

Low Prices on Raw

Almost during the whole of January the prices on raws stood firm at around 4½ cents, as is shown by the accompanying table, but at the end of the month and early this month the market suffered a sharp decline. The American refiners who are working direct from the primary markets are able to take advantage of the declining raw market and quote lower prices, but in most cases our own refiners are not able to do so, because only one or two of them are buying raws at all.

Prices on raws during January were as follows:

Jan. 3	.04⅜
Jan. 4	.04½
Jan. 5	.04½
Jan. 6	.04½
Jan. 11	.04½
Jan. 18	04 7/16
Jan. 19	.04¼
Jan. 20	.04⅜
Jan. 21	.04⅜
Jan. 22	.04⅜
Jan. 25	.04 5/16
Jan. 27	.04
Feb. 2	.03⅞
Feb. 3	.03¾
Feb. 4	.03½

This table shows that after the 25th of January the raw market started on a decline that brought the price down as low as 3½ cents per pound in New York.

Much Higher in Canada

It must not be overlooked that this price does not apply in Canada, since added to that is the duty and the present high rate of exchange, which would then bring the price up to approximately 4¼ cents per pound in Canadian funds. Even at that price, the refiners could place cheaper sugar on this market, if they were able to buy raw sugar at the present prices.

One Refinery Buying

The only refinery in Eastern Canada that is using the cheaper raw sugar is the Acadia Sugar Refineries, of Montreal. St. Lawrence Refineries have not yet started on the new stock and Atlantic has some time to go to finish up the expensive raws on hand. This means that only one refinery is in a position to consider lower prices. During the last three months of the old year chaos reigned in the Canadian sugar industry and prices were slashed everywhere, for the principal reason that the refiners were not standing together. Now, however, they are shoulder to shoulder and in that there is strength, much needed in the sugar industry in this country.

American Refiners Battle

A like battle to that which occurred in our own country is now waging in the United States and is responsible for the very low level to which sugar prices have swung in the last week. The Arbuckle Refineries quoted $7.10 per hundredweight for refined sugar but, as Canadian Grocer is informed, were unable to make deliveries. The price, however, started trouble and a few days later the Federal Refineries set the pace for the others to follow by quoting $6.85 per hundredweight and making deliveries.

Will Canada Import Sugar?

The question that is now waiting an answer is, "Will Canada venture to import American sugar at that price or will our present price be satisfactory?" Future prices on Canadian sugar depend upon the answer to that question. The one refinery that is now in the market to buy raw sugar holds the keys to the situation.

In speaking of this question to a Canadian Grocer representative, G. G. Shortt, of the Acadia Sugar Refineries, said: "It is very doubtful if it would pay anyone to import sugar from the United States, even at the very low figure that is now being quoted. Considering the exchange at 12½ per cent., which is a safe estimate, American sugar bought at $6.85 per hundredweight and brought into Canada would cost the purchaser at least $10.28. This is dearer than the Canadian sugar, even though the risk of a loss is disregarded. For that reason it is hardly to be expected that there will be any great influx of American sugar, at least at the present margin.

Look for Firmer Raws

The public cannot expect a more speedy decline in prices than has occurred in the sugar market, and for the benefit of the trade in general, and in fact the Canadian people, the present readjustments are quite rapid enough to suit the commercial conditions of our country. If the raw market stays as low as it is at the present time, which is very doubtful, lower prices will be quoted in time on refined sugar, but at the present time many of the refineries in this country are losing money on every pound of sugar turned out of their plants. Then, too, the demand for sugar that will be created in the United States as a result of the price cutting that is going on will undoubtedly result in a firmer market for raw sugar, with every likelihood that prices will advance. While the sugar market in Canada cannot be said to be an advancing one, it has every appearance of stability, which is the most healthy condition. The demand for sugar is just beginning to improve after the stringency in its use that occurred during the high prices. The better the demand for our own sugar, the sooner will the Canadian refiners be able to follow closely the trend of the raw sugar market and give the public the full benefit of opportune buying."

The logical conclusion after a survey of the sugar market seems to be that the present quotations on sugar stand steady. Should anyone risk importing American sugar either at the present price or at a lower price, it is quite evident that there is at least one refinery in Canada that is in a position to cut the price and undersell the imported sugar. Besides, after interviews with the managers of the Montreal refineries, Canadian Grocer is of the opinion that, should the necessity arise, refiners of sugar in Canada would stand the further losses in order to hold the sales of sugar for our own Canadian firms.

Convincing Trade of Price Declines

How One Retail Firm Proved to Doubting Customers That Prices of Many Lines Have Come Down—A Card Prominently Displayed Shows Comparative Quotations

"HOW can I increase the volume of sales and at the same time restore that confidence in buying that previously existed with our customers?"

That is a problem that is facing many merchants to-day. The showing up of business, undoubtedly was the result of the public refraining from buying, when prices were on a downward trend. There is no doubt that the buying public is holding off their purchases, except for the bare necessities, waiting for a decline in values. But the remedy for this non-buying lies to a large extent in the merchants' own hands.

Good-Will a Valuable Asset

The good-will of a retail business is its most valuable asset, or, in other words the confidence which the customer places in the merchant. The customer must have confidence in the merchant, knowing that he will supply quality goods at a reasonable price. The public generally is not adverse to paying the merchant a price for his goods that will show him a fair profit. But the principal reason for the present dullness in business is the fact that many retail merchants are not reducing their prices in line with wholesale prices, and the public are apparently aware of the fact.

Recently the writer went into a store and inquired the price of potatoes and was told forty-two cents a peck. Just think of it! Forty-two cents a peck when the wholesale price of potatoes has declined to $1.35 a bag. In this same store a twenty-four pound bag of flour costs $1.95, which showed a gross profit of 30½ per cent. on the selling price, and that on an article that shows a quick turnover.

Many Make Reductions

Many merchants, however, are reducing the retail prices at the same time as wholesale declines take place. Some losses, naturally, are taken, but they figure that as prices moved upward on their stock in line with market advances losses will be taken care of by the gains made in the days when stocks were constantly increasing in volume. Then again, for the past year, these same merchants have been nursing their stock very carefully, buying only in small quantities and taking advantage of all price recessions.

A Convincing Scheme

Hutchinson and Foster, Alliston, Ont., are merchants who have been taking every advantage of market conditions and by so doing are retaining the confidence of their customers. When prices have come down they have also reduced the selling price. In many instances they have been able to do this without any great loss, because their stock has been reduced to as low a point as possible consistent with rendering good service.

"We have made it a special point to watch the markets closely and when a price is changed we also change the retail prices, no matter if we still have some bought at higher quotations," stated J. A. Hutchinson to a Canadian Grocer representative. "Some customers had the habit of always complaining that our prices were not being reduced, so in order to convince them they are down, we had a card painted with a list of staples showing the old price and the price at which they are selling at to-day. Whenever a customer now complains about prices not coming down we simply show her the card. This convinces her that prices are down. Another thing, when people see this card showing the price reductions, they are more satisfied and are inclined to make a larger purchase."

Dealer Chooses the Source of Goods

So Claim Montreal Grocers, Who Express Views on Made-in-Canada Idea—First "Quality" and Then "Price" the Basis of Their Selection—In This They Cater to Customers' Desires.

By Special Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

"ON what basis can Made-In-Canada foodstuffs appeal to the Canadian public?" asked Canadian Grocer representative, when speaking of this subject to Frank Lamere, manager of Walter Paul's cash and carry store in Montreal.

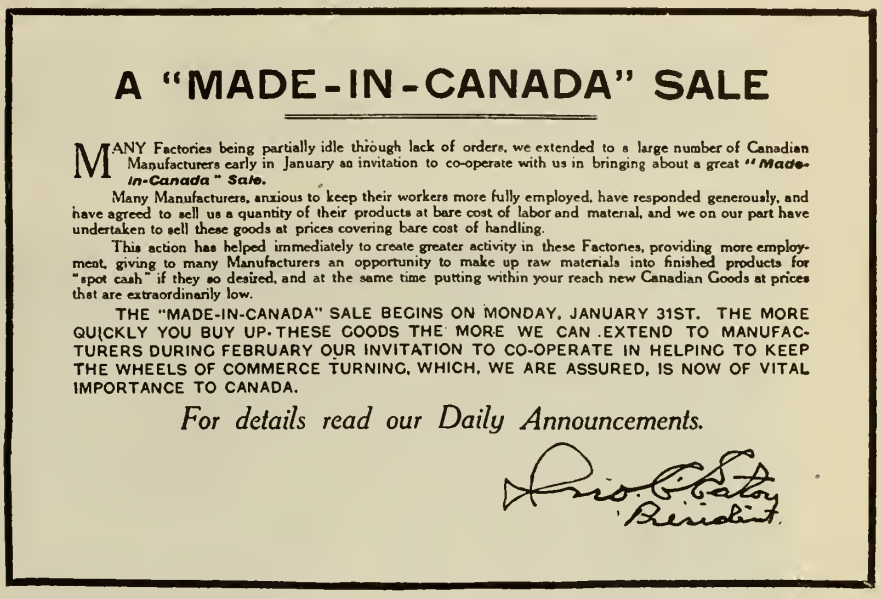
"Only on a basis of price and quality," replied Mr. Lamere. "The people to-day want those two qualifications in their purchases, regardless of where the goods are manufactured. It is only natural too, especially at this time when people are expecting lower prices that they should buy the articles in which they find the best quality at the best price. If anything quality is the more important of the two attributes. Our Canadian manufacturers can compete with outside manufacturers in quality as far as the standard lines are concerned. There are special lines that Canadians have not yet perfected but with the increasing sales of them this perfection will be attained. Few customers ever inquire where any line is manufactured and it is doubtful if they notice the name of the manufacturer of a canned goods line, for instance, or the address on the label. Instead they ask if the quality is good and if the grocer can recommend it. They try it, perhaps, and the next time they know for themselves. Little do they care who made it if it is good and the price suits them.

It Is the Retailer Who Knows

"It is, on the other hand, the retailer who notices where and by whom the article is made. When he is approached by the salesman he enquires as to the manufacturer of the line and if he does not know whether it is Canadian made or foreign he generally asks. He therefore knows before he places the order whether or not he is buying Canadian made goods. Granting then that our own manufacturers' products are on a par with the foreign lines, it is then the retailer who decides whether or not Canadian goods will be distributed to his customers. His first thought is to please his customers in quality and in price."

United States Goods Handicapped

At the present time United States goods for sale on the Canadian market are greatly handicapped by the heavy exchange on currency. This means that on every dollar's worth of U. S. goods bought in Canada from ten to fifteen cents has to be paid in exchange, and for which the purchaser cannot expect any value. In the last two years much of the sentiment in buying "Made-in-Canada" goods has disappeared and the public has to be approached on a basis of quality and price.



A "MADE-IN-CANADA" SALE
MANY Factories being partially idle through lack of orders, we extended to a large number of Canadian Manufacturers early in January an invitation to co-operate with us in bringing about a great "Made-in-Canada" Sale.
Many Manufacturers, anxious to keep their workers more fully employed, have responded generously, and have agreed to sell us a quantity of their products at bare cost of labor and material, and we on our part have undertaken to sell these goods at prices covering bare cost of handling.
This action has helped immediately to create greater activity in these Factories, providing more employment, giving to many Manufacturers an opportunity to make up raw materials into finished products for "spot cash" if they so desired, and at the same time putting within your reach new Canadian Goods at prices that are extraordinarily low.
THE "MADE-IN-CANADA" SALE BEGINS ON MONDAY, JANUARY 31ST. THE MORE QUICKLY YOU BUY UP THESE GOODS THE MORE WE CAN EXTEND TO MANUFACTURERS DURING FEBRUARY OUR INVITATION TO CO-OPERATE IN HELPING TO KEEP THE WHEELS OF COMMERCE TURNING, WHICH, WE ARE ASSURED, IS NOW OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO CANADA.
For details read our Daily Announcements.
President

The T. Eaton Co., Toronto and Winnipeg, has been having a "Made-in-Canada" Sale, and the above is a reproduction of the advertisement this firm has been running to introduce it. In the grocery departments displays of Canadian-made goods were shown, attracting a great deal of attention, and undoubtedly increasing sales of the same.

A Big Opportunity

In speaking of this matter to Canadian Grocer representative, W. Finlay, manager of E. J. Quinn's grocery, St. Catherine St. W., Montreal, said: "In the past few years our Canadian manufacturers have had a wonderful opportunity to develop the trade in their own country. Everything has been in their favor. The war gave a certain sentiment to the purchasing of "Made-In-Canada" goods. It barred from the market much of the European competition and in the last two years it has left a high rate of exchange against importations from the United States. I feel, however, that for the most part our manufacturers have not taken full advantage of the opportunity. Some were content with the business that was forced upon them and as soon as conditions came to nearly normal again the business went back to the foreign manufacturers who held it before. In other cases manufacturers diagnosed the requirements of the Canadian people wrongly and paid more attention to meeting foreign prices and cutting quotations made by outsiders than they did to quality.

People Demand Quality

"It is true that people to-day, at least our customers, demand quality above all else. I do not doubt that if our manufacturers had paid as much attention to meeting competition on a quality basis as they have on price, that the Canadian market would be for Canadians alone. I cannot say that this is a new characteristic of the market, but to me it is quite evident to-day that people believe that only the best is cheap and they are buying on that principle. Perhaps after all it is the grocer that thinks so, and that he has instilled this into his customers, for in most cases he can sell them what he feels confident he can recommend. But it is quite evident that the customers are pleased with the plan for they come back and demand the same quality regardless of the price.

Most Noticeable in Canned Goods

"This is most noticeable in canned goods. In one line Canadian canned goods stand supreme and that is in canned tomatoes. Canadian tomatoes are known the world over."

Mr. Finlay took from the shelf two cans of corn. One sells for fifty cents and the other for thirty cents, yet he states that they sell almost two cases of the expensive canned corn to one of the cheaper.

Continuing, Mr. Findlay said: "In my opinion our manufacturers can meet competition on a quality basis. There is no reason why Canadians cannot prepare food-stuffs quite as well as out-

Heavy Payment in Exchange on Foods

Canada's Heavy Imports of Foodstuffs From the United States Results in Big Outlay in Exchange—The Present Exchange Situation and How it Works Out.

By C. J. MORRIS

IN A period of eight months from the first of April until the end of November, Canada paid in exchange on foodstuffs imported from the United States approximately eight million dollars. This figure is taken on the basis of an average rate of 14 per cent.

Lengthy articles have appeared from time to time in some of the newspapers of Canada which would tend to make the ordinary reader believe that the present discount on the value of the Canadian dollar in the United States is an arbitrary charge made by the United States merchant, constituting an extra profit for him, which he could forego if it so pleased him.

A three-column article recently appeared in a newspaper explaining that the discount on the Canadian dollar was a charge made by the United States merchant to cover what he considered or what he pretended to consider was his risk of losing his money owing to Canada becoming insolvent.

It is somewhat extraordinary that an article of this kind should have been allowed to pass the editorial censorship of a paper of any standing, showing, as it did, the writer's lack of knowledge of the most rudimentary principles governing the rates of exchange between the two countries.

Fixes Price in Canadian Money

It cannot be too strongly impressed upon the Canadian merchant that the United States manufacturer from whom he buys goods has no more influence in fixing the present premium which he is compelled to charge upon United States money than has the Canadian manufacturer himself in fixing the rate of exchange between Canada and Great Britain, France, Italy or any other country whose currency is now at a discount in comparison with our own.

When the Canadian manufacturer makes a sale to England or France, he fixes his price in Canadian dollars. He cannot do otherwise as, with a fluctuating rate of exchange, he would never know, should he agree to accept payment in sterling or francs, what sum he would realize for his goods. He has no control over what his customer will have to pay for Canadian dollars. One thing, however, is certain. He undoubtedly wishes his customer to be able to secure Canadian money at a reasonable rate, knowing that unless this is possible he stands a chance of losing future business, and that the lower the premium on Canadian currency the better will be his prospects for a continuation of his foreign business.

Losing Customers by Exchange

The United States trader quotes a price to his Canadian customer in United States dollars. If his customer can get those United States dollars at par in exchange for Canadian dollars, it would be satisfactory to the United States trader. He gains nothing if his customer has to pay 5, 10 or 15 per cent. premium to get United States money. The result of such a state of affairs to him is that he stands every chance of losing his customer.

So few fully understand the circumstances causing the rise or fall in the rate of exchange, that it is worth while devoting a small space to an explanation, showing in as simple a way as possible how the money of one nation comes to be at a premium or at a discount in regard to that of another nation.

The Explanation of Exchange

Perhaps we shall be able to understand the causes for an exchange rate better than in any other way if we place ourselves, for the time being, in the position of the exchange broker or bank.

Let us suppose we are in business as exchange brokers; United States merchants come to us for Canadian money and Canadians come to us for United States money. As long as the demand from each side is about equal we need only make an infinitesimal charge, a small fraction of one per cent. being sufficient to remunerate us. But let us suppose that we have a very large demand for United States money and practically no demand for Canadian money. Our capital is soon turned entirely into Canadian money for which we have no use. It is lying idle, bringing in no return. We try to dispose of it to other brokers and bankers, but we find they are in the same position as ourselves, all loaded up with Canadian money. What can we do? We must dispose of it in some way and obtain United States currency, in order to carry on our business. The only thing we can do is to go to our financial friends and investors whom we may know and induce them to take it from us by offering it to them at a discount. This discount of 5, 10 or 15 per cent., or whatever we may offer, induces them to take it from us for investment in Canadian securities. This is the only purpose to which they can put it, otherwise they would have to hold it and it would be bringing them in no return. As our receipts of Canadian money continue we have to offer them still greater inducements to relieve us of it. Naturally we cannot suffer the loss of this discount ourselves, and so we have to charge it to all clients coming to us with Canadian money to change. Thus as the discount we have to allow increases, so the rate of exchange increases, and as long as all our clients bring us Canadian money and there is no counterbalancing demand for it we are obliged to exact a high premium from all who require American money in exchange for it.

It will thus be seen that it is really the Canadian merchant himself who causes the rise in the exchange rate because he is willing to pay the discount rather than do without American goods.

Retailers Tendered Dinner By Local Firms

Hamilton Manufacturers Serve Products They Make to More Than 200 Dealers and Tell Them About Process of Manufacture

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

HAMILTON, Feb. 9.—A new method was adopted by a number of Hamilton foodstuff manufacturers here on Wednesday evening last to get more closely in touch with the retail grocers who are buying and selling their products. A dinner was arranged at the Royal Connaught by the Hamilton Advertisers' Agency, president of which is Russell T. Kelley, the menu consisting of foods manufactured by Hamilton firms who are clients of the advertising agency. The retail grocers were the guests. More than 200 attended the dinner. The manufacturers whose products were served to the guests were Dominion Canners, Limited; Brant Ice Cream Company; Harper Presnail Cigar Company, Limited, and R. B. Hill, bread manufacturer. The menu consisted of soup, roast smoked ham, marmalade tarts, ice cream, bread, of course, coffee and the cigars. Everything was made in Hamilton.

After the dinner a number of representatives of the manufacturers addressed the retailers, explaining why they should buy and sell their particular products. Russell T. Kelley was toastmaster. The dinner, he pointed out, was given for the purpose of presenting to the retail grocers of Hamilton a more intimate knowledge of several Hamilton products. Hamilton has according to the industrial commissioner over seven hundred industries.

Buy Canadian Goods

Mr. Kelley asked the retailers to buy and sell goods made in Canada.

"There are a great many thoughtless people in the world," he said. "You here to-night are business people and are therefore cognizant of the need of purchasing goods made in Canada. You have a responsibility in this regard—sell goods made in Canada; we have a wonderful country in Canada and it is our duty as Canadians to support it in every possible way. My two thoughts to you to-night are 'Buy goods made in Hamilton,' preferably those manufactured by your hosts this evening, and secondly, 'Buy goods made in Canada.'"

A. P. Rogers, sales manager of Dominion Canners, Limited, spoke for his firm and referred to Dominion brand soup which had been served. This he said was a new line being introduced to the Canadian trade.

Business of Merchandising

Chas. Duff, of John Duff & Son, pork packers, referred to the business of merchandising and particularly that of retailing and gave some ideas as to the manufacture of the products represented by his firm.

W. J. Brigger, of the T. Upton Company, introduced S. H. Moore, of Toronto, sales agent for his firm. Mr. Moore stated that the company he represented was the pioneer marmalade manufacturer and that they had brought to Hamilton the first car of Seville oranges ever used in this city.

Wm. Presnail, of the Harper Presnail Cigar Company, made some interesting references to the journey the tobacco leaf makes from Cuba to the factory of his firm. H. N. Carr, of the Brant Ice Cream Company, spoke for his firm. Norman Dalley, of the F. F. Dalley Corporation, was unable to be present but sent a message describing the manufacture of Thermokept coffee.

The dinner was voted a splendid success. It emphasized the importance attached to the active interest of the retail dealer in merchandising the product of the manufacturer.

Better Marketing of Niagara Fruits

Recent Organization of Niagara Fruit Growers Ltd. Will Mean a More Economic Distribution of Fruits From This District—Overseas Export Will Be Encouraged With the Government Lending Assistance

FRUIT growers in the Niagara district are falling into line and identifying themselves with the new Niagara Fruitgrowers, Limited, a company shortly to be incorporated. Already the majority of the growers have come into the new organization, and 1921 promises to witness the handling of fruit, grown in the Niagara district, in a much more satisfactory manner than ever before. Investigating the plans and ideas of such successful organizations as the Okanagan Fruitgrowers' Association, the California and Oregon Fruitgrowers' Associations, the Niagara growers have embodied in their by-laws and constitution the best of each organization, and believe that in their present plans they will have an institution that will serve not only the growers, but the dealers and consumers, to the very best advantage. The district has recently been canvassed, in an effort to have at least a million and a half in business guaranteed for the coming season. This objective has already been accomplished. The by-laws and constitution have been adopted. Col. H. L. Roberts, Grimsby, is the manager pro tem.

A More Even Distribution

Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture in Ontario, has been foremost in bringing the movement to its present state of organization. Witnessing the tremendous waste that took place in Niagara fruits last year, and determining that if it was at all in his power to prevent a repetition, the Minister of Agriculture took steps to form an association or company that will, as is done by similar organizations in other fruit-growing countries, control the products at the point of origin, and conduct an even distribution of the same.

"Last summer's experience was sufficient proof that an organization of this kind is badly needed," the Honorable Minister told a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day. "Quantities of fruit went to waste last season that might have easily been utilized by people, who were deprived of it simply because there was not the organization to see to it that distribution was systematically carried on. So often it has been a case where one town has been glutted with fruit, while another, not a great distance away, has received scarcely any.

Estimate Requirements

"With an organization such as is now under way, we will be able to foresee more accurately what the requirements of each town will be, how many cars will be necessary to carry the fruit, the necessary number of containers and so on. The transportation difficulties last year were very trying, and not altogether the fault of the railways. If the latter can be told just what number of cars will be required, in certain periods, they will be better prepared to provide them, and much of the loss, delay and confusion will be avoided. Then again in the matter of containers, the shortage of baskets and boxes last season was serious. Manufacturers of containers will be approached, and given some definite idea as to the number that will be required to handle the crops.

Retail Trade Will Benefit

"The retail trade will benefit very materially as a result of this co-operative plan. In fact it will redound to the benefit of all concerned. I practically look to this association to transform the trade in apples. In the future apples to a very large extent in Ontario will be sold in boxes instead of barrels. Boxes permit of much greater satisfaction in grading than do the barrels. Less fraudulent packing is possible in boxes than in barrels, and the retailer will appreciate this fact. Grocers tell us that they prefer the boxes as they are more easily displayed, and they claim that much business results from good displays. There is a certain market, however, in the Old Country that calls for barrel apples, and for this reason the practice of packing apples in barrels will not be wholly eliminated. Already the growth of the box apple trade has been tremendous, British Columbia and imported apples being packed in this way. The average consumer in these days likes them better, too.

Will Have Cold Storage Plant

"I believe the legitimate trade will be better served than ever before, as a result of this organization. Quality will be maintained, and people will know exactly what grade they are getting. All waste will be eliminated, and altogether the handling of Niagara fruits will be conducted much more economically. The new association hopes to have a cold storage plant where fruit may be stored, perhaps, for a period of twenty-four hours, or until such time as the market is ready to absorb it."

The Export Possibilities

Grown in Canada fruit is to have a larger place in the Old Country and European markets than ever before, if the scheme of the Niagara Fruitgrowers, Limited, works out. According to the Hon. Manning Doherty, his department in the Ontario Government is prepared to lend every assistance in establishing the export market in the tender fruits grown in Ontario on a broader and bigger scale. "We are going to put peaches in England and Europe in good-sized quantities this year. If South Africa can sell her peaches in England, Canada can, too. South African peaches cannot be laid down in England short of twenty-six days. Niagara fruits should be delivered in from ten to twelve days.

Care in First Shipments

"Having this advantage, Niagara fruits should find a very ready sale in the old land. Apart from a few small shipments, there has been nothing in the way of exporting these fruits overseas. The Government is prepared to assist trial shipments in every way. Sample packages of peaches will be sent to the Government's agent in London, and he will endeavor to ascertain the quantity that the different selling agencies can handle. Our first shipment will probably amount to about one thousand cases. These peaches or other tender fruits will be specially packed. Each peach will be separately wrapped, one dozen peaches to each package, and one dozen packages to a box. The care taken with the first shipments will mean much towards the success of an export trade in this regard. The Government will have a man accompany this first shipment to the sailing port on this side, and another representative will meet the shipment at Liverpool, taking every precaution to insure the quickest possible delivery.

Higher Prices in London

"The South African peach cannot compete with the Canadian peach, and the former was selling in London last summer at 25 cents each. The Old Country trade should take our surplus crop of peaches. The waste that took place last year must be avoided, and it is only in building up a trade of this kind, and conducting distribution in an equitable manner, that it can be eliminated."

The Niagara Fruitgrowers, Limited, will handle all grapes sold in Canada for consumption in the raw state. Grapes exported and manufactured will be handled by the Grape Growers' Association. All the members of the Grape Growers' Association will be members of the Niagara Fruitgrowers, Limited.

Selling British Made Goods in Canada

Strong Organization to Take Up Matter of Fraudulent Trademarks—Montreal Speaker Believes That Tide Has Turned, and Feeling of Stability in Values Can Bring Business Revival

THE Canadian Association of British Manufacturers recently met in Toronto to discuss their problems. The retiring president, Geo. A. Marshall, and the newly-elected president, Major John Harris, intimated that steps would be taken to extend the activities of the organization to other centres of the Dominion.

Mr. Marshall, in his annual report, gave a resume of the work of the association, both in Toronto and Montreal, the Montreal annual meeting having been held on January 21. The work of the two associations being reviewed in this manner gave a wider scope of the activities of the organization.

"The association," said Mr. Marshall, "which was established in the early part of 1919 on the initiative of H. M. Trade Commissioners in Montreal and Toronto, has now a membership of over 200 representatives of the British trade in Canada, which development is due to your branch council members, trade section committees, and the valued assistance rendered through the good offices of H. M. trade commissioners. As outlined in our last annual report, the association, as members, has been strengthened considerably by the Federation of British Industries, which is an extensive organization dealing with British manufactures all over the world.

Customs Valuation of Invoices

"During the past year the question of the value of invoices for duty purposes arose, and in order to meet the suggestions from various members a deputation consisting of Montreal and Toronto branches waited upon the commissioner of customs at Ottawa, with the result that the authorities decided in July last to accept for the purpose of appraising duty the pound sterling at the current rate of exchange. This is one achievement which the members, their customers and the British exporter should appreciate ,and I consider this action alone should justify the association's existence."

Election of Officers

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President of both Montreal and Toronto branches, Major John Harris.

First vice-president of Toronto branch, C. W. Beal.

Second vice-president, Harold Wilson.

The president of the two organizations, Toronto and Montreal, is elected alternately from these places, the selection coming this year to Toronto as it had the greatest paid-up membership. Members of the Toronto council were elected as follows: R. D. Harling, W. G. Patrick, W. Bruce Morrow, Arthur C. King, R. W. Paton, James Haywood and John Wilson.

MAJOR JOHN HARRIS

President Canadian Association of British Manufacturers. Came to Canada in 1914 and saw military service in the Great War, rising from lieutenant to major. Decorated by the President of France. Also in South African War. Keenly interested in British trade in Canada. He is manager of the Nugget Polish Co., Ltd.

Hamilton Grocer Is Following Markets Down

"We are getting good business to-day in many lines," stated a Hamilton, Ont., retail grocer the other day to a Canadian Grocer representative, "simply because we are marking our goods based on the present costs.

"During the sensational rises in sugar and in other lines, we always followed the market. In many cases we had to do considerable explaining to our customers because other merchants were not doing the same. I remember on one occasion we were quoting sugar at $16.00 a hundred. We heard on a certain night that the price would be up $2.00 the following morning. A despatch appeared in next morning's paper to the effect that this advance was made by the refiners. We immediately put our price up to $18.00 on the sugar we had in stock.

Surprised at Advance

"One of our good customers knew early about the advance and dropped in to get a hundred pounds of sugar. I told her the price would be $18.00.

" 'But,' she replied, 'you were selling it yesterday at $16.00.'

" 'Yes,' I answered, 'that was the case, but that was the price yesterday; in the meantime sugar has gone up $2.00 a hundred.'

" She could not understand why I should advance my prices as I was selling the same sugar that I had in stock the previous day. We had quite an argument but I pointed out very firmly that I must take my profits on the advancing market as I would certainly have to take any losses that would occur in a declining market. That is exactly what is taking place to-day and if I had not adjusted prices on the basis of replacement value as they were going up I could not now afford to adjust them on the same basis when they are declining."

QUALITY AND PRICE ESSENTIAL

THE right note has been struck in a circular sent out by the Canadian Manufacturers Association in connection with a "Made-in-Canada" campaign. It refers to the importance of the co-operation of merchants and their clerks in such a campaign and to the need of making familiar to them the quality of the goods. One paragraph reads:

> "Don't forget the influence of the merchants and their clerks in this campaign. Keep them constantly informed as to the merits of your goods, and show them that it is in their interests as well as their customers' to buy lines made in Canada."

The real essentials in pushing sales of any goods are quality and right prices. Making these facts known through the proper channels, the success of such a campaign is assured. Investigations among retailers show that customers have no hesitancy in buying goods of any kind providing they have quality and a reasonable price to recommend them. Retailers base their purchases on these important qualifications. They declare that quality in nine cases out of ten sells the goods. The manufacturer will do well to bear this in mind, and so keep the standard of his product at such a high level that the retailer will have the utmost confidence in the goods he is called upon to recommend to his trade as top-quality merchandise.

RETURNING GOODS

WHEN prices began to take a downward course, and during the weeks of readjustment, manufacturers complained of a tendency on the part of retailers to return shipments, or in other words to repudiate orders given perhaps weeks and months before. In most instances the shipper accepted the returned goods and took the loss.

Now there is something to be said for the retailer who has done this thing, but on the other hand, it has contributed largely to the unsettlement of business. Some salesmen, it is claimed, have a habit of loading up merchants with goods that they could not hope to sell in a reasonable time. The dealer has over-bought, perhaps, because of the insistence of some enthusiastic salesman. When the goods are delivered, the retailer finds he cannot take them, and they are returned, all of which is very annoying to the manufacturer or wholesaler, as the case might be.

Goods have been returned more recently because of the policy of the merchant refusing to buy in any quantities for fear of market declines, and these orders were possibly placed some time ago.

It is suggested that in the best interests of business, it would be much better for the retailer to accept these orders, even though he may have to sell them out at cost or a very slight profit. With the application of some selling effort, he possibly could sell them off quickly, and this plan generally would benefit trade, as well as tend to establish a greater confidence between retailer, wholesaler and manufacturer. The wholesaler should, too, meet his obligations to the manufacturer in this same way.

EDITORIALS IN BRIEF

THERE HAS been nothing further heard of the appeal against the Luxury Tax on confectionery. Perhaps some of the legislators at the coming session may be induced to realize that chocolates are more of a food and a necessity than a luxury.

ALL EYES will be turned on the Dominion Parliamentarians when the House meets for its spring session. It is to be hoped that Government will keep its hands off business. Lloyd Harris, former chairman of the Canadian Trade Mission to London, said recently: "The Government doesn't know anything about business because it is not the function of Government officials."

THE RECENT increase in express rates is causing dissatisfaction in some quarters, it being pointed out that undue consideration is being given to the parcel post system by these constant advances in express charges. Wholesalers and retailers alike declare that the parcel post rates have not been increased since the war began and state that such a condition is an unfair advantage for the mail order houses to the utter disregard of the retailer in the small town.

THIS is a period in which conservative buying and strict attention to all the details of business will be most profitable, and it is a time when, above all others, the retail grocer will derive most benefit by keeping in close touch with his jobber, buying frequently just such goods as are needed, keeping his stock as low as possible and yet at the same time with a good assortment and sufficiently complete to meet all demands promptly and thus not lose any business that comes his way. There may be a shift in the character of the demand and the individual stock should be adjusted accordingly.

Beating the Mail Order Houses

How a Grocer in the West Went Into a Town That Was Sending All Its Business to the Mail Order Houses, and Made Good in the Grocery Trade—Mail Order Customers Now Are Very Few

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A FEW years ago a certain town was in a bad way, except for a few short-visioned grocers. It was known as the highest priced town in the West and farmers gave it the widest possible berth, buying there only when they could not go elsewhere. The town was dwindling. The mail order trade was growing by leaps and bounds. It seemed doomed to slow strangulation.

To-day it is called the best town in which to trade. It is flourishing. It is a good place in which to do business. The mail order folks have scarcely a look-in. And this is largely the result of the acumen, enterprise, courage of one man—Delay is his name. I failed to get his initials. He tells it this way:

"I was in the wholesale business here for years, made money, cleaned up and got out. I had no special plans; really did not think of going back into business. But once I happened down to the station and saw great piles of merchandise addressed to farmers and to residents of the town whom I knew personally. These were mail order goods, and I was amazed to note how much they amounted to. I asked the freight agent about it, and he told me the business was growing so fast it was hard to keep track of — that every week showed a substantial increase. I decided to investigate business in the town a little, and, having plenty of time in which to do it, I may have made a good job of it.

Killing the Golden Goose for Fair!

"Immediately I found many things I knew well enough but had not reflected on, so their significance just began to come to me. Already I was familiar with the high prices merchants were charging here — especially grocers, for it was their line with which I was acquainted. But when I got to studying, I found this:

"Some eight or ten grocers were in business here then who were making money in a sinful way. They seemed to have some sort of 'gentlemen's agreement' to get all the traffic would bear, and then as much more as possible. For the only way they followed the market was up—never down. For example, canned corn got up to 15 cents a can, and there it remained. When they paid down to 80 cents the dozen, it was the same 15 cents it had been when the cost was $1.25, and other things were in proportion. Those men were coining money all right, but it was at the expense of the town and the town was feeling it badly.

"My studies led me to analyze what I knew of grocers on the average. I reflected how often I had sold men candy —for that was my long suit on the road —and could not but know that they lost money on every purchase through their habit of guessing when they handed it out. Hardly any of them weighed candy. They just had quarter pound bags for five cents' worth and halves for ten cents' worth, and filled them—liberally—by guess. They got by on some lines when the cost was seven to nine cents the pound; but as the cost crept up and they continued the practice, they lost out.

"As it is a delicate thing for a salesman to say anything to his customers which they, with their habitual ignorance and thick touchiness, may regard as 'butting in on their affairs,' I was able to pass out a hint here and there only indirectly. I might see a clerk hand out what I knew was twenty cents' worth, or more, for ten cents, and then I could get the boss aside and say to him: 'I believe, Sam, that I'd watch that boy of yours on his candy sales.' Then I'd relate what I had seen and add: 'That system was not bad when candy was cheap, perhaps—though it never was a good system — but to-day such guesswork will ruin you.' That was as far as I could go.

Study of Catalogues, Prices, Freights

"I took plenty of time to my studies. Not only did I know that any real competition would put such slipshod retailers out of business, but I wanted to see whether able men had a chance with the mail order competition. I found what any man who goes into details intelligently can find—that if he sells on a basis similar to what the mail order fellows do, he can meet them and make money doing it.

"So after a while I got into the retail grocery business. I took a store on a side street, cut out all frills and furbelows, sold for cash and went after the bulky business. I put a crimp into the old guard of easy-money boys who were killing the town, but the interesting thing is how I got the grocery orders that had been going to the mail order fellows.

"We made it a point to advertise by the printed and spoken word that we would fill any order on mail order terms at latest catalogue prices. I recall one big farmer who scoffed at me when I made that offer. 'How can a little, one-horse concern like you make good on such an offer?' he asked. I told him he need not care how we did it; all he needed to do was to try us. My proposition was: 'Write out your order, selecting from catalogue, bring it in here and it will be filed for the total catalogue cost, plus freight and money order charge.'

"We further told those folks that we did better than the mail order people, because they could fetch in their orders, leave them and call for the merchandise the same day. Also, as a starter, we said—to this doubting Thomas farmer, for instance—'you can inspect the goods when they are asembled and if you are not satisfied that they are up to grade, you do not need to take them.'

"Understand now: customers cannot come in here and show us the price quoted in the catalogue for package raisins is 24 cents and ask us if we can meet that price. No; our price then is 30 cents. But they can make up their order—we do not write it out for them, never help them select or look at goods nor answer any questions. We waste no time with them. They can get no such service from the mail order houses. They can write in our store or at home, but what they must do is write out their order, take the prices from the catalogue, pay us in full for the order, plus freight and the three cents money order charge. Then they hand the order to us and we fill it.

Confidence Fully Established Now

"In the beginning there was a lot of quarreling. Farmers would come in, want to dispute and argue and almost fight us about it. We stood pat. We simply repeated what we would do and how we would do it, and let it go at that. But we made good every time, and made some money out of it always, too, on the average.

"To-day there is no quarreling. Hardly ever do we hear a question about prices or terms. Customers now know that we make good. They buy in the regular way, a thing or two at a time and pay our regular prices, if they like, or make up their general orders. We deal either way; and we have put the town back on the map."

The trade name of Delay's concern is Consumers' Wholesale Grocery Company. I saw the main store, for there are either three or four of them now. It is only a single-front store of moderate depth. It is fitted out with the simple necessaries for weighing and wrapping groceries, and not a thing that is not a necessary. There is some shelving on one side, where most of the actual service is performed. On the other side there is no shelving except canned goods cases and soap boxes with the sides pulled off, piled up as high as the tallest man may reach. There are no frills, but a lot of business.

Why the concern is called wholesale I do not know. I suspect it was thought in the beginning that it might seem as if thus the consumer was going to get the inside track. Anyway, it is a fact that this one store turns out about $300,000 worth of groceries a year, and that is pretty nearly up to wholesale proportions.

Merchants Prosperous

A remarkable slant on this town's history, as it has developed during the four or five years since Delay started his present venture, is that the grocers are prosperous generally. I was told that "they were all making money." This may not be strictly accurate, but undoubtedly it goes to show that the business of the entire town is on a wholesome basis. And that stands to reason. For exorbitant prices running through such a vital line as groceries will kill any town. And who wants to live in a dead town?

Another striking thing is that the mail order business has dwindled to practically nothing; and is not that worth while? Delay takes no special credit for all this. He went into business for himself to make money out of what he sized up as an unusual opportunity. Results to date show that he appraised the situation right.

Maybe this story will serve to show that it can be done—that if you have git up and git and courage, plus knowledge of conditions—if you make your rules of trading along well thought out lines and then cleave to those rules—and if you are intelligently industrious, you can do this too!

Kraft and MacLaren Interests are United

Important Amalgamation of Cheese Men To Be Known as Kraft-MacLaren Cheese Co.—Head Office at Montreal—Kraft Bros. Were Formerly Canadians

SINCE our last issue we have received further information regarding the Kraft-MacLaren Cheese Co., Ltd., which has just been organized with $1,000,000 capital, the head office of which is to be in Montreal.

The new company is the result of an amalgamation of the cheese interests of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., and the J. L. Kraft & Bros., Co., of Chicago. The MacLaren Co., are perhaps manufacturers of cheese in jars, as well as dealers in Cheddar Cheese, Canadian Stilton, Brick, Limburger and MacLaren Cheese in packages. The J. L. Kraft & Bros., Co., of Chicago are manufacturers of cheese in what are termed sanitary packages. They also own and control a number of patents pertaining to the manufacture of cheese, the principle of which is the process patent on sterilizing cheese in tins. The amalgamation embraces the cheese products manufactured by the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., in Canada and throughout the world and the business of the J. L. Kraft & Bros., Co., in Canada and a large part of the export business of the J. L. Kraft & Bros. Co., which has formerly been conducted through their New York house, particularly that portion of the export business on Elkhorn Cheese in tins going to the British Empire.

Agency Business Separate

The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., will continue to be conducted as befare under the name of the MacLaren Wright Co., Ltd., with Henry Wright and his former associaties conducting the business, which will include their business as manufacturers' agents to the grocery trade in various lines of food products and grocers' sundries, including the manufacture of peanut butter, olives, prepared mustard and dessert jelly powder, etc.

Henry Wright, president of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., will also become a director in the new Kraft-MacLaren Co. The other directors of the Kraft-MacLaren Co., will be as follows: Wm. H. Dunn, president of the Wm. H. Dunn Co., Ltd., of Montreal, also of the Dunn-Hortop Co., Ltd., of Toronto. Mr. Dunn is also manager of the Borden Co., Ltd., and has recently been elected president of the food products section of the Canadian Manufacturers Association; J. L. Kraft, president of the J. L. Kraft & Bros., Co., of Chicago and Kraft Bros. Cheese Co., of Wisconsin; C. H. Kraft and Ernest Ridgway of Chicago; Fred Kraft of New York and Albert Irving, of Philadelphia.

The purpose of the amalgamation of these two interests, as stated to Canadian Grocer, is to consolidate in one corporation the various interests so that all varieties of cheese may be sold from one source; also to organize an export department within the company to go after export trade.

None of the changes above referred to will take place until after April 1. Until that time the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. will be handled by Mr. Wright, as it has been heretofore.

An advertising campaign is being planned for June or July or as soon as possible after the Kraft-MacLaren Co., occupy their new fire-proof building in Montreal, which is being constructed on the historical site of the old home of Maisonneuve, the first Governor of Canada, adjoining the Place Royal Square

Kraft Bros. Originally Canadians

It will be interesting to our readers to know that the Kraft Brothers, of whom there are seven, were former Canadians, living at Fort Erie, Ont. Up to 1902, J. L. Kraft, the founder of the business, was a grocery clerk in Ferguson's store at that point. The total capital of the Kraft companies to-day is $5,200,000.

Salmon Exchange For Liquor Scheme Is Not Popular

Vancouver, Feb.—There has been too much publicity given already to a suggestion made to the British Columbia Government, that the British Columbia cheaper grades of salmon should be bartered by the Government for liquor in Europe.

The scheme originated with an individual outside regular canned salmon circles, and the association of the canned salmon business with the controversial subject of liquor has been sincerely regretted by some of the packers. Others are of the opinion that a constructive marketing policy, designed to assist the trade to sell salmon, is what is needed, and not a palliative, nor a temporary expedient. Two of the large packers have refused to have anything to do with the proposed scheme or any other adventuring proposition. The reason for the whole plan is—2½ per cent. of five million dollars.

Maritime Grocers Report More Activity in Trade

Business Shows Marked Improvement Since the Beginning of the New Year—St. John, N.B., Retail Grocers Elect Officers

ST. JOHN, N.B., Feb. 9.—(Special).—Up-to-date business methods, including the figuring of profits, the record of costs and the installation of labor and time saving systems, were explained to the grocers' section of the St. John branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada at the annual meeting, which was held here last week. The speaker was A. C. L. Tapley, who described in detail the various forms of business systems in use by the most successful grocers in the country at the present time. He was tendered a hearty vote of thanks at the conclusion of his address.

Officers Elected

Officers for the year were elected as follows: Honorary chairman, J. B. McPherson; chairman, M. E. Grass; first vice-chairman,, F. R. McMulkin; second vice-chairman, W. Alexander Porter; secretary, Robin Vanwart, and treasurer, J. P. McBay.

Mr. Grass, when interviewed after the meeting by a representative of Canadian Grocer, said that the general consensus of opinion among the retail grocers was that conditions were showing a decided improvement. Prices are for the most part firmer than they have been for some time and the volume of business has gradually increased since the lull that followed the Christmas trading.

New Scales Installed

Owners of stalls in the city market and meat dealers generally have expressed considerable satisfaction regarding the installation by the city recently of a set of track scales in the market here. Not only can meat coming to the market be handled more rapidly and with less trouble, but the cleanliness of the new arrangement as compared with the old platform scales is an added improvement.

NEWS FROM WESTERN CANADA

WESTERN

Dan O'Rourke, general sales manager of the North-West Biscuit Company, Limited, of Edmonton, Alta., was on a business trip to Winnipeg last week.

L. J. Marcou, sales manager of the W. Clark, Limited, of Montreal, is on a business trip throughout the Western provinces.

WYMARK, SASK., MERCHANT LOSES HEAVILY IN ROBBERY

The store of G. Peters, at Wymark, Sask., was entered one night last week, and between $800 and $1,000 taken from the safe. No evidence as to how the thief or thieves gained entrance to the building was apparent. The door of the safe was found unlocked in the morning when the staff came to open up for business, but the inside door and drawers were smashed, supposedly with a sledge hammer which was found on the floor beside the safe. There was a small quantity of money and several cheques and money orders left in the safe and nothing in the store was touched, apparently, but the money.

Aroma of Coffee Attracts the Passing Crowds

Vancouver, Feb. 9.—A representative of Canadian Grocer was halted on Dunsmuir Street by a very pronounced aroma of freshly roasted coffee. It seemed to emanate from the Overwaitea Company's store. He entered to see if it were accidental, or whether a deliberate attack was being made on his olfactory nerves.

R. C. Kidd, the manager of the Overwaitea Chain, showed how he has the ventilating system from his coffee roaster piped underneath the display window and on to the street. The passerby certainly gets a man-sized whiff, which, taken together with the attractive window display of green and roasted coffee, and the busy sound of the grinders inside, certainly puts across a real coffee suggestion. Mr. Kidd states that his coffee trade is big, and growing fast. The groceries carried do not comprise an entire range, but only jams, pickles, etc.

Besides the main store at 615 Dunsmuir Street, there are five other Overwaitea stores in the chain, the others being located at 2434 Main Street, Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo, Kelowna and New Westminster.

Coast Retail Grocer Has Real Problem in Oriental

VANCOUVER, Feb. 9 (Special).—Calling on the retail trade week after week interviewing retailers and studying the problems of some and putting these problems up for solution to the more successful ones, for the benefit of our readers, a Canadian Grocer representative hears a great many times complaints about one thing and another. He is inclined to ask: "What is your association doing about this?" So many do not know; so many association members do not attend their association meetings, do not put their problems up to the executive for solution, and then, more often than not, reproach the association for lack of help.

The association is only as good as its members. The association is not a super entity of any kind. The association will solve many a problem only when some member or several members find the solution.

Out of 487 grocers' licenses issued in Vancouver, 171 are held by the foreign born. The Japanese Grocers' Association represents, so their secretary states, 100 per cent. of the Japanese grocers. The Chinese grocers are said to be controlled by a single Chinese syndicate. More especially is this true of the Chinese fruit and vegetable pedlars. The retail grocer on the Coast is confronted with a real problem in the Oriental. He is having a stiff fight now to maintain his early closing by-laws, and the cut-rate cash and carry competition of the big departmental stores is being keenly felt by almost all the retailers. If any retailer in B. C. feels that he has a solution to any of the retailer's problems—he should give his fellow retailers the benefit of his idea, and get their support for it. The retail association is his means of doing both. Don't grouse—lend a hand.

Express Rates Increased

OTTAWA.—The judgment of the board of railway commissioners in the express rates case has just been issued. The companies applied for a flat increase of 40 per cent. on all rates. The judgment grants an increase of 35 per cent. on first class rates and charges, 25 per cent. on second class and 20 per cent. on commodity rates.

It was found that the concession granted by the last judgment worked to a much greater extent in the interests of the mail order houses and shippers in cities and towns than in those living in rural districts who were expected to profit thereby.

With reference to the time at which the increases go into effect, the judgment of the board is as follows:

"The increases herein authorized may be provided for by the publication and filing, on one day's notice, at all express offices, blanket supplements to existing tariffs."

The average rate of increase would amount to 26 2-3 per cent., but on account of the greater percentage being carried at first-class rates, it would produce slightly more than that average incease to the express companies.

The express companies are instructed that, in the future, profits from investments and money order business shall be accounted for as revenue, and, taking these into consideration, the increases are expected to produce only sufficient revenue to take care of operation and depreciation and provide a sufficient sum with which to pay interest on investments at seven per cent.

DEALER DECIDES THE ORIGIN

siders. It seems that the only reason why they have not done so is because they have wrongly interpreted the demands of the Canadian people. They have not noticed that while people are looking for lower prices they still expect quality and are demanding it today as they have never done before. The grocer would far rather put effort behind the sale of Canadian made goods than improved lines and he will do so just as soon as he feels that he is able to give his customers the best by doing so. It takes some time for a grocer to get the confidence of his customers and when he has obtained it he is slow to hazard it by recommending anything in which he has not absolute confidence. A grocer can sell any line he chooses provided he is convinced that it is of the very best quality. Price does not play as important a part as it did some years ago. If the grocer is to get behind Canadian-made goods he must be convinced first of their quality and secondly be satisfied that the price is in keeping with the quality.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE markets during the week have shown fewer price changes, and with possibly the exception of country produce the majority of commodities have a firmer undertone. This does not indicate that prices are due for an immediate advance, but it shows, with the steadily increasing demand, that the tide of price recessions has turned and that buyers can look with a greater confidence on the markets.

Throughout the Dominion business in both wholesale and retail circles is steadily improving. This improvement does not mean that there is any heavy buying, but it indicates that merchants' stocks are reduced to a minimum and consumers are ready to buy more freely now that prices have reached a lower level.

Hogs and hog products are in an unsettled position with prices reduced and with a tendency for further easier prices. The mild weather is creating a heavy increase in the production of eggs and has resulted in greatly reduced prices.

Teas, coffees and shelled nuts are in a strong situation with prices in primary markets steadily advancing. Stocks of these lines are not heavy, and although quotations have not materially changed as yet a revisement can be expected in the near future as shipments arrive that were purchased at the higher level.

Canned vegetables are ruling fairly strong but fruits are quiet and dull. Sugars are holding steady at the refiners' price basis. Cereals and flour are fairly steady and the demand is regulated by consumption.

Further reductions are noted in the potato market, and with the large crops there is little indication that prices will be any firmer for some time at least. Then again United States has also a heavy crop, and with lower prices over the border there is little encouragement to export to that country and incidentally boost prices as was the case a year ago.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—There are very few changes in the market quotations this week. Canned chicken is cheaper and some wholesalers have slightly reduced the prices on Alaska salmon. The cereal market remains firm. Rice has scored further declines this week as a result of an effort on the part of some dealers to stimulate business. The tea market shows much improvement with a better demand for supplies although there is no change in the quotations. The only change in package goods prices is a drop of 10 cents on self-raising flour. There is no change in the flour market, it remains quiet with demands locally for only immediate requirements. There is an excellent demand for nuts and prices stand firm. The same may be said of the dried fruit market. Oranges continue to be quoted at the low prices with a good demand. Potatoes also hold at the low quotations with a good supply. Laundry soaps are all advanced 15 cents a case. In general the market is steady with a good demand for all lines.

CANNED GOODS.—The market for canned vegetables and canned fruits stands very firm at quotations given here which only pertain to Montreal and district as these quotations have been made by local wholesalers. The only changes this week are a reduction of $1 per dozen on canned chicken, making the price $5 per dozen for the one-pound tins, and a reduction made by wholesalers on Red Alaska salmon amounting to 50 cents, which makes the price $3.70 per dozen.

Dried Fruits Firm

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The dried fruit market this week stands very firm in all lines except prunes. The prune market is very weak and as a result there are differences in quotations made by local dealers. The raisin market is very firm with some higher quotations made during the week, and this has a tendency to improve the demand for currants. The supply of figs and dates is not large and it is stated by importers that the price of replacement of these stocks will be higher.

Flour Market Steady

Montreal.

FLOUR.—The flour market is quiet and steady this week. The export demand is not as active as it was on either spring wheat flour or winter wheat. Excellent Movement in Nuts

Montreal.

NUTS.—Although there is no change in the nut market this week dealers report an excellent business being done. There is a renewed demand for nuts at the present time and stocks are very low in all lines, consequently prices stand very firm with a tendency towards a move upwards.

Sugar Stands Steady

Montreal.

SUGAR.—There is no change in the quotations on sugar this week. Although prices of raws are lower and quotations on refined in New York have run as low as $6.75 per 100, quotations in Montreal appear to stand firm at the $10.50 basis. There does not seem to be any chance that American sugar will be imported at the present margin that exists between Canadian and American sugar. For this reason it is safe to predict that while this difference exists between the two prices Canadian refiners will stand firm at the $10.50 basis.

Vegetable Market Quiet

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—The vegetable market is steady this week. Potatoes are remaining firm at the low quotations and the supply seems quite sufficient to meet all demands. Further than that there is nothing of particular interest in this market. Dealers report a fair business this week but look for an improvement as a result of the opening of the Lenten season.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—Price changes during the week are not numerous but many lines are developing a slightly firmer tone. One brand of macaroni, pancake flour, peanut butter, evaporated milk and meat sauce is reduced. Coffees, teas, shelled nuts are holding firm with a tendency for higher prices. Canned vegetables continue to improve in the demand, and prices are now more in line with canners' list. Prunes are in fair demand but mostly in small quantities as the consumptive demand requires. The first shipments of Messina bitter oranges have arrived and are practically cleaned up, but further shipments are expected during the next week or ten days. Heavy shipments of navel oranges and grapefruit are arriving daily and prices are holding fairly steady. Honey prices are easier. Quotations on rices are revised downward. Potatoes and other local vegetables continue the downward trend.

Beans are in Demand

Toronto.

BEANS.—The movement for beans during the week has shown a considerable improvement, although buyers generally confine orders to small quantities. The average quotation on Ontario hand picked beans is $3.25 per bushel but some are asking as high as $3.50.

Dried Fruits Steady to Firm

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Owing to increased consumption the demand for prunes has shown some improvement during the past week. Some old crop prunes are offered, generally at a reduced price. Evaporated apples show little movement, but with the supplies of the fresh varieties becoming scarcer in some sections, shippers are anticipating an improvement in the demand. Raisins are holding firm at the high figures. Currants are fairly easy under a light demand.

Teas in Active Demand

Toronto.

TEAS.—Buyers of teas continue to gain confidence in the market and are placing orders more freely than they have for several months. The local market for fine teas is practically bare and the small stock available is commanding high prices. The primary markets are in a strong position and prices on some of the better grades are up as much as 6d. per pound. Other grades, although not advanced to as great an amount, are holding at the higher quotations that were manifest at the turn of the year.

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—The situation in the shelled walnut market this week shows a decided improvement as compared with last week. This applies particularly to Bordeaux halves and this firmer tone is due to the active demand and the advance in the value of the French franc. The shelled almond market remains fairly steady. Spot stocks are being freely sought for and considered good property owing to the recovery of British currency. Spanish shelled peanuts show a slightly easier tendency. There is no material change in the market for shelled brazils or pecans.

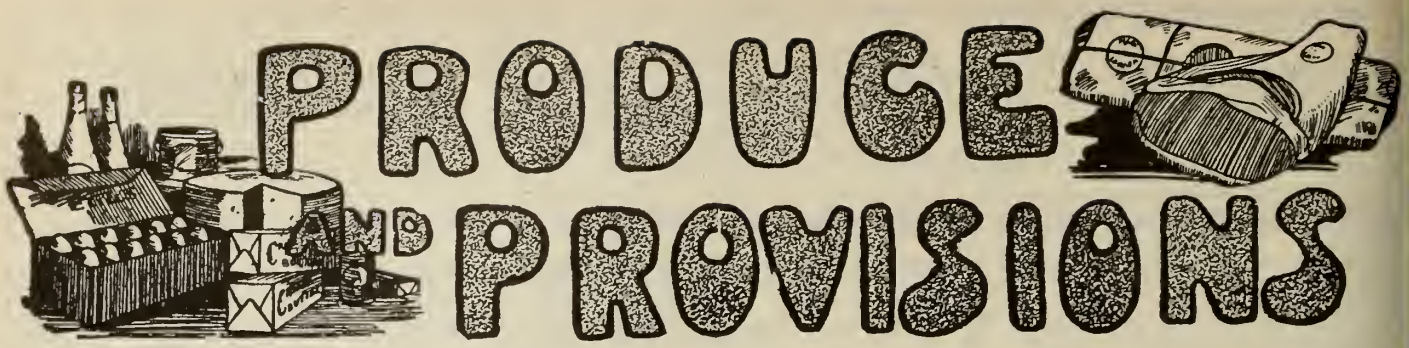
OUTPUT OF CANADIAN REFINERIES IN 1920

Canadian refineries manufactured 698,393,074 pounds of granulated sugar during 1920, according to a report by the Internal Trade Division of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics that has just come to hand. The amount of yellow and brown sugar made was given as 88,448,931 pounds, making a grand total of 786,841,805 pounds. Shipments of refined sugar during the year amounted to 749,011,010 pounds, of which 78,355,776 pounds were for export. Stocks of raw sugar on hand at the end of 1920 were placed at 167,011,429 pounds. Receipts of raw sugar for the four weeks ending December 21 were 37,571,295 pounds, and for the entire year receipts by Canadian refineries were 905,092,405. It should be mentioned that repurchases by refineries are included in the above figures of sugar production for the twelve months.



Dealing With the Exchange Situation

Paper on "World Markets," by E. C. Fox, President of Wm. Davies Company, Ltd., Toronto, is Read Before Annual Convention of the Canadian Produce Association in Montreal—Important Subject of Exchange is Referred to.

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, Feb. 10.—The ninth annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association opened yesterday morning at the Windsor Hotel in Montreal. A meeting of the executive committee prior to the opening of the convention was held to discuss certain matters which were to be brought before the convention as a whole later in the day. At ten-thirty the convention was called to order. The official welcome of Mederic Martin, M.P., mayor of the city, was extended by Alderman J. P. Dixon, owing to the unavoidable absence of the mayor. In no unmistakable terms he welcomed the men of the convention and hoped they would enjoy their short stay in the city of Montreal. He also added that if any of them should require the help of the mayor or any of the officials of the city during their visit they had the promise of their assistance. He stated that in 1877 he had entered the grocery trade and in consequence had a personal interest in the business of this convention. He laid stress upon the idea of standardization of farm produce, and said, "When the produce merchants of Canada can give to our own people and the people of foreign countries the very best of farm produce, then they will be able to command the best prices in the world. The grocers, to my mind, have a unique opportunity of judging the people of a country. They deal with the women, the men, and the children of the country. They are continually in touch with the most vital artery of trade. If such is the case with grocers, it is even more true in connection with produce trade, where not only the business of our own country is touched, but the business of many countries."

Alderman Dixon referred to the days when eggs sold at 8 cents a dozen and turkeys at 6 cents per pound, and stated that it was a matter of wonder that in those days the farmers were able to make a living at all when they were getting such very small prices for their produce. He added in conclusion that his worship the mayor regretted his inability to be present at this convention on account of having to attend the session of the Quebec Legislature which is now in progress.

Greetings from the West

President H. R. Gray read telegrams from the Minister of Agriculture and of Montreal, who is presiding at all sessions of the Canadian Produce Association.

from Mr. Jones, the ex-secretary of the National Poultry, Butter and Egg Association, who is in Chicago, regretting that they were unable to attend the convention in Montreal and extending their best wishes for the success of the same. A telegram was also received from the Missouri Poultry and Egg Association extending the best wishes of the American produce merchants. A number of telegrams were received from the city of Winnipeg, including one from the secretary of the Board of Trade, one from L. A. Gibson of the Dairymen's Association and one from Mr. MacLean of the Butter and Egg section of the Board of Trade Winnipeg, inviting and urging that the next convention of the Canadian Produce Association be held in Winnipeg. After the reading of these telegrams it was moved and seconded that they be received and the matter of holding the next convention in Winnipeg be referred to a later session of the convention.

President's Address

President Gray in his annual address said:—

It is my pleasure and privilege to welcome you to our ninth annual convention. The produce trade of Montreal is highly honored by your presence and by way of introduction it may not be amiss to say that we have in Montreal a city in which, with its many suburbs, we are justly proud. Montreal is the metropolis of Canada, having at present, including suburbs, a population of over 900,000 and it is no idle dream to guess that at the present rapid rate of growth in a few years her population may reach the one million mark. Montreal is the fifth largest city in North America. Montreal possesses one of the finest harbors on the continent. In the shipping season the St. Lawrence is a hive of industry and the facilities afforded are best explained when one realizes the immense amount of traffic which originates in the south and middle west and which might be expected to go forward via U.S.A. ports. Montreal stands ninth in the cities of this continent for bank clearings for 1920 the total being $7,109,189,038. This amount is slightly over 37 per cent. of the total clearings for the year reported by sixteen largest Canadian clearing houses.

Canada is proud of her railway system and in no city of the size of Montreal do we find greater activity from the railroad point of view. The head office of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Grand Trunk Railways are located in our midst and it might be also of interest to speak of the tunnel of three and a quarter miles in length under beautiful Mount Royal. Should time permit I would suggest that you take a trip to the mountain outlook and there enjoy a scene second to none anywhere on this continent.

Canadian National Poultry Association

Last March at the request of the Honorable Dr. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture your association was requested to send a delegate to the second Canadian National oultry Conference to be held in Ottawa. our president attended the conference for wo days at which time the Canadian Naional Poultry Association was organized nd a constitution and by-laws agreed pon. The objects of the association are s follows:—

(1) To consider all matters tending toards the improvement and advancement f the poultry industry.

(2) To keep a record of registered poultry nd to collect, preserve, and publish data, nformation and documents relating to regtration.

Many problems relating to the poultry nd egg industry were fully discussed and ch delegate had the opportunity of seeing e viewpoint of others in the trade in this nd the other provinces that may not have een brought to our attention heretofore. full report of the conference may be seured by communicating with Mr. Ernest hoades, secretary-treasurer, Canadian Naonal Poultry Association, Ottawa, Ont.

The World's Poultry Congress

The Netherlands Government has extendd an invitation for a world's congress hich will be held in The Hague during the ming fall. The plan of the congress is to clude all aspects of the poultry industry every part of the world embracing scienfic and practical questions, grading probms, the national and international trade, sease investigations, etc. A laying const is now in progress. There will not be poultry exhibition but instead there are be demonstrations of races of poultry om all parts of the world, each country ntributing the breeds it finds most useful. oultry houses and appliances found in difrent countries will be exhibited and efrts made to render the exhibit of equipent the most effective from an educational andpoint that has ever been placed on cord. Your president is a member of the dvisory Committee for Canada for the ngress and attended a conference in ttawa when plans were discussed as to the rt Canada should take in the congress. would suggest that this convention forrd to the Honorable Dr. Tolmie, Minister Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont., a resolution questing that one or more representatives appointed from Canada so that our couny may take advantage of the excellent portunity afforded us of taking our due d proper place among the countries of e world.

By-laws to Be Submitted

Your committee will submit for your aproval a set of by-laws which we trust you ll approve and authorize to be put into itable printed form and sent to each memr. The objects of our association as exessed in the by-laws submitted are as llows:—

(1) To inculcate honorable and equitable actice in the trade.

(2) To conserve the natural resources of e trade.

(3) To co-operate with the Agricultural epartment of the Federal and Provincial vernments in the enforcement of the re Food Laws and to get the agricultural partments to join with us in a campaign education as to the best methods of procing and handling farm and dairy proce so as to eliminate the very large ses now incurred.

(4) Acquiring and dissemination of accute and reliable information among shipers, dealers and consumers of live and essed poultry, butter, eggs, cheese and of her food products.

(5) The advancement and improvement commercial conditions in said trades.

(6) The fostering and strengthening of endly and co-operative relations between ch merchants in all parts of Canada and e securing to its members of improved nsportation facilities and just and equitle rates and charges for the same.

(8) To settle differences between the several members or between members and nonmmbers, and to procure uniformity and certainty in trade usages, and of kindred matters relating thereto, as they may from time to time arise.

Exports and Imports

Eggs—

Estimated consumption, 1920.170,200,000 doz.

	Exports, Cases	Imports, Dozens
January	900	565,994
February	500	532,873
March	...	1,783,816
April	...	163,854
May	400	565,647
June	5,450	171,453

December	12,459	204,475
Total	210,862 cases 6,325,860 doz.	6,515,928 doz.

Average price imports 46.8c (buying).
Average price exports 66.3c (selling).

It will be noted that Canada's imports exceeded exports during the calendar year by 192,475 dozen, or roughly 6,400 cases.

As approximately one-third of the imports took place during the first three months of the year, a comparison of the production and imports during the nine months (April to December, inclusive) shows that exports, for that period, exceeded imports by some 2,653,615 dozen or roughly 90,000 cases.

Poultry

Estimated value live and dressed poultry marketed 1920.....$25,000,000
Estimated value poultry consumed on farms 3,000,000

The exports of dressed poultry for 1920 were———— lbs. valued at $679,561.00. The total value of dressed poultry imported during 1920 was $44,871.00.

For the first eight months ending November 30th, 1920, the exports of butter were 7,050,417 pounds. The exports of cheese during the same period were 111,062,867 pounds. The exports of condensed milk were 37,730,178 pounds. The total value of dairy products exported this eight month period was $42,482,924 being an increase of about two millions over the same period in 1919.

It is of interest to record the special feature of the butter business during the past year, viz., importations into New York City of 27,801,816 pounds, from Denmark 19,912,000 pounds from Holland 2,794,368 pounds from Argentine 5,095,448 pounds

27,801,816 pounds

It may also be of interest to note the course of values for the past ten years in New York. The following is the average for fresh extras creamery:

Average price for 1920.....61.44
Average price for 1919.....60.72
Average price for 1918.....52.30
Average price for 1917.....43.55
Average price for 1916.....34.90
Average price for 1915.....30.70
Average price for 1914.....29.89
Average price for 1913.....32.28
Average price for 1912.....31.60
Average price for 1911.....27.96

Average price for ten years is 40.54 cents.

Prices of cheese show a wide fluctuation during 1920, 33 3/8 to 33 7/16 was paid at Napanee in May and from June on there was a gradual decline in price, as low as 18 cents being paid for late fall fodder quality. During recent weeks a very active demand has sprung up for cheese for export and at present it is anticipated there will be very little cheese left for home consumption. The unsteady condition of British exchange throughout the season has made trading for export, from a financial stantpoint, anything but encouraging.

De-Control of Butter and Cheese

The first important announcement was made on April 29th, when the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa received a cable from the British Ministry of Food stating that it had been definitely decided that the British Ministry would not purchase the 1920 season's Canadian cheese make, and that the maximum importer's price (32c) then in force would be removed at an early date, but that the maximum retail price of 1s. 8d. (40c per lb.) for whole milk cheese would remain in force for some little time.

The above cable was followed by another from the British Ministry of Food on May 27th, which stated that the maximum retail price for privately imported cheese had been withdrawn, but that Government cheese would continue to be governed by maximum retail price of 1s. 8d. (40c per lb.). This meant that Canadian cheese privately imported could be sold at any price. The government cheese referred to consisted of New Zealand cheese and the stocks of Canadian of the season 1919, which were held by the Ministry of Food in considerable qualities on that date.

This practically removed all restrictions in the English markets on Canadian cheese, and our exporters were free to sell their goods anywhere and at any price.

During the past season the British Ministry of Food have been purchasing at various times any surplus butter which Canada had for export to Great Britain. In October your president was one of a delegation from the trade who interviewed the Minister of Agriculture pointing out the desirability of making strong representations to the British Ministry of Food for the decontrol of Canadian butter in England. Still further representation was made to the Minister of Agriculture in December urging the government to take some immediate steps towards securing this de-control. The latest advice is that there is every hope of seeing the control of Canadian Butter abolished in England by the end of March 1921.

The Cattle Embargo

Reflection on the markets for our exports brings up the question as to how long the British embargo on Canadian cattle is to last. For about thirty years, during which time Great Britain has been supposed to be a free-trade country, our live cattle have been excluded from the British market, unless immediately slaughtered on the pretext of the necessity of keeping British herds free from disease. No proof of any danger from our cattle has been shown, and it is generally admitted that the embargo is simply a case of extreme protection for British cattle breeders against the interests of the meat consumers of Great Britain, and particularly against the business interests of about 40,000 British butchers who wish it removed. May we not hope that in this day when the problem of feeding the people of Great Britain is so difficult, such an irritating obstacle may be removed? If the British meat consumer understands that there is nothing whatever the matter with Canadian livestock as such, and still desires this protection for cattle breeders at home, we, of course, have nothing to say, but we should like to feel sure that he does understand.

Immigration

Everything points to the necessity for continued effort on the part of all Canadians to increase the products of farm, forest, mine, etc. The possibilities are beyond imagination and in the development of our farms and dairy products it is most important that our governments realize the necessity of efficient, competent farm labor. We must hope that the present readjustment going on throughout the world will increase the number of land seekers because although we must prevent undue immigration, while our own Canadian people want work, we should always desire as many as possible to go on the land for a living.

The Future

This year is really the first year of readjustment since the greatest war the world has ever seen. We must have close co-operation between producer, dealer and consumer. Each of us must realize that prices are due for decline, how low no one can guess. Prices in our line of business may not come down quickly or possibly never on the pre-war basis, but I have confidence enough in the business ability of this country to believe that in that adjustment of prices downward our capabilities will be great enough to prevent calamity and that when we reach a permanent level, business will boom in this country as never before. The rising curb of prices could not come down without an increase in production nor can we face the heavy obligations left by the war except by greatly increased production.

Co-Operation and Appreciation

No one who has the best interests of our country at heart can dispute the fact that Canada possesses untold possibilities and in the development of our country I know of no body of men more capable or better qualified to carry the message of optimism through Canada than those identified with the producing, buying and selling of farm and dairy products. Capital must co-operate with labor and realize that labor is needed and labor must realize that without capital it cannot succeed and both cannot progress without the agricultural interests of the country. Make a success of industry and you will bring prosperity to the farmers.

I desire to express my sincere thanks to all who have so ably and kindly assisted me in my work during the year. James T. Madden, your secretary-treasurer, has been an indefatiguable worker and has been ever ready to further the interests of our association in all its details.

The co-operation of the various officials of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has also been much appreciated.

It is my earnest hope that in the future there may continue to the fullest extent, harmony and co-operation without which nothing can succeed and with this in view, I suggested some time ago to W. A. Brown, Chief Poultry Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, that our association should appoint a small committee representative of our trade throughout the Dominion which committee would be always available to give practical advice on any subject in which we are mutually interested. I would recommend that such a committee be appointed at this convention.

Report of Secretary

Following the report of the president, Mr. Gray, James T. Madden, of Toronto, the secretary-treasurer, gave the financial report of the convention.

This report shows a balance of $238.40 at the end of the year, receipts for the year being $2,446.99 and expenditures $2,198.62. The new year of this convention opens on February 1. Mr. Madden expressed the hope that in 1921 the membership of the convention would reach to 500 since a special committee has been appointed for this purpose. In 1918 the membership was 154, in 1919 it was 161 and in 1920 it reached to 196. The executive committee held four sessions in 1920; they also attended meetings with regard to the legislation on eggs, the proposed increase in express rates and other matters dealing with proposed legislation in Ottawa. With regard to this, Mr. Madden stated that all the members had been advised as to the reports of these different meetings.

Transportation Report

The report of the transportation committee was given by Richard Gray, of Montreal, the second vice-president of the convention. Mr. Gray stated that the matter of lower ocean rates had been gone into by the committee, and that since the beginning of the last business year the rate per cubic foot on ocean-going vessels had been reduced from 55 cents to 50 cents and that in the coming year in keeping with the reduction in prices throughout the country that a further reduction in ocean rates might be expected. He also referred to the standardization of egg cases, and reported that the committee suggested that a standard egg case measuring two and a half by two feet should be adopted for export trade. With regard to the trouble that has been experienced with loading eggs for export trade, Mr. Gray reported that an investigation had been made at the docks in Montreal by the committee, and that it was found that the trouble was not in the loading of eggs, but in the placing in the hold of the vessel. The co-operation of the shipping officials has been given to the committee in their investigation and the matter has been thoroughly investigated during the operation of loading vessels at the local docks. Mr. Gray stated that this matter should be referred to the live stock department at Ottawa, who have this matter under their jurisdiction. He also referred to the general advance in freight rates of 30 per cent. which followed the advance granted in the United States. This was also followed by a further advance of 10 per cent., making a total of 40 per cent., but on the first of January, 1921, this was reduced to 35 per cent. in the East and 30 per cent. in the West with the promise of further reduction dating not later than July 1, 1922.

The report of the transportation committee also included the liabilities of the freight companies in cases of losses on egg shipments. The company claims sole responsibility when a clear bill of lading was given by the consignee and when on delivery there was no evidence or sign of damages.

Increase in Express Rates

The increase in express rates as granted by the Government was reported by Mr. Gray. He stated that H. R. Gray, F. F. White and D'Arcy Scott attended the hearing of the Railway Commission in Toronto. Later the same gentlemen attended the hearing in Ottawa when the express companies were granted practically everything they asked. The arguments of the representatives of the Produce Association was that under existing circumstances in Canada only a temporary advance should be granted. However, 35 per cent. is granted on first-class shipments, 25 per cent. on second class and 20 per cent. on commodities shipments. This concluded the report of the transportation committee.

No Trouble in Camp

The report of the arbitration committee as given by Mr. Madden, secretary, was exceedingly short. He simply stated that there had been no need for this committee to act since no trouble had arisen either among the members of the association or with outsiders. This report was particularly pleasing in view of the fact that it was unnecessary for them to act.

Committee on By-laws

The report of the committee on by-laws was presented by the president of the convention, H. R. Gray. Mr. Gray stated a full report of this committee would be printed in pamphlet form and mailed to all the members of the association. In view of its length a reading of the report was found impossible and since the members of the association were acquainted with the matters of primary importance contained therein it was moved and seconded that the by-laws be accepted.

Increased Fees

An important matter touched upon in this report was that it was quite necessary to increase the annual fees of the members. It was therefore included in the passing of the by-laws that for this year the fees be increased from five to ten dollars and that at the convention at the beginning of each year the fees for that year be decided upon. It was also moved and seconded that in future all officers of the association and committees be elected by ballot.

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session opened by an address by J. A. Ruddick, the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner for Canada on the subject of grading dairy produce.

In his paper Mr. Ruddick brought out the point that this grading should be optional in Canada since Canada unlike other countries is so widespread and carries on dairying from coast to coast. The result is that in order to adopt the system as in New Zealand Canada would have to collect all the dairy produce to one point in order to grade it properly. Another system might be adopted, Mr. Ruddick pointed out, but this is a matter for the Canadian dairymen to take up.

World Markets

On the program for the convention an address on world markets was announced by E. C. Fox, president William Davies Co., Ltd., Toronto, but on account of the illness of Mr. Fox, F. M. Watt, the manager of the produce department of William Davies, Ltd., read the address as prepared by Mr. Fox. Many very important items in the produce trade were discussed in this paper. Perhaps the most important was the subject of exchange. Mr. Fox pointed out in his address that there were three systems of dealing with the exchange situation as occurs throughout the world today. The dairyman who conducts an export business must adopt one of these three systems and stick to it no matter how the situation changes, if he would make his business a success. He also pointed out that in this case the exporter will not find a profit on his exchange, but will meet with a fair average which will not net him a loss. On the other hand if he attempts to adopt two of the systems he may at one time find a profit on his exchange dealings, but in the long run he will surely meet with a loss. The big exporters have found this plan to be the only safe one, and are therefore sticking to one system no matter how the market changes. The produce men, the address pointed out, are in the business to make a profit on their produce and not on the exchange. The business of dealing in exchange is entirely a matter for the bankers, and cannot be handled by produce men if they intend to make their business of exporting goods to other countries a success.

Careful Buying and Selling

Mr. Fox, continuing his address, pointed out that today it required more than average ability on the part of a merchant to successfully buy and sell. He must be in closer touch with the market than he has ever been and must watch carefully every movement of the trade both in his own country and in the countries with which he deals. Concrete examples of this were pointed out in the address. In speaking of the fluctuation in exchange the address quoted an imaginary example which proved the point Mr. Fox intended to bring out. This example might be well quoted for the benefit of the trade.

Following the address read by Mr. Watt, G. G. Publow, chief dairy instructor Ontario Department of Agriculture, gave an address on "Some Cheese Problems." This address dealt with problems peculiar to the cheese makers and the exporters and is of little consequence to the retail trade who handle our own cheese in this country.

The Object of the Association

James T. Madden, the secretary-treasurer of the convention, then gave an address on the object of the association. He recalled that when the association was first organized it comprised only 39 members, three of whom were officers and nine directors. Mr. Madden was the first president of the association. He stated that this year the membership numbered 196, which should have been even larger, and he hoped that with the co-operation of the other members that the numbers would be at least two hundred more next year. He stated that the president had been asked to have a membership committee appointed to take on this task.

Much New Egg Legislation

The secretary stated that much time had been devoted during the year to the many regulations that have been imposed on the egg business. In speaking of this he said, "I have often thought that if the gentlemen of the Live Stock Department had a few months of the turmoil and troubles that the produce trade experience they would not spend so much of their time studying and figuring out new regulations to hamper the trading of the produce merchants.

"Now as to our object. We must do the Drury act, broaden out. We want to include in our numbers the creamery men, the cheese men and the live poultry shippers. All our interests are identical. We are all working towards the same end. The larger and stronger our organization is the more we can accomplish and the greater will be our influence. This can be done by every member doing his utmost to swell our numbers. Let us add at least two hundred to our Association this year and let 1922 be our banner year."

Manitoba and Its Farm Produce

J. H. Evans, the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Manitoba, in his address to the convention on "Manitoba and Its Farm Produce," dealt with the advances made in late years in that province in dairying. He pointed out that to educate the people that the higher grade produce meant higher market prices would result eventually in wider markets and a bigger production. "The people," he said, "should understand that the biggest profits are found on the best quality and that if the masses see merchants and producers profiting by handling only the best they will follow and a higher standard will result." The speaker enlarged on this phase of the subject and laid stress on quality and standardization.

In conclusion he added to the hearty invitation already extended to the convention to meet next year in Winnipeg by pointing out both the advantages to the industry in the West and the advantage to the Pacific coast merchants and the Eastern merchants who would have this opportunity of exchanging ideas.

Regarding Exhibits

The remainder of the afternoon session was devoted to a discussion first on "Shall we have competitive exhibits of eggs, butter, cheese and poultry at our next convention?" led by F. F. White, of White-Thacker Limited, Montreal. The convention seemed to be unanimous that such exhibits were of great value but the question seemed to be as to the advisability of conducting them at the convention both from the standpoint of results and expense.

Grading Eggs

A discussion on "Grading Eggs" was led by R. C. Hunter, of J. D. Moore Co., Ltd., St. Marys, Ont., and by C. M. Thacker, of White-Thacker, Ltd., Montreal. Mr. Hunter suggested that such grading and consequent stamping be optional since in many cases, as in his own, he did not care to have either his cases or eggs disfigured by stamping. He pointed out that it often happens that such markings have to be removed when the grading is necessarily changed and that in such cases disfigured eggs and cases result which some firms do not care to deliver to their customers. A wide interest in this question was manifest by the number of members that took part in the discussion.

Reports of the second day's sessions of the convention will appear in next week's issue.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—The feature of the produce market this week is the lower prices on pork and eggs. There is a decline of 75 cents a hundred on hogs, and fresh killed hogs are quoted lower. The demand for pork has not been as large and the supplies have been larger which has resulted in an easier market. The continuing improvement in the production of eggs has caused a further reduction in prices. Smoked, cured, cooked and barrelled meats remain firm and unchanged in price although the market for barrelled meats has a weak tendency, due to the small demand for supplies and the weaker market and there is a pronounced stronger tendency on cheese although there is no change in the prices for local trade. The export prices have been advanced slightly, and as a result the business is a little quieter this week. There is a stronger market for poultry with smaller offerings. There is a bigger list of fresh and frozen fish quoted on the market this week on account of the efforts on the part of the dealers to supply a good variety for the Lenten season which opened this week.

"National Fish Day" Sees Heavy Sales of Fish

Canada Has Her Fourth Annual Fish Day On Ash Wednesday This Year—The Object as Before to Increase the Sale and Consumption Of Fish.

By D. B. DRYSDALE

WEDNESDAY of this week, Ash Wednesday, marked the commencement of Lent. It also was the fourth "National Fish Day," which was introduced here with a double purpose.

The first and foremost purpose was, of course, to increase the sale of fish, and secondly, by advertising to a much greater extent than has formerly been done, to try and educate the people of Canada to make a greater use of what is one of the country's greatest natural resources. It was a great success for the producer, retailer and consumer alike.

There is very little use in saying anything concerning the nourishment given by this article of food, as pretty nearly everyone is well versed in it, even if they very seldom eat it, and for examples of its high food value you need not go past our cousins in England.

Big Increase in Sales

Last year National Fish Day was celebrated in the month of October but as it is always hard to have a very great variety on hand at this time, on account of soft weather, it was decided to hold it this year during the cold weather when transportation difficulties can be overcome.

There is no doubt as to the increasing consumption of fish, as all distributors and producers report a substantial increase in sales in each year.

Heavy Supplies Arriving

Winter caught whitefish are an easy fish to handle and as they are dressed before freezing, it does away with this usually unpleasant part of making a sale. The same applies to practically every line of frozen fish.

Great quantities of all kinds of fish were brought from the coast, to take care of the demand for this particular day. Many who held orders until the day before were disappointed by not being able to get the kind of fish they wanted, or by being short shipped, or some mistake being made in putting up the order, whereas if the goods had been ordered say two days ahead any of these errors could have been rectified by a wire.

Qualla in Big Demand

Pink and silver bright Qualla is arriving in carload lots every other day. There has been an unprecedented demand for this particular line of fish this season, possibly because it can be sold by the piece or as a whole fish or because of the substantial profit in it, or, last but not least, on account of its delicious flavor.

Tullibees have arrived in carload lots and are offered at 7½ cents per pound in box lots. In most instances where it is necessary to break a case of fish for small weights, there is an additional charge of one cent per pound to cover cost of handling and repacking.

Pickled lake herrings are in good demand especially in country districts. These fish are in kegs and barrels and will keep in the brine in which they are packed for a wonderfully long time.

Displays Chocolates Near Front Door

Goode & Mackay, at Walkerton, Ont., use a silent salesman for the display of chocolates near the front door. This is very effective, and attracts the eye of the customer immediately on entering the store. Sales of candy are fairly heavy in this store, averaging more than fifty pounds per week, and it is this display, placed well to the front, that creates this activity.

Just a few words about Canadian Grocer

CANADIAN GROCER is Canada's national grocery weekly and has been published every Friday since 1886 by the MacLean Publishing Co., Toronto, who publish sixteen papers.

CANADIAN GROCER'S circulation is national, and has been audited by the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

CANADIAN GROCER is edited by a staff of editors who have had practical grocery experience.

CANADIAN GROCER'S weekly market service is one of its strongest features. Our reports are used as a basis for Canadian Government's annual report on wholesale prices.

Write to any 100 retail grocery merchants in Canada asking them, "Do you subscribe to CANADIAN GROCER?"

If you will do this, you will use CANADIAN GROCER too, for it is better than any other medium in Canada, gets your proposals home to the men of value to you as sellers of your goods.

MACDONALD'S

Increased Demand Brings An Increase of Profit

As the result of over sixty years' leadership, aided by successful advertising, Macdonald's is in greater demand now than ever.

It is now possible for the retailer to get larger returns from his stock of Macdonald's Tobaccos than from almost any other commodity on the market.

Because

—the always generous Macdonald profit is increased as the turnover is speeded up.

—there is an extra profit in the four to six plugs overrun in each 10 lb. caddy.

—little or no sales-effort is required to move Macdonald's.

So keep your stock of Macdonald's well displayed and see that the increased demand brings an increase of profit TO YOU.

EVERY HOME NEEDS

KEATING'S

To have Keating's is to sell Keating's. It is the universal insecticide: fatal to every form of insect life, but harmless to human or animal life:

Flies	Ants	Bugs
Fleas	Wasps	Roaches
Mosquitoes	Beetles	Moths

No insect can live once it comes into proper contact with Keating's, and as even the most tidy home cannot escape the unwelcome visit of some member of the bug family, so the careful housewife will keep a tin of Keating's constantly on hand for immediate use.

BETTER DEMAND FOR TEAS

Inquiries for teas are showing a big improvement. Retailers, wholesalers and brokers are placing orders with more confidence than they have been for several months past. This, undoubtedly, is the result of the firmer and higher market that is manifest. The finer teas appear to have the preference as the Canadian public has developed a taste for the better grades. This has resulted in a scarcity of the finer grades but leaves little outlet for the stocks of common teas that had accumulated in the London tea market during 1920. Stocks in London warehouses amount to 170,932,289 pounds or 17,196,289 pounds more than a year ago.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

Model 100 on Pedestal
4 other models and sizes including the V.B.P. Electric

From a recent article in Canadian Grocer.

Now Sell from Twelve to Fifteen Sides of Bacon Weekly

Hood and Bennalick, Guelph, Ont., believe that a meat slicer not only increases business in smoked and cooked meats, but provides a service that is appreciated.

"BEFORE I purchased that meat slicer we never sold more than two or three sides of bacon each week," remarked Mr. Hood, of Hood and Bennalick, Guelph, Ont., to a representative of Canadian Grocer recently, when discussing the value of a meat slicer in a grocer's business. "Our sales of bacon now average from twelve to fifteen sides weekly, and I think our turnover in smoked meats has been largely stimulated because of the meat slicer. We have had the slicer three years, and it certainly has more than paid for itself. There is no doubt about it, but a good meat slicer attracts business to the provision department of any grocery."

What this Van Berkel Slicer did for these merchants it will do for you. Write us for detailed information about this World's finest Slicing Machine and let us show you how the Van Berkel can speed up your provision sales and increase your profits. The Van Berkel is British made—London factory—no high exchange paid. Beware of imitations and false statements made by imitators.

PACKED 3 WAYS

Aside from the fact that they're California-quality prunes; and aside from the fact that they're priced a little lower "in the bargain"—remember that Growers Brand Prunes are the most convenient prunes you can handle. They're packed three ways—all good. For example:

You can get these fine, full-flavored prunes in the regular 25-lb. and 50-lb. wooden boxes [all sizes]; in a special 5-lb. Growers Brand carton containing medium-sized prunes [60-70's]; and the same-sized carton containing a blend of the smaller-sized prunes [70-80's and 80-90's]. The cartons will make a special appeal to housewives who like to have prunes "in the house" all the time!

"A voice roared out, hoarse, profane;--the Mate's voice: 'Thought you'd try it again, did you, you dashed beach-comber. I'll teach you, and when I find the dog that left that rope for you I'll give him a leaf out of the same book. You bloody waster! I'll teach you! I'll—!'"

This is an extract from Frank Packard's "Pawned," which commences in the February 15th issue of MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE.

At the period in the story that this is written the leading character is a beach-comber in the South Sea Islands.

Three months later, John Bruce is stretched at full length on a luxurious divan in the most sumptuous apartment of the Bayne-Miloy, New York's newest and most pretentious hostelry.

How had this wonderful metamorphosis been made? It is a mystifying, enthralling, intriguing story, the secret of which you can only get by reading every instalment of Frank Packard's wonderful yarn.

What's Wanted

Almost every week you want something which you could quite easily secure by consulting with your fellow Grocers.

Perhaps you need a clerk. The best of them read Canadian Grocer and watch the "Wanted" page for new opportunities.

Possibly you want to buy or sell a grocery business. Canadian Grocer's subscribers are the best prospects in Canada. Talk to them through our columns with a want ad.

Or do you want to sell or exchange some surplus stock? Here again the Want Advertisement can help you.

Cost: 3 cents per word for first insertion; 2 cents per word for subsequent insertions of the same ad. Box Number 5 cents extra.

Is It a Good Man You Want?

Wishing and wanting won't get him for you. Advertising probably will. You ask what paper to use? Well, you can waste a lot of good money using wrong papers. The best one to use is CANADIAN GROCER.

This newspaper is probably read by the man you will engage. At any rate, if you want a man trained, the chances are that he sees and reads CANADIAN GROCER. If your advertisement tastes good to him, the chances are he'll answer it. Then it's up to you to land him.

But look for him where he's likely to be—behind some counter or desk in a retail or wholesale grocery house.

You never can tell what's in the mind of men to make them willing to change. Perhaps it's money; perhaps a cranky boss; perhaps climate; perhaps a girl. But it will be something or other.

Sometimes the first insertion of an advertisement finds the man. Sometimes you will have to keep on advertising.

Our part is not to guarantee you answers, or to promise any. We have no control over such things. But we can put your advertisement—and do—into about 6,500 grocery stores, wholesale and retail, all over Canada. This is our part. And surely 6,500 is enough.

Rate is 3 cents a word first insertion and 2 cents per word each subsequent insertion. Numbers count as words. Use a Box Number if you prefer. Five cents per insertion extra for Box Number. Make advertisements brief as a telegram.

Are Wholesale Grocers a Combine?

Attorney-General of Ontario Proceeds in Action Against Wholesalers' Association, Alleging a Combine in Restraint of Trade—Evidence Being Heard This Week Before Mr. Justice Orde

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

Toronto, Feb. 17 (Staff Correspondence)—Up to the time of going to press the evidence taken in the case of the Province against the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association. etc., was pretty much a duplication of that before the Board of Commerce—now non-existent—a year or so ago at Hamilton. The witnesses called by A. W. Roebuck, the counsel for the Attorney-General, have familiar names. Frank Fearman and Joseph Harris, of Hamilton, have been on the stand and again related their knowledge of affairs of the wholesalers' associations. The name "Porter" was incidentally introduced into the evidence, same as last year. It will be remembered he was the man employed by the Canadian General Electric Co., who interested himself in the affairs of one W. H. Jolly, both of whom became the outstanding features of that investigation.

A. C. Pyke, secretary of the wholesalers' association, occupied the stand most of the first two days and was asked a great many questions about the work of the organization. The evidence up to date appears below:

TORONTO, Feb. 14.—A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Canada, was the first to testify before Mr. Justice Orde in the non-jury assizes this week in the action brought by the Attorney-General for a declaration that the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Canada is an illegal combine in the restraint of trade. The Attorney-General asks for an order to have this alleged combine dissolved. The defendants named are T. H. Kinnear, A. H. Paffard, H. C. Beckett, Hamilton, H. W. Chamberlain and A. C. Pyke, officers of the association, and Thomas Kinnear & Co., W. H. Gillard & Co., Castle, Ltd., Ottawa; E. W. Gillett Co., Minneapolis; Armstrong & Paffard, W. C. Macdonald Registered, St. Lawrence Starch Co., and the Canada Starch Co.

A. W. Roebuck is appearing for the Attorney-General, Robert McKay, K.C., for the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Canada, and I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., for the manufacturers concerned. The entire first day was taken with the evidence of Secretary Pyke, and he again took the stand on the resumption of court on Tuesday morning. Examined by A. W. Roebuck, Mr. Pyke's evidence was chiefly concerned with the minutes and resolutions passed at various meetings of the wholesalers, appertaining to the naming and maintaining of prices on certain manufactured lines, and the eligibility of an applicant for membership.

Plaintiff's Statement

The plaintiff in his statement sets forth the claim that before a wholesaler can become a member of the association, he must swear that he carries on a strictly wholesale business, stocking a full assortment of groceries, does not do business on the co-operative plan, that he will not sell to consumers, or to any aggregation of consumers, joined together for the purpose of buying, that he has no plan by which he pays dividends to stockholders on the basis of their purchases, and that he is not interested in any way in the profits of any retail business. It is further alleged that the purpose of this is to restrict the wholesale grocery business to members of the association, and to fix the prices of a number of commodities. The association, it is also claimed, refuses to handle goods of firms selling to retailers, and that they combine to exclude competition in certain lines. W. F. Morley, Robert Dowson, representing the York Trading Company, have, it is asserted, been refused membership in the association.

Agreements are said to exist between the association and the L. Schepp Co., of Toronto, the Bowes Co., the Chisholm Milling Co., T. A. Lytle Co., W. J. Bush Co. of Canada, William Braid & Co., of Vancouver, and Creamette Co., of Hamilton, to the effect that these firms will sell only to legitimate wholesalers.

No Cause for Action

The defendants deny that there is any agreement to restrict or restrain trade, or that there is any cause of action. Their agreements with manufacturers, they claim, are legal and proper, and have already been passed upon by the Board of Commerce.

"What status has the Attorney-General in this action?" asked Mr. Justice Orde.

"On behalf of his Majesty's subjects it seems a rather extraordinary proceeding for the Attorney-General to bring a civil action to show that what these people have done is a crime," observed his Lordship, when Mr. Roebuck admitted that the action was civil and not criminal.

"It is the regular procedure in the United States where the rules of practice are the same as our own," said counsel.

"I don't admit that for an instant," replied his Lordship. "Have similar cases been brought in Canada—in England?"

"No," admitted counsel. "But surely a crime does not preclude the person injured from suing in the criminal court."

His Lordship still seemed unconvinced that it was the duty of the Attorney-General to take action in the matter other than in a criminal court.

Board of Commerce Ruling

Robert McKay submitted that no wrong of any kind had been committed, especially any public wrong that could lead to an action by the Attorney-General. "The whole matter, if it amounts to anything, comes clearly under the jurisdiction of two statutes passed in 1919, the Board of Commerce Act and the Fair Prices Act," he said. He declared that Mr. Roebuck was wrong in stating that actions such as this were the regular procedure in the United States.

The Board of Commerce, submitted Mr. Hellmuth, was made a court of record, and its decisions were thus effective and binding.

Secretary's Evidence

The secretary of the association in his evidence stated that "The Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association is incorporated—the Wholesale Grocers of Ontario is one of its branches, and is not incorporated." It was founded in February, 1918. It had been preceded by the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild, but had nothing whatever to do with it. It preceded the Canadian Association, of which it became a branch when the latter was formed.

Mr. Roebuck produced copies of resolutions and other documents of the association, which Mr. Pyke had given him.

"What constitutes the eligibility of a member of the association?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

The secretary read the constitution of the association, which says:

"In determining the eligibility of members the term wholesale grocery business shall be construed to mean a person, firm or corporation, who assembles in his warehouse a full line of groceries and distributes them to the trade, but who has no retail counter and who does not sell to consumers."

"If the wholesaler held stock in a retail corporation, would that debar him from membership?" Mr. Roebuck asked.

"I am not prepared to say what interest in a store would debar him," Mr. Pyke answered.

"If a wholesaler conducted a retail store would that debar him?"

"Yes."

"What procedure is necessary to become a member?"

"Applications are considered by the executive committee and, if approved, applicants are admitted."

"Does a membership in the Ontario Association automatically mean a membership in the Canadian Association?"

"Yes."

"Who are the officers of the Canadian Association?"

"Hugh Blain is president."

Lists of officers of both associations were here submitted.

"I believe the Canada Food Board defined a wholesale grocer?"

"I don't remember it."

"Is this definition in different terms then in your application for membership?"

"Very likely."

"In the minutes of a meeting on May 6, 1919, first paragraph refers to applications for membership, stating that unless they are endorsed by the executive they must be cancelled."

"That is the origin of the rule."

"Mr. Blain proposed that it be held over until the charter was granted, didn't he? Why was this?"

"I don't recall the argument."

"Was the legality of it questioned?"

"I don't remember."

The Maintenance of Prices

Referring to manufacturers naming prices at which the product should be sold, Mr. Pyke said:

"The wholesale grocery trade of Toronto, Hamilton and London unanimously endorses the principle of a manufacturer naming prices and terms on his proprietary goods on a basis that is fair to the manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer and consumer and refusing to sell to any wholesale house who is not willing to maintain such prices and terms." This was part of a resolution put in as an exhibit by Mr. Roebuck.

This was admitted by him to be at a meeting of an incorporated body forming part of the Ontario Association.

"Was the object of the meeting, the maintenance of prices?"

"It says so in the very first sentence. We say that the manufacturer should set the price at which the wholesaler should sell."

"Have the members of your association any purpose to serve in maintaining prices?" Mr. Pyke did not understand the question.

"Did you forward a copy of the resolution to W. C. Macdonald?"

"W. C. Macdonald is mentioned in the resolution as having their policy approved. It is a resolution of appreciation."

The York Trading Co.'s Case

"You no doubt are acquainted with the York Trading Co.?"

"They were not accepted in the association. They did not measure up to what we believe constitutes a wholesaler. They were a body of retailers, clubbed together to buy for themselves. The Board of Commerce decided that they were not wholesale grocers."

"Have you heard of the General Wholesalers, Ltd.?"

"I know of them, but very little. They did not apply for membership."

"Do you know A. A. Adams, of Hamilton?"

"No, I have had no communication with him."

"Do you know Harris?"

"He was not accepted. A. A. Adams said that he preferred to sell only the large grocer."

"I am giving a list of wholesale grocers. Have you ever given names of wholesalers not members of your association?"

"If asked for a list of wholesalers I include others than members of the association. If asked only for the names of the members of the association I only give them."

TUESDAY SESSION

When the case against the wholesale grocers resumed on Tuesday morning, the secretary, A. C. Pyke, again took the stand, and Mr. Roebuck continuing, Mr. Pyke again defined a wholesale grocer.

"My definition of a wholesale grocer is contained in the constitution," reiterated Mr. Pyke.

"I was trying to make my definition cover everybody doing a wholesale business," suggested Mr. Roebuck. "Are there few or many who buy from the manufacturers and sell to the retail trade?"

"I couldn't answer that. I have no record," replied Mr. Pyke. "We maintain that the wholesale grocers have a right to refuse to buy from manufacturers who sell direct to the retail trade."

"Do you maintain as an association that you have that right, Mr. Pyke?"

"We favor that principle, but the wholesale grocer as an individual has that right."

His Lordship here stated that the views of members of the association as to their rights were not so much the point as to what they decided to do. "It cannot matter what right members of the association claim if they have done nothing to assert it," he added.

Mr. Roebuck next read a letter from the T. A. Lytle Co., Toronto, advising Mr. Pyke that they would sell their products through the wholesale grocers.

Consumer Must Pay More

The witness was then cross-examined by Mr. McKay.

"Will you state," he began, "what would be the effect if manufacturers' lines were sold direct to the retail trade instead of through the wholesaler?"

"The wholesaler will lose interest in the goods if they cannot be sold at a profit. A cut in price to retailers means a cut to the consumer, and many dealers not fortunate enough to obtain the cut, will have to sell at a loss. Interest is lost. The manufacturer suffers, and has to start anew to get his goods on the market. Eventually the consumer will have to pay more for them."

Questioned as to the action of the T. A. Lytle Co. and the W. J. Bush and Co. that witness stated that both Mr. Lytle and a representative of the W. J. Bush Co. had come to his office stating that the cost of distribution was excessive, and they had decided that the most economic distribution was through the wholesale grocer. A circular was sent out to the trade following this interview.

I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., cross-examined Mr. Pyke subject to his objection on behalf of the W. C. Macdonald Tobacco Co., that the matter was out of the court's jurisdiction. "Has there ever been a written agreement between the Macdonald company and the association?" he asked.

"No."

"In fact it has always taken up a very independent stand?"

"Very," agreed Mr. Pyke.

Masters in Their Own House

"The Macdonalds—or rather the people who control the company, the Stewarts, have never receded from the position that they were masters in their own house?"

"Never."

"You do know that the E. W. Gillett Co. sell grocers who are members of neither the Wholesale Grocers' Association nor the Wholesale Grocers of Ontario—their definition of a wholesaler disagreeing from yours?"

"Yes."

Mr. Pyke accepted the statements of Mr. Hellmuth that the manufacturer without the wholesale grocer would have a very much greater cost of distribution than he has by handling his goods through the wholesale grocer, whose travellers would have hundreds of lines of goods to sell instead of two or three. The wholesale grocer, in turn, could not do without the retailer. Mr. Hellmuth instanced the prosecution of the five firms in the United States who were endeavoring to control food by dealing directly with the consumer.

"Could this state of affairs occur with the present system of manufacturer to wholesaler to retailer to consumer?"

"I don't think so."

"Do you stand for abnormal profits for manufacturers?"

"We do not."

15 Per Cent. Gross Profit.

"Fifteen per cent. discount is the highest gross profit of the wholesale grocer?"

"Yes."

"What is the cost to the wholesaler?"

"I ascertained by a questionnaire in 1919 that it was nine per cent?" "I think that is under the present cost."

Mr. Roebuck objected to the admission as evidence of statement of Mr. Pyke that Dr. R. J. McFall, the cost of living commissioner in 1919, that the wholesale grocers were not making undue profits. "This was after exhaustive search into the sworn statements which the wholesale grocers were compelled to give," stated the witness.

"What proportion are the proprietary lines of the wholesale grocery trade?" asked Mr. McKay.

"About 25 to 30 per cent."

"The mechanism of the wholesale grocery business is for the distribution of general lines, sugar, rice, tea, etc., as well as for the proprietary lines?"

"Yes."

Economic Distribution

Manufacturers had stated to him, Mr. Pyke averred, that without the machinery of distribution which the association employed the cost of their commodities would increase 10 to 20 per cent. The association practically is the machinery, employing over 1,000 salesmen in the province. Starch was instanced. The consumption of starch is seven ounces per head a year; the cost of distribution without the wholesale grocer would be terrific.

"What do you say of the brokerage system of distribution?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"I believe the wholesale system is by far the most economical."

"Are there not individuals in Toronto who with a very small overhead—a mere stenographer—who take orders for the retailers and fill them from the manufacturers?"

"Parasites?" interjected Mr. Hellmuth.

"I do not know of any," stated Mr. Pyke.

"I think the complaint against Mr. Morley—" began Mr. Roebuck.

"Who's complaining of him?" asked Mr. McKay.

"My learned friend has complained of him frequently," said Mr. Roebuck, but Mr. MacKay denied this.

Mr. Morley, said Mr. Pyke, picked out the larger retailers and didn't bother with the smaller retailers, with whom the wholesalers were obliged to deal.

"If everybody did business as Mr. Morley does," suggested His Lordship, "the smaller retailers would go out of business."

York Trading Methods

"Do you know the method of distribution of the York Trading Co.?"

"No, I do not."

"If the wholesale grocers' is the cheapest method of distribution, any agreement with anybody—manufacturer or anybody—should be unnecessary.

"It should be," agreed Mr. Pyke.

"And if it is necessary there must be something wrong with the wholesale grocer?"

"By no means," said Mr. Pyke.

F. D. Fearman Testifies

F. D. Fearman of Fearman Bros., Hamilton, Ont., was the next witness. This firm has been in the wholesale grocery business since the spring of 1919. Prior to that time they carried on a manufacturers' agents' business. "In this latter business, in most instances, we bought goods from the manufacturers and sold them," Mr. Fearman stated in answer to Mr. Roebuck.

"Are you a member of the wholesale grocers' association?"

"Yes."

"How did you determine your profits in conducting this manufacturers' agents' business?"

"We got jobbers' profits and a commission from the manufacturers.

"If we sold to a jobber he got the jobber's profits and we got the manufacturers' commission. If we sold to the retailer we got both profits."

"When did you apply for membership in the association?"

"In November, 1919. We first approached officers of the association in the September previous. We did not become members until December."

Bought From Wholesalers

"Up until this time how did you get your goods?"

"Sometimes from the manufacturers and sometimes from wholesale grocers."

"Why from wholesale grocers?"

"Because certain manufacturers would not sell to us."

In what proportions were you buying from other wholesale grocers, large or small?"

"In small proportions."

"Whom did you buy from?"

"From H. P. Eckhardt, John Sloan, and Medland Bros., Toronto."

"Did you have an interview with Hugh Blain or W. P. Eby in regard to your becoming a member of the association?"

"I made personal application to Mr. Eby." In further answer to Mr. Roebuck witness stated that it was afterwards that he went to the Attorney-General.

Mr. Fearman cited several companies with which he had correspondence, in regard to getting goods. He mentioned the Dunn Hortop Co., Gillett Co., St. Lawrence Starch Co., Canada Starch Co., Quaker Oats Co., W. C. Macdonald Co., and the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co.

"When did you commence handling the Gillett goods?"

"In February, 1929."

Are Still Refused

"Are you on the selling list of W. C. Macdonald?"

"No. They still refuse to sell to us."

"How about the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flakes?"

"This company refused to sell us."

"Had you ever purchased the products of the W. K. Kellogg Co.?"

"Yes."

"Did you enter into any contract with W. K. Kellogg?"

"No."

"On certain proprietary lines in 1920, your profits were greater than in 1919?"

"Yes."

Here Mr. Hellmuth questioned the witness. "If it was not for the abnormal advance in prices in 1919, your profits would not have been so great?" he queried.

"No," was the answer.

"Prior to 1919 Fearman Bros. were not known as wholesalers?"

"No."

Evidence of Joseph Harris

Joseph Harris, of Hamilton, Ont., was the next witness called. He stated in answer to Mr. Roebuck that he followed the wholesale grocery business in Hamilton. He carried about 125 lines.

Suggestions to Help Sale of Oranges

The Time to Sell Oranges for Making Marmalade is at Hand—Messina Oranges This Season Are the Best in Years—Suggesting Recipes as an Aid to Sales

THE first orange known to civilization was the Seville or perhaps better known to most merchants as the bitter or marmalade orange. It was originally brought into Spain by the Moors, early in the eighth century, nearly seven hundred years before the sweet orange made its appearance in Europe. Since then it has been largely cultivated throughout Southern Europe, and to some extent in America.

But it is the Messina oranges that are generally preferred by the Canadian housewife as the best adapted for making marmalade. They have a bright red color, fairly smooth skin and the flesh is less fibrous than some of the other varieties. The Seville orange has a pale color, usually very rough and contains less juice than the Messinas. During the war period and in fact right up until last year, Messinas have been difficult to obtain, and the few bitters that came through were usually of a very poor quality. Perhaps for that reason the making of orange marmalade in the homes was to some extent curtailed.

Best Messinas in Years

The Messinas that are arriving this year are the best quality we have seen for a number of years. Clean, bright skin, heavy with juice and are showing comparatively no waste. Sugar is also lower in price. These are factors that should induce housewives to make large quantities of marmalade this season.

The season for bitter oranges is a short one. Probably not more than one or two shipments arrive. This means that the merchant who wishes to reap the full benefit of selling supplies for making marmalade must necessarily get on the job early. Some merchants are already doing this, as witnessed by a window display that appeared during the past week in the store of Michie & Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Suggesting Recipes

The center of the window was composed of three full cases of Messina oranges, and on either side were large piles of orange pulp in tins. On top of each pile of cans was placed a glass display jar filled with the pulp, so that prospective buyers could see just what the contents of the cans looked like.

"This should be a splendid year for selling marmalade oranges," stated A. H. Chapman, window trimmer for Michie & Co. "The quality this year is the finest we have had for several years and from the inquiry we have had already, the sales should far exceed that of other years."

In order to stimulate the interest in the making of marmalade, Michie & Co. have printed on orange colored paper four recipes for marmalade. These recipes are given to the customers, and sometimes slipped under the string of a parcel that is to be delivered.

Window display of Michie & Co., Ltd., Toronto, featuring marmalade supplies.

Loaning Fruit Slicers

The idea of supplying purchasers of oranges for making marmalade with a recipe is a splendid selling idea, but it is by no means a new one as there are merchants who have been using this idea for many years past. T. A. Rowat & Co., London, Ont., have had marked success in selling marmalade supplies and their sales on bitter oranges have shown a handsome increase every year. This firm also gives recipes for making marmalade to customers when purchasing fruit, and have been doing so every year since 1905. Sales of bitter oranges run well into forty cases a season, besides the hundreds of cases of sweet oranges, lemons and grapefruit. Another feature in pushing the sales on oranges is to loan the customer a fruit slicer. Rowat & Co. have six fruit slicers and they are in such demand during the orange season that there is usually a waiting list of a half dozen or more customers.

Grocer Introduces Subject

A merchant recently stated to Canadian Grocer that it was not until the tail end of the season that his customers commenced to make inquiries about marmalade oranges and by that time there were only the cull left and that he only sold one or two cases during the season. This year, however, this merchant decided to use different selling tactics. He dressed the window with the oranges and also placed a basket full in a prominent place in the store. Then instead of the usual custom of waiting for the customer to ask about them, he and his staff introduced the subject to the customers, telling them about the excellent quality of the fruit and that the season was a short one. The first day he sold one case of bitters, besides sugar, lemons, sweet oranges and grapefruit which were necessary to go with the particular recipe they were using.

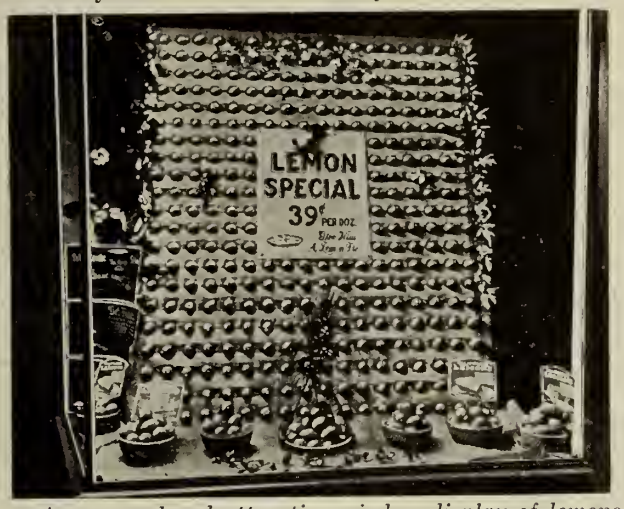
Making Oranges a Specialty

The merchants who are making a big success of selling marmalade supplies are the ones that are treating this subject as a special line. They are using aggressive selling methods, telling their customers by selling talk and by displays, or in some other manner getting the customers interested in the subject, which eventually results in greater sales year after year.

WINDOW DISPLAYS OF LEMONS THAT SELL

Manager of the McLean Grocery, Moose Jaw, Sask., Has Had a Good Deal of Success in Selling Lemons—Large Quantities Are Sold by Novel Window Displays

LEMONS are considered by some merchants as just a side issue—a necessary article to be carried in stock because some customer will occasionally ask for them. It is not so, however, with the McLean Grocery, Moose Jaw, Sask. Lemons with this firm are a feature and by special window displays large quantities are disposed of throughout the entire year.



An unusual and attractive window display of lemons in the store of the McLean Grocery, Moose Jaw, Sask.

Recently these merchants put in a window display of lemons that, for originality and attractiveness, is the best display of its kind we have ever seen. It created a great deal of interest and caused sales of lemons to increase considerably during that week.

"This display was very attractive, neat and easily arranged," stated J. W. Hanley, manager of the McLean Grocery to Canadian Grocer. "We were over to the wholesale when they were unloading a car of fruit and got the strips of lumber which are used between the piles of boxes to allow air to circulate between the cases. These strips we nailed together to form a trellis, and covered almost the entire back of the window and nearly to the ceiling. The strips were then covered with crepe paper and a lemon placed in every section. This showed up fine. The color of the paper blended with the lemons so nicely that the display was very striking. The cost of this display was a mere trifle, being just the price of the crepe paper, as the strips of wood were given to us by the wholesale."

Federal Minister Of Fisheries Is Now Suggested

Montreal, Feb. 15.—(Special.) A suggestion relative to the appointing of a federal Minister of Fisheries to promote the fishing industry along the same lines as pursued by the Minister of Agriculture in his department was discussed at some length at the fish dinner held on Wednesday night, February 9, in St. Lawrence Hall in celebration of the fourth annual fish day of Canada. The dinner was held under the auspices of the Canadian Fisheries Association and Fish Traders in Montreal.

The suggestion as to ministerial recognition of the fishing industry was voiced by A. H. Brittain, past president of the association, who referred to the fishery resources as one of Canada's greatest assets capable of indeterminable development. He saw no reason why the sixty million dollars it represented should not be increased to one hundred and sixty millions.

The following were among those in attendance: J. A. Paulhus (chairman), Dr. F. C. Harrison, J. H. Conlon, J. J. Harpell, S. A. Mason, F. W. Wallace, secretary Canadian Fisheries' Association; A. H. Brittain, J. T. O'Connor, F. T. James, Toronto; D. J. Burns, S. Mason Andrews, R. D. Hodge, John Green, H. G. Commor, J. A. Bellavance, H. Rayment, Henry Wolman. Geo. Woolmer, W. A. Coker, H. Mitchell, H. Gilbert, Geo. Birse, W. F. Rayment, H. Marchall, F. Reynolds, J. Leach, Albert Cawthorne, M. Stanford, H. Welham.

INCREASING HIS MARMALADE SALES

A. Snyder, Roncesvalles Avenue, Toronto, Concentrates on One Brand of Marmalade, And At This Time of Year Sells a Lot of it—Window Displays Help

ROUND about this time of the year there is bound to be a big demand for preserved fruits, jams, and especially marmalade. It may be, perhaps, that some of the customers will be making their own marmalade, but whether this is the case or not, the opportunity is right now to push the sales on marmalade.

According to some merchants, marmalade has not been blessed with heavy sales during the past few months. This is accounted for partly by the fact that people have not been buying heavily on any one line, and perhaps because the price has been slightly higher than other years. But the principal reason is that marmalade never is in extensive demand until the latter part of the winter and during the spring months. Then, again, the price since the first of the year has been considerably reduced, which is another factor that should boost the sales on marmalade at this season.

Same Price as Two Years Ago

A. Snyder, Roncesvalles Ave., Toronto, Ont., is not allowing this opportunity to pass him by and is forcing the point home to his customers that marmalade is now practically the same price as it was two years ago. Then, too, he is suggesting it to his customers by selling talk and by displays in the windows and in the store.

Mr. Snyder believes that a window display to be most effective should be filled with a large quantity of the special line that is being pushed. It should also be arranged in an attractive manner. A recent window display of marmalade contained about two barrels of the four-pound tins, and the same quantity of jars of different sizes. This made a forceful selling argument, and one that few people passing the store could fail to be impressed by. This display was all of one brand and when Mr. Snyder was asked by a Canadian Grocer representative why he concentrated his selling on that one brand he replied:

Knows of None Better

"In my opinion that brand is the best made, or at least I know of no other that is any better, and I have been selling it for some time. Customers now come in and ask for it. I also buy it in large quantities, usually in ten barrel lots, and in buying in that quantity I get a special discount. This I would not be able to get if I divided my marmalade sales among several brands."

"Don't you think you could build up just as large a business on some other brand?" he was asked.

"Undoubtedly," replied Mr. Snyder, "providing the brand was as good a quality. It is just a matter of getting behind it."

Food Products Association Discuss Their Building

TORONTO, Feb. 15 (Special).—At a general meeting of the Food Products Association, Ltd., in the C.M.A. rooms here on Monday, the proposed type of new Pure Food Building to be erected on the C. N. E. grounds was discussed. A plaster paris model made by the architects was exhibited and explained by Mr. Chapman who prepared it for the C. N. E. Board.

A general discussion took place and a number of criticisms and suggestions were made. The executive committee was finally requested to present these criticisms to the Exhibition Board. This was done on Tuesday, the following day. At this conference it was decided to hold another general meeting on Thursday at the offices of the C. N. E. to endeavor to come to a common understanding. A report of this meeting will appear next week.

H. N. Cowan, the chairman, presided at the meeting on Monday and among the food manufacturers represented were the following:

W. H. Dunn, the Borden Co., Montreal; H. C. Scully, Christie Brown & Co.; E. W. Langley, Langley, Harris & Co.; Thos. Shortiss, Quaker Candy Co.; W. G. Patrick, W. G. Patrick & Co.; E. A. WILL ESTABLISH SWEET POTATO SYRUP PLANT

Washington, Feb. 15.—A sweet potato syrup plant is to be established by the Government at Fitzgerald, Ga. Under a laboratory process worked out and patented for the public by Dr. H. C. Gore, Bureau of Chemistry, Agricultural Department, the commercial possibilities in manufacture of a fine, brown, "highly palatable" syrup from a heretofore waste product are to be explored.

Fitzgerald has already a sweet potato curing and storing establishment. The equipment will be shipped from Washington for the syrup plant, and comparative cost data will be obtained.

There Are Many Ways

of serving marmalade. It is incomparable as an appetite teaser served on toast or hot muffins for breakfast. It makes dainty and delightful sandwiches in combination with a lettuce leaf for afternoon teas. As a filling for puddings and cakes it is unsurpassed.

Marmalade comes in a variety of flavors such as Orange, Pineapple, Grapefruit and Ginger.

Orange marmalade is made both sweet and with a bitter twang. We especially recommend ———— brand, because it is not too sweet nor yet too bitter.

The four-pound tin is the most economical to buy.

This Merchant Knows How He Stands

A Remarkable Business Record is Analyzed—If All Men Knew How to Conduct Business as This Man There Would Be No Need of Advice

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

AN inquiry:

Dear Sir: What book do you recommend as a good text book on costs, turnover and inventory?

Answer: I know of none. The general merchandise field, especially the grocery business, is still virgin. I am one of the explorers, and kept so busy writing current news, happenings and accomplishments that I fear I shall never gather the stuff into a book. That seems to be the case with the rest of the investigators. Best way seems to be to study the trade press and make your own texts out of what you find therein.

I have a detailed statement from a Canadian grocer which, with its letter of transmission, I think best to run right here:

———, Quebec, Jan. 7, 1921.

Dear Sir: I take quite an interest in your comments on business methods, also letters from other merchants. I cannot say I approve of some of your ideas when applied to a country store such as I put in my time trying to manage. You disapprove of carrying a large stock. This I think should be governed by the locality and character of business done. Your ideas are okeh in town or city but not in a general country store.

In my business I try to keep everything that is wanted, so some stuff is sure to be slow selling, but it saves people sending elsewhere for it.

I started here January 25, 1909, with $1,200. I bought the store I am in for $1,400. Paid $500 down, gave a mortgage for $900 and had $700 to start business. I took over the other man's stock, consisting of groceries only, a little over $200. I had had no experience in a store except to buy for my own use.

First year I did $5,832.86; in 1910 it was $10,904.29; in 1911, $11,548.63; in 1912, $15,397.37; in 1913, $16,842.72; in 1914, $17,476.78; in 1915, $13,265.08; in 1916 $14,227.26; in 1917, $18,955.57; in 1918, $21,063.59. The last two years I am enclosing statement of business done and the profits.

I own the real estate and pay myself $15 per month rent for the store. Real estate is not taken into the business as I consider this personal. Rent for store is charged to expense, also wages for one clerk (and two for about two months, July and August this year), also my own wages of $100 per month in 1919 and $145 per month in 1920, also $40 per month to my wife for help in the store. This is all charged to expense as shown in statements. Other money drawn as profits is charged to Stock. All freight and express is charged to Merchandise. I deliver nothing so there is no charge for that. I draw my wages and what profits I think the business will stand out of the business and place it to my personal account; and then it has nothing more to do with the business.

If you think the above may be of use to other dealers, you may publish it and I shall be glad to have your comments.

The Golden Rule

THE Associated Advertising Clubs of the World have handed out some good, sound advice, some of which has previously been published, but is worth repeating at this time. Goods and services, states the Club, no longer sell themselves. They must be sold. Good salesmanship is the order of the day. It is a help-the-buyer kind. It puts Service on a par with Profit. Its aim is to attract buyers by making buying attractive. Merchants and all sellers are not merely getting business, they are building it on foundations of integrity. Just recently the president of a national business spent thousands of dollars to apologize to the public for misstatements in advertising published in hundreds of newspapers by his company. He said policies of truth telling and fair treatment must be maintained by his company at any cost because he valued the confidence of the public and the goodwill of his business too much to have it impaired by wrong practices.

Legitimate business believes in "playing fair" and "dealing square." It aims to safeguard the interests of the purchasers in all transactions. With the spirit of Service as a guiding force, business is worthy of your faith on which its activity relies. There is the hub of the whole matter.

Some say there has been a breaking down of faith by the recent scramble to "get while the getting is good." Even if that is so, we must dismiss from our minds that phase of reaction from war endeavors and declare for new, high standards. To-day, let us start putting our shoulders to the wheel, all together. Let us Work a little more, Think a little harder, Buy without forebodings—and Sell with a Conscience. We must keep a clear eye out for the other fellow's interests as well as our own.

The one rule that assures a full measure of prosperity is the Golden Rule. It is simple, sure, safe. Work this rule and let it rule your work.

PLEASED CUSTOMERS

NO business can be made a success unless its customers are so well pleased with the goods and the service which they get that they will continue as customers and try to get other customers for you.

Any business—be it a little store on some cross-roads corner, or the greatest establishment in the world—cannot build up its business or keep its business on dissatisfied customers. It costs more to get a customer than your immediate profit on that customer. Getting a new customer is an investment. The profit you make on the business that you do with that customer is a dividend. You do not and cannot immediately get back your principal. You must depend upon repeat orders and continual patronage to earn enough dividends to pay back your investment.

Editorials in Brief

AIM first to sell satisfaction, and the goods that give it will re-sell themselves.

CATERING to the business of housewives is as essential to a man in a residential district as wheels are to an automobile.

PUSH, patience, perseverance and persistence are noised about as the essentials to success. They might add "luck," and put a "p" in front of it.

WHETHER you are retailing in the country or the city, the show windows are a form of salesmanship which you can keep within arm's reach of the passerby every hour of the day.

SOME merchants resist travellers and try to keep them on the outer side of the fence. They treat them like a bad disorder that should be shunned. If the merchant would be friendly with salesmen and get them to describe the best stores and the brightest merchants on whom they call, they would be a continual source of valuable information.

FOR ages merchants have been complaining about slow collections, yet in recent years a new idea has taken hold. Formerly it was thought to be unwise to press a customer too much on paying a bill. Nowadays many merchants insist on accounts being paid promptly at certain intervals, and the public to a large extent expects to find stores conducting business on this plan.

LET your customer know that a personal interest attaches to him—a real personal interest that is not measured wholly by his orders and his dollars—and you will win in return that close personal association and active support that builds up business.

EVERY salesman and assistant should decide now to make the most of his opportunities in 1921. It is the man who takes a big interest in his work who invariably forges to the front. No matter how good a business may be, the stranger must judge it by its letterhead. A poor letterhead makes a weak impression. The grocer deals with the best people in the community and it is poor business on his part to use cheap stationery.

OTTAWA RETAILERS WANT TRANSIENT TRADERS' ACT AMENDED

At a meeting of the Ottawa branch of the Retail Merchants' Association a motion was passed requesting the Dominion Executive to initiate action whereby the Transient Traders' Act may be amended to provide that the license fee for this class of trader be increased from $250, as at present provided under the act, to $1,000. It was claimed that one such trader came from Toronto, and, putting up at an Ottawa hotel, solicited trade from private residences in the city and did a big business, the money going to Toronto. The meeting wanted the transient trader's license to be made so high that this individual and others like him would do their business in Toronto, where they paid their taxes.

A. Dionne, Son & Co. Celebrate Fifty Years in Business

Montreal (Special).—The staff of the grocery store of A. Dionne, Son & Co., 581 St. Catherine Street West, Montreal, celebrated last Saturday night, February 12, the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of their store by a dance and euchre party. As it happened, in the fiftieth year of their business this firm is just opening up a second story to their store, which is to be occupied in a short time. The fittings have, however, not been placed in the new department and the staff was able to hold a dance upstairs above the present store. The evening began by a euchre party and a supper. Following this, a presentation was made by the staff to Auguste Dionne, the founder of this grocery business. Mr. Dionne was the recipient of a silver glasses case and a walking cane commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the business. After the presentation a dance was held on the spacious floor which soon will be turned into one of the departments of the enlarged store.

OPENING OF NEW FACTORY AT WINDSOR

Canadian Toledo Scale Company Being Organized—Convention of Salesmen

Windsor, Ont.—The formal opening of the new Toledo Scale Canadian factory will be held here February 21, 22, and 23, and will be celebrated by a convention of the Canadian sales force. The Toledo Scale Company have had a factory at Windsor for a number of years, but find a larger factory necessary. They purchased some time ago the factory formerly occupied by the Remington Arms Company.

A new Canadian Company is being formed to be known as the Canadian Toledo Scale Company, Limited. Application has been filed with Ottawa for letters patent under the Dominion Companies Act covering this new organization of which there will be a Canadian managing director. The new factory being occupied contains about 40,000 sq. feet of manufacturing space, and the ground includes 55 acres of land. Export trade to British colonies will be looked after by the Canadian company.

At the convention the Canadian salesmen who are members of the 1918, 1919 and 1920 One Hundred Per Cent. Clubs, will be the special guests of the company and all other members of the Canadian organization will be present. The questions up for discussion are manufacturing, sales, service, and advertising and there will be an exhibition of the important new types of scales.

SOLD SPECIALS FOR ST. VALENTINE'S DAY

T. A. Rowat & Co., of London, Ont., did a splendid business over the week-end in Valentine specials, including candles, little lamps, candies and cakes. In addition to a very attractive window display the firm had a silent salesman right up at the front of the store, just inside the door, filled with the lamps, shades and candles. A number of them were placed also on the glass top.

Right out where people could not help seeing them they made a direct appeal and commenced to move rapidly. Many people who had not thought of their requirements along these lines for St. Valentine's Day were reminded as soon as they saw the goods and made their purchases right there.

Standard Weights For Table Salt In Small Bags

The executive of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association met in Toronto last week and dealt with several questions of importance to the trade. A discussion took place on the increases in freight and express rates, as compared with the fact that no changes have taken place in postal charges. Hugh Blain, president of the association, was strong in his disapproval of the present system of parcel post. The matter was left to the president and secretary to decide upon some action in the matter.

The question of standard weights was also taken up and it was decided to ask the Dominion government to establish standard sizes of table salt in small bags and also endeavor to have all rice packed net weight instead of gross.

It was decided to hold the annual meeting in June this year, but the place of meeting was not decided, it being left to the president to decide.

New Goods

The Acadia Sugar Refineries of Montreal have placed on the market a new "Tea Block." This form of granulated sugar is unique on the market since it is made in the form of an oblong which is thinner than the ordinary tea block. The sales manager of this refinery claims that when the sugar is moulded in this shape it is dissolved more easily and more quickly than in the thicker lumps. This "Tea Block" is to be packed in cartons of two and five pounds each. They are also sold in twenty-five and fifty-pound boxes.

Cheese Scarce and Prices Firm

Heavy Export Orders Have Left Market Bare—Some Dealers Predict a Famine—Prices to Retail Trade Firm

TORONTO, Feb. 16—Cheese is very scarce and firm in price and dealers are in a quandary as to where to buy further supplies. Much of the surplus cheese has been exported, leaving the domestic market bare of stocks, and the cheese that is now being made is of a fodder flavor and is very limited in quantity. The scarcity is so great that some dealers are predicting a cheese famine before the new season's make comes in. One broker said that he could place four or five cars at once but he did not know where he could get them. Another dealer stated that he just received an order for one car, and the buyer was willing to pay 29 cents per pound, but it is practically impossible to gather together a car load.

"Those wholesalers and retailers who were fortunate enough to put in their supply early are practically the only ones who have a supply of cheese," stated a dealer, "and there is no question but that cheese is very scarce at the moment and is likely to become more so before the new comes in."

Prices to the retail trade are firm but have not advanced recently as most of the cheese now being sold was bought at prices below those now being obtained in a jobbing way.

Retailers' Director Will Speak To Vancouver Grocers

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 14.—A return visit has been arranged for Rev. W. J. Hindley, director of education of the Washington State Retailers' Association, under the auspices of the Retail Merchants' Association. Dr. Hindley spoke to the Westminster retailers on February 9. He went to Chilliwack on the 10th, and across to Nanaimo on the 11th.

The retailers of Pentieton have asked that the doctor pay them a visit up there, and the Nelson, Vernon, and Kelowna merchants have intimated that a stop over at these centres will also be in order.

Dr. Hindley gave an address at the last year's National Retail Merchants' Association convention in Vancouver, and those who heard him say the things that many merchants feel, but few can voice, are going to make an extra effort to hear him again. His function in Washington is to "sell" the retailer to his community, and also to "sell" his position in the community to the retailer. After Dr. Hindley had spoken in Vancouver last year every retail merchant went out of the convention feeling that "his was no mean calling."

On the 22nd Dr. Hindley will address the grocers' section of the R.M.A. in Vancouver.

Considerable opposition was expressed before the charter and amendments committee of the city council of Edmonton, Alta., to the proposal that the stores of Edmonton close on either Wednesday or Saturday afternoons. A prolonged discussion took place on the question, both merchants and clerks entering heatedly into the debate. It was agreed that a committee of retail merchants and one of retail clerks should get together and try to reach some agreement about the closing hours of stores, and the fixing of a half holiday, if that was desirable.

Short Course For Retailers

University of Manitoba Will Have Its Fourth Annual One-Week Short Course for Retail Merchants and Retail Salesmen From February 28th to March 4th—An Interesting Program

THE University of Manitoba will offer its fourth annual one week short course for retail merchants and retail salesmen, February 28 to March 4, 1921. The program will include lectures and conferences on merchandising, salesmanship, advertising, accounting, show card writing, conference on hardware, dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes. In addition to the Manitoba speakers, several very well-known experts have been secured, viz., Paul Findlay, retail merchandiser of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, Los Angeles, Cal.; Robert C. Line, formerly professor in marketing of the University of Minnesota, now owns and manages three fine retail stores in Montana, and Judge Frank Wilson, director of community development, University of Minnesota.

Every effort is being made to make the 1921 course one of great value to the retail trade of Western Canada.

W. J. Spence, registrar of the University of Manitoba, and Mr. J. H. Curle, secretary of the Manitoba Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, attended part of the eighth annual short course for retail merchants at the University of Minnesota on Wednesday and Thursday, February 2 and 3. They found opportunity to study the features which made the strongest appeal to the large number of merchants present. Many merchants travelled long distances. Group conferences were popular after the regular lectures or addresses.

The wholesale houses of Minneapolis and St. Paul provided entertainment in the form of banquets for the visiting merchants.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

A MOVEMENT is on foot to control the balance of this season's Cuban sugar crop formulated by American and Cuban sugar interests, and which, it is asserted, has the assent of the Cuban Government. The plan contemplates the placing of the entire crop for marketing in the hands of four sugar men and three bankers, to which proposition 75 per cent. of the producers, it is understood, have agreed. Any such attempt as this to control the crop will have a tendency to artificially raise prices, as it interferes with the law of supply and demand. In the meantime this rumor has stimulated heavy buying of raws and several large transactions have gone through at advanced prices. The United States refined is also higher and three of the largest refiners have withdrawn from the market. This condition is reflected on the Canadian market and refiners are now showing a firmer attitude and it looks as though the price cutting has run its course.

Generally speaking, there is a steadier tone to grocery commodities and business continues fairly active. Collections, too, are satisfactory, although some merchants report a slowing up, which is attributed to unemployment.

Corn syrups are reduced in price during the week, also molasses in bulk. Starches declined slightly.

Jams are moving more freely since the decline in quotations and canned vegetables have somewhat strengthened under an active inquiry.

The tea market continues with a firm tone under a strong demand, especially for the medium and finer grades. The finer grades are scarce and buyers are finding it difficult to procure their requirements.

Cereals and flour are steady under a fair demand for domestic consumption. As most wholesalers have now cleared up their supplies of prunes bought at opening prices, quotations are reduced on the later shipments which were purchased at the lower level.

The hog market is weak and quotations both in Toronto and Montreal are lower. Lard and shortening are reduced in price. Butter has an easier tone, while cheese is in a strong position.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 16.—The most striking feature of the general grocery markets this week is the declines in the prices of molasses and corn syrups. The sugar market is standing very firm with a better movement among the trade. There are further reductions made this week in the quotations on rice as a result of an effort to stimulate the demand. White pepper, allspice and ground cloves are lower. Corn and laundry starches are reduced in price one half cent per pound. The canned goods are very firm with no change in price. Although there are some lower quotaitons on evaporated apples the market is standing firm at a price set one week ago by the majority of the manufacturers. Raisins are very scarce and as a result there is a bigger demand for currants. The feature of the vegetable market is the further decline in the price of potatoes with a new low level reached, and still good supplies arriving on the market.

Canned Goods Firmer

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS. — There is practically no change in the market for canned goods this week. Prices are remaining firm with a tendency towards an advance on quotations. Some time ago reductions were made by some of the local wholesalers and as a result the demand has been such that stocks have been depleted in some lines. Carnation brand evaporated milk is reduced 25 cents and is now quoted at $7.25 per case.

White Beans Lower

Montreal.

CEREALS.—The market for rolled oats is firm this week and there are no changes in quotations. Canadian white beans are reduced in price to $3.30 per bushel. Other cereals are unchanged.

Lower Prices on Cotton Rope

Montreal.

COTTON ROPE.—Lower prices are quoted this week on cotton rope. Cotton bed cords in two dozen bundles of thirty feet each are quoted at $2.60, but there is a discount of 10 per cent. put on the price this week.. Cotton rope is reduced four cents per pound.

Evaporated Apples Firm

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Although there are some lower quotations made on dried apples by some evaporators and consequently by some of the wholesalers, the market for evaporated apples is standing firm. On Wednesday of last week there was a meeting of the representatives of the apple evaporators of Ontario and Quebec and it was there decided to pool their stocks and keep the market firm at the present quotations. A few of the other manufacturers who did not enter the pool are now on the market offering dried apples at lower prices. The supplies are limited, however, and it is not to be expected that this will weaken the market to any extent. The best quality of evaporated apples are firm in price. Raisins are very scarce and firm, both California and Turkish. This condition f the market has resulted in a bigger emand for currants.

Grapefruit in Demand

Montreal.

FRUIT.—A very good demand for oranges continues as a result of the low prices. This season may be termed grapefruit season" on account of the emand for that fruit through this month nd next. There is a big movement of rapefruit just now and prices are reasonably low. There is a fair supply of pples but the quality is not very good s the best Canadian apples have been ought up for export.

Buckwheat Flour Higher

Montreal.

FLOUR.—Prices on spring wheat flour are unchanged this week, but there is a much stronger feeling to the market owing to the higher prices being paid lately for wheat. First patents are selling at $10.70 and second patents at $10.20. A firmer feeling also prevails for winter wheat flour. The first patent winter wheat flour is selling at $10.50 and second patent at $10.25. There is, however, a sharp advance this week in the price of buckwheat flour. The price is advanced 50 cents to $5.50.

Hops and Rosin Lower

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS—There is a reduction of 2 cents per gallon on vinegar this week. Proof vinegar is now selling at 50 cents per gallon. Babbitt's cleanser advanced 15 cents per half case and is now quoted at $3.75. G. rosin is reduced in price this week and is now quoted at 4⅞ cents per pound. There is a big demand in the province of Quebec for rosin since the people in the country points in this province to a great extent make their own soap. Hops are again reduced in price and are quoted at 35 cents per pound. Within the last two weeks there have been many declines in the price of hops and the price is practically half of what it was six weeks ago.

Shelled Walnuts Higher

Montreal.

NUTS.—There is a big demand for nuts at the present time. Shelled walnuts are advanced in price and are now quoted at 56 and 57 cents per pound. Walnuts in shell are very firm in price. Further Declines on Rice

Sugar Market Steady

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market is unchanged this week. During the week the raw sugar market has firmed up considerably with some advance in price. It is more evident than ever that Canadian prices on granulated sugar will stand steady at the $10.50 basis for some time. There is a better demand for sugar than there has been for some time on account of the steadiness in the market and buyers are making heavier purchases than they have been in the habit of doing lately.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—The markets in general grocery commodities show few price changes. Cereals are steady with a lower price on marrowfat peas. Canned vegetables are moving freely but fruits are quiet. Canned lobster shows a better movement since the prices were reduced. Prunes are quoted lower. Heavy shipments of oranges are arriving daily and prices on the larger sizes are slightly higher but the smaller sizes are somewhat lower. There has been a good demand for Messina oranges and the last shipment for this season has arrived. The honey market is weak. Shelled almonds on spot are slightly firmer under a good demand. Starches are down also corn syrups and New Orleans molasses in bulk. Sugars are slightly advanced to meet the increase in freight rates. Teas continue firm with tendencies for higher levels. Potatoes are easy and lower.

Beans are in Demand

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is a good movement noted in beans, but mostly in small lots for immediate requirements. The market is holding steady at unchanged quotations.

This last reduction makes prunes about six cents per pound below the opening prices, something which usually does not happen, as the opening prices on any commodity are generally considered to be the lowest of the season. Sugar Market Firemer

Toronto.

SUGAR.—Refined sugar is steady at the refiners' price basis. The refiners are showing a firmer attitude and it looks as if the price cutting has run its course. A readjustment of freight rates, to meet the higher rates which came into effect some months ago, but which the refiners did not put on, will probably take place this week. In Toronto this freight differential will amount to about seven cents per bag.

Toronto.

TEAS.—There is a good strong demand for teas, especially for the medium and better grades. Retailers are placing orders more freely, both for immediate and future delivery. Importers are also buying more heavily, but some state that they are having difficulty in getting orders accepted as frequently the market has advanced several points before their orders reach the market. Both spot and primary markets have a firm tone with a tendency for higher levels.

WHOLESALERS' CASE

"How many customers have you, Mr. Harris?"

"I have 450 customers."

"Can you fill opening orders, that is, for retailers just setting up in business?"

"I can to a certain extent. I haven't space to carry full lines."

"Do you know the St. Lawrence Starch Co.?"

"I do." Later in his testimony Mr. Harris stated that the St. Lawrence Starch Co. had told him that they could not accept business from him, as already they had more than they could take care of.

Questioned by Mr. Roebuck as to a conversation with W. H. Jolly, a traveller for the W. K. Kellogg Co., Mr. Harris stated that Mr. Jolly told him that if he, that is Mr. Jolly, sold to either Fearman Bros. or him, Mr. Jolly could back a truck up to Beckett's door and take away all his cornflakes.

Examined by Mr. Roebuck as to a transaction with Wagstaffe's Limited, of Hamilton, witness stated that he had placed an order with this firm, and the same was accepted.

"Did you receive the goods?"

"No, the goods were delivered to a customer of mine through Balfour-Smye, of Hamilton."

"Could you conduct your business without the co-operation of manufacturers?"

"Not very well."

Cross-examined by Mr. Mackay, witness was asked what articles in bulk did he handle.

"Only tea."

"Do you think then that you can be styled a wholesale grocer?"

"Yes, sir."

"But if a retailer was about to open a store, you couldn't fully supply him, could you?"

"I have furnished new stores with a good deal of stock."

"But you couldn't supply a complete line?"

"No. Few wholesalers do."

"You do not employ travellers?"

"I do not solicit outside of Hamilton. I have one other traveller."

Mr. Hellmuth asked the witness if he was buying from various packers involved. Mr. Harris stated that he was buying from the Canada Starch Co. but the St. Lawrence Starch people had told him that they could not take care of any more business. He had never applied to the W. C. Macdonald Co. for goods nor was he purchasing from the Gillett Co.

stances and environment; and where he says he does not agree with me, he states only a half truth. What he means is that I have not been able so to cover every merchandising fact as to meet the every need of the general merchant. Within the limits at my disposal, I fear I never shall do that, except as now in piecemeal fashion.

As to large stocks. I disapprove of the carrying of more than is necessary to meet the needs of your business while regarding the normal minimum turnover in the various lines as carefully as possible. Environment must enter this problem everywhere. No man who is located at the foot of James Bay can keep his stock up and turn it as freuently as can the man in the same line in Toronto, nor can the man in Nome operate the same ratio of turnover as he who works in Nashville.

Further, let my contention be understood. I counsel the minimum stock in each line that will enable you to care adequately for your legitimate trade, leaving out all speculative purchasing. So the general merchant must take each department separately. For example:

Consider the Correct Turnover

Assuming a city, the various departments in a department store, which is the city counterpart of the country general store, the lines turn this way: Hardware, 2½ to 6 with an average of 3 to 4 for a strictly city store. Drugs, 3 to 4; domestics, 3½ to 4½; dress goods, 2½ to 3; china and glassware, 1 1-3 to 1¾; millinery, 5 to 6; shoes, 2½ to 3½; ready-to-wear, 4 to 6; carpets and rugs, 2 to 4½.

It is worth while to note that with the exception of hardware, drugs and millinery, the country store can equal at least the lowest ratio given in each line I have mentioned—and it can approach closely to the low line in the others. Why?

Because all goods which have distinct seasonal demand can be turned about as often one place as another because the merchant must buy ahead for each season. Aside from seasonal goods, the merchant can speed his turn and yet keep the stock his customers want in exact proportion as his location is near to primary markets. Thus hardware can be turned 5 or 6 times in the cities where wholesalers are available, and groceries can be turned up to 22, 24 and even 30 times in such places.

Of course, as our big authority, Parlin, so aptly says, we must "Sell what the people want; sell it in the way they want; keep the kind of store they want" if we are to succeed at all. Therefore, we must have the stock so our people shall not have to send away for it. Having done that, our aim must ever be to keep the minimum stock needful to accomplish this primary mission of the merchant.

RECIPES FOR MAKING MARMALADE

ORANGE MARMALADE, NO. 1

Slice six Messina oranges rather thin, taking out all the seeds. Measure by cups into a bowl, adding three cups of water for each cup of sliced fruit. Let this stand covered for twenty-four hours. Then turn into a preserving kettle and boil for ten minutes. Return to the bowl for another twenty-four hours. Measure the pulp into the preserving kettle, adding one cup of sugar for each cup of fruit, cook gently until it is clear and thick. About forty minutes is the usual time. Sweet oranges may be used in place of the Messina oranges or the two may be mixed in any desired proportion according to whether a sweet or a bitter flavor is desired.

ORANGE MARMALADE, NO. 2

Four bitter oranges, six lemons and two small grapefruit. Slice fruit thin and add equal bulk of water. Let stand twelve hours and boil one hour. Add one pound of sugar for each pound of pulp. Stir until sugar is dissolved and set aside for twenty-four hours, then bottle. Marmalade made by this recipe always jellies particularly well.

GRAPEFRUIT MARMALADE

Three grapefruit, five lemons. Slice very thin and put aside the seeds. To one pound of sliced fruit add three pints of cold water and let stand for twenty-four hours. Put a little water on the seeds. Boil fruit until tender and set aside twenty-four hours. To one pound of boiled fruit add 1¼ pounds sugar. Add water in which seeds have been soaked and boil gently until clear.

An ordinary tea cup can be used to measure a half pound.

In measuring liquid, a pint can be treated as a pound, or two tea cups to a pint.

Suggested recipes that the merchant could use to advantage to stimulate sales on marmalade supplies.

Necessarily, some items will be slow selling. You will have little demand for caviar, fancy sardines, ripe olives, canned plum pudding, and what you have is apt to turn only once or twice a year—yet all this must be represented in the store where wants are intended to be supplied. The thought is to keep track of actual turnover, analyze it and buy the minimum of all goods that will enable you to keep suitable stocks in all lines.

Departmentize and Analyze

It will be distinctly instructive and helpful if my present correspondent will carry on his work of analysis to the segregation of his various departments and report on what his turnover is in each. That will help him and also help the rest of us to know. For we must base all the argument on facts or we shall get nowhere.

What, then, is my friend doing right now? That's the interesting question to settle first. I do not find that the figures show he has or does carry too heavy a stock. In the years 1919 and 1920 his sales totalled about $64,000 and his stock was about $9,200 average. His gross margins seem to have averaged 16.8 per cent. so the cost of the goods sold for $64,000 was $53,240.00. Divide that by 9,200 and you will have turnover of 5.78 plus, or just over 5¾ turns. Without knowing exactly the location of his town, I should assume that such turn as an average was mighty satisfactory.

But there is so much to this statement that I shall have to continue my analysis of it next week. From that I believe my friend will realize that I certainly do "think the above may be of use to other dealers."

SYSTEM OF GRADING BUTTER TO BE ENFORCED

At a meeting of the Agricultural Committee of the Ontario Legislature Hon. Manning Doherty announced that a system of grading butter would be put into force in the province which would involve the enforcement of the Dairy Standards Act. Amendments would be brought down this session, he said, and then the act proclaimed. "Unless we are prepared to go ahead and grade these products," he declared before the committee, "we might as well junk the whole machinery for dairy improvement."

A California retailer, Robert C. Ross, sold 173 pounds of coffee in one day in Cotati, and his town has only 600 population. He advertised: "Next Saturday, special children's program (5 reels). One ticket given free with each pound of Ross' special coffee purchased this week. No tickets sold." The theatre was packed. He says, "We placed coffee in homes formerly supplied by peddlers, advertising the packing in our bags with our imprint; and sales were increased in other lines. General good feeling was created and a new avenue of advertising opened which we are following up."

J. A. Matteson, manager of Johnson Lieber Mercantile Co., Ltd., Vancouver, is receiving the congratulations of his friends. On the 16th he was married to Miss Irene Revell, prominent in musical circles in Vancouver. California will be visited by them on the honeymoon trip.

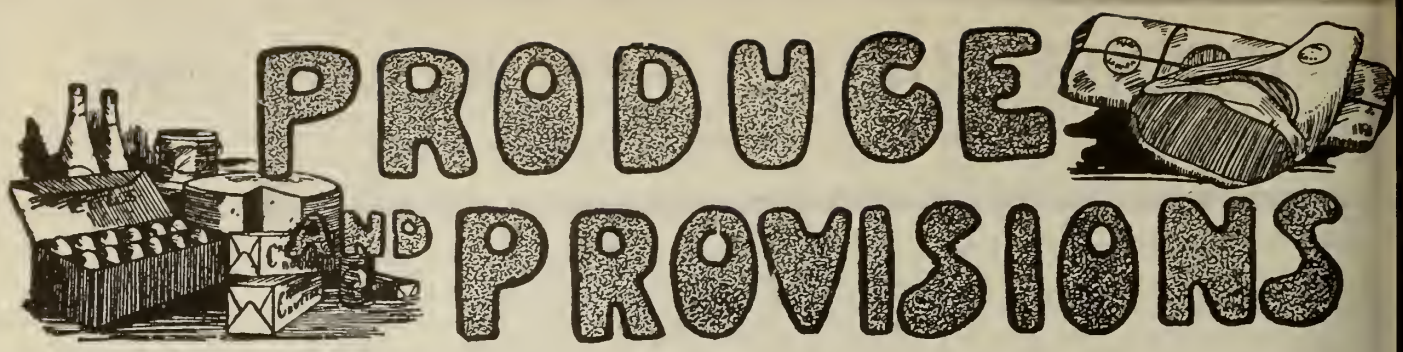
WHEAT PRODUCTION ALL OVER THE WORLD THIS YEAR

Ottawa, Feb.—A cablegram received from the International Institute of Agriculture gives the production of wheat in Argentina as 184,000,000 bushels, compared with 214,000,000 last year, and a pre-war five years' average of 149,000,000. The wheat crop of Australia is estimated at 147,000,000 bushels, against 44,000,000 last year, and the pre-war average of 90,500,000 bushels.

Condition of the new winter crops have been generally favorable in Western Europe, North Africa and Japan, but rain has been lacking in India.



Increasing Poultry Production in Canada

Interesting Address by Prof. F. B. Elford, Ottawa, at Second Day's Session of Canadian Produce Association — Convention Next Year Will Be Held in Winnipeg

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—The second day of the convention of the Canadian Produce Association, which was held in Montreal on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, began by all the members boarding a special car attached to the Montreal-Ottawa train and travelling twenty miles to St. Anne de Bellevue, where MacDonald College is located. The morning was spent in an inspection of the different departments of the college, all of which were of great interest. The cow stables were first visited and then the horse stables. While these were of great interest to those attending the convention, it is not surprising that considerably more attention was given to the hog pens and the poultry department. A specialist in each of these departments addressed the members of the association and described the different experiments and systems used in checking results. The different incubators, many of them with their capacity of eggs just in the last stages of hatching, were of great interest. The trap nests also attracted much attention.

Greater Poultry Production

After luncheon the address of welcome was delivered to the assembly by Dr. F. B. Harrison, principal of MacDonald College. Following this an address was given by Professor F. B. Elford, of the Department of Dominion Poultry, Ottawa, on "The Possibilities of Poultry Production in Canada." This address dealt with the advances made in the poultry business and the possibilities for a greater production in Canada with wider markets. This last phase of the address was enlarged upon by another address by Professor W. A. Brown, Chief of the Poultry Division, Ottawa, on "Increasing Consumption of Eggs at Home and Abroad." Mr. Brown dwelt chiefly on the figures showing the greater demand for eggs both in Canada and in foreign markets.

The difficulty experienced by produce merchants in meeting the demands of the consumer for genuine new-laid eggs was emphasized by the speaker. "The consumer," he said, "should in the long run be the dictator of the production. There is a great demand on the part of the consumer for the very best of eggs, but the percentage of eggs of that class coming in is infinitesimal, and what actually reaches the consumer is a great volume of medium grade eggs." Prof. Brown discussed the grading of eggs or the dividing of them into brands so that the public would know just for what to ask and know what they were getting without any fear of being misled. He pointed out that the ideal condition of having but one grade, that of nature, was almost unobtainable in Canada on account of the breadth of our Dominion.

Merchants Share Confidence

"Would it not be a better policy if the merchants were to take the public into their confidence with regard to the exact egg situation in Canada?" asked the speaker. "At present there exists a great gap between the quality nature gives and what the public hesitatingly accepts."

Criticizes Government Report

A discussion was opened by J. W. Atherton on the Government Daily Market Report. This address was followed by one by A. W. Bayman, of the Canadian Packing Company, Limited, Ottawa. While the criticism of these reports was rather severe from the standpoint of those interested in the produce trade in Canada, it was entirely constructive, advising that, for the benefit of the trade and the people in general, these reports should be more accurate and not so localized as at present. It was pointed out that there is a danger that the Canadian Press, following these Government reports, will mislead the people as to prices and production. From the standpoint of the produce merchant it has been found that these reports are of little or no value.

J. W. Atherton, of the St. Thom Packing Co., in opening the discussi on the subject of the Government week market report, stated that for some ti past there has existed a difference opinion as to the value and accuracy the weekly market reports. There a 5,500 copies of the weekly market let issued, as well as 350 copies of the dai market wire, sent by mail. In additi to this a daily market wire is hand to the Canadian Associated Press a given distribution through the pre throughout the whole of Canada. O of the principal objections to the repor is that they lose their value, owing the delay in getting them into the de ers' hands, and therefore are not of mu use as far as prices are concerne There are some who maintain the pric quoted are always on the top side, a never on the low. If this is so, t reports do not represent the true co mercial value of the product, having tendency to raise prices at count points, and are not fair either to t buyers or the trade. They work to t disadvantage of all concerned.

Too High Prices Quoted

There is also another point to be co sidered. If prices are quoted high than the market warrants, and the reports get into the hands of the cou try storekeepers, they cause trouble. prices are quoted too high in these r ports, they may have a tendency cause some of the dealers to bring American eggs at prices that Canadi eggs should be bought for.

One buyer, who is a large gather stated that the reports sent to the partment of prices being paid in t country were not always correct, givi as his reason that the inspectors vis ing the different egg plants made i quiries of the owner, or manager, t price he was getting for eggs, forwar ing the information thus obtained Ottawa. In some instances the deal gives the impression he is receiving more than the other fellow. If those in the trade do not give reliable information or leave the inspectors to send in a report that is mere guesswork, how can they expect to get true market conditions?

Annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association in Montreal last week. Brig.-Gen. Gunn, H. R. Gray, president in 1920, and James T. Madden, sec.-treas., will be observed in the front row.

Why Not Number Ones?

In many of these weekly market letters only specials and extras are quoted for Ontario eggs. Why not number ones? The report of the total stocks in storage and comparisons are very valuable.

Would it not be a good idea for them to get their information from the secretaries of the various produce associations? They should be in a position to give the prevailing prices from day to day. The department secures the stocks of produce from the Bureau of Statistics, the produce section of the Montreal Board of Trade and the Toronto Produce Exchange. Why not secure the market reports and prices in the same way.

Co-operative Handling of Farm Produce

The last address of the convention was given by Auguste Trudel on the "Co-operative Handling of Farm Produce." Mr. Trudel is in close touch with this subject since he is general manager of the Farmers' Co-operative Society of Quebec. The speaker said in the course of his address:

"In our province the Farmers' Co-operative Society has directed their own activities mainly in the handling of their own produce, and I am glad to say, speaking in the name of one of the most important of these organizations in our province, that, although at first it was looked upon as an unwelcome friend, today its usefulness is generally recognized.

"For my part, the true spirit of co-operation must be felt between societies as well as between individuals. We cannot ask farmers' associations not to do their best to protect their interests in marketing their produce or to take means, if necessary, to make known in foreign markets the high quality of their goods if they find that, for the sake of their own future, it is important to do so. In my opinion the most important work that this society has accomplished since its foundation is the establishing of a grading system of our farm products. As a result it is generally admitted by the regular bidders at our auctions that we have practically transformed the quality of the butter of this province as well as improved its uniformity.

"Seeing the good done in the dairy products, we are applying the same system to all the farm produce which we handle. We so thoroughly believe in this system that we are extending it to the live stock branch and are now convinced that it will have a like effect in all departments."

Mr. Trudel went on in his address to show the growth of the Farmers' Co-operative Society of Quebec, speaking particularly of the receipts of eggs and the general greater production in the province. He spoke of shipments of eggs that are being received from farmers 350 miles east of Montreal which are all graded "new-laid" and instead of the quantity diminishing, in the last six years it has increased tenfold.

Improved Transportation

J. F. Singleton, chief of markets division at Ottawa, gave the convention a summary of what the Department of Agriculture had done in the matter of providing refrigerator cars for the transit of butter and cheese. He also told about the good work done by special inspectors who were engaged to look after the loading and unloading of these perishable goods. It appeared that the inspectors were not able to enforce attention by the transport men so thoroughly as formerly, owing to the fact that labor was more independent.

Election of Officers

Towards the latter part of the afternoon the nomination committee brought in their report and the election of officers for the new year followed. A. P. McLean, of Winnipeg, representing the Whyte Packing Company, was elected president succeeding the retiring president, H. R. Gray, of Montreal. At the same time it was decided that the next convention should be held in Winnipeg in view of the cordial invitation from the West and the fact that Winnipeg is the centre of Western activities. Other officers elected were as follows: Richard Gray, of Montreal, first vice-president; E. W. Raney, Toronto, second vice-president; J. T. Madden, Toronto, secretary-treasurer. The directors are to be T. J. Coyle, Winnipeg; A. E. Bailey, Belleville; R. J. McLean, Toronto; J. J. Fee, Toronto; John Wilson, Montreal; J. W. Atherton, St. Thomas, Ont.; A. W. Bayman, Ottawa; F. F. White, Montreal; G. F. Fraser, Halifax.

Among the resolutions brought in and adopted was one in favor of the principle of grading of butter and cheese with a committee to look after this in conjunction with the Dominion Dairy Commissioner, J. A. Ruddick.

The retail merchants of Kelowna, B.C., held their annual meeting recently and elected officers for the year as follows: President, George S. McKenzie; first vice-president, D. K. Gordon; 2nd vice-president, Harry Chapin; secretary, A. S. Wade; treasurer, W. W. Pettigrew. These officers, with the retiring president, G. A. Meikle, form the executive for the year.

Grading and Control of Dairy Produce for Export

J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Talks on This Subject to Members Of Canadian Produce Association—Grading Will Help Canada Maintain Her Position in The Old Country Markets

DISCUSSING the official grading and control of dairy produce for export at the annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association in Montreal last week, J. A. Ruddick, dairy and cold storage commissioner, stated at the outset that while he personally believed in the principle of grading dairy produce and other commodities for export, it was not his intention to advocate the adoption of such a system in connection with the export of Canadian butter and cheese, or to urge it upon the dairymen at the present time.

A Provincial Function

"Some months ago, at a conference with the Provincial Deputy Ministers of Agriculture," Mr. Ruddick stated, "the subject was discussed, and it was agreed that the grading of dairy produce for domestic trade or for educational purposes might be considered a provincial function, but that grading for export was essentially a Dominion function. During the last session of Parliament a resolution calling upon the Government to establish a grading system for export dairy produce was introduced in the House of Commons. It received unanimous support from the members. The Minister of Agriculture in his reply accepted the principle of the resolution, and stated that when the producers were ready to have their butter and cheese graded the Dairy Branch would be prepared to carry out such a scheme. While the attitude of the House on this question might almost be taken as a mandate, the reply of the Minister gives you the policy of the Department in the matter. In other words, when you intimate that you are desirous of having such a service performed, means will be found to carry it out, but it is not the intention of the Minister to force it upon the country. In the meantime we feel that while this matter is being discussed and receiving some attention from all progressive dairymen, it is our duty to collect and disseminate as much information on the subject as possible.

"The grading of produce is not a new idea, and it is over twenty years since it was first applied to butter and cheese. As a matter of fact the principle of grading has always been recognized in the Canadian cheese and butter trade. In selling cheese the price is usually fixed on the basis of No. 1 quality. On delivery the buyer inspects the shipment and decides whether the quality is up to the standard of No. 1 quality or should be rated lower.

First Grading in Alberta

"Official or Government grading of dairy produce has been in force in different countries for a good many years, and we now have in Canada a number of grading services in operation.

"I think it is only fair to say that the first grading of butter in Canada was carried out in Alberta. The sample system is followed, and it is not compulsory, although practically all the creameries in the province avail themselves of the service. No Alberta creamery can sell its butter to advantage in the British Columbia market unless it is covered by the Alberta grader's certificate, as some of the creameries have learned to their cost when they have attempted to act independently of the grading system.

"The grading of butter is also carried out in both Saskatchewan and Manitoba along the same lines as those followed in Alberta, and it may be said now that the great bulk of all the creamery butter produced in the prairie provinces is graded by the different provincial authorities. There is no doubt that the grading of butter has been an important factor in winning for the butter of the prairie provinces the strong position which it holds to-day.

A Voluntary Grading

"The dairy branch of the Provincial Department of Agriculture at Toronto has, as most of you know, been conducting a voluntary or optional butter grading service on the sample plan for the last three years.

"The Quebec Agricultural Co-operative Society has been grading cheese and butter in bulk for sale by auction in Montreal for some years past. The society practically does its own grading, although it has the backing of the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

"During the years 1917 and 1918, when the cheese was handled by the Cheese Commission and the Dairy Produce Commission, every box exported was to all intents and purposes classified into No. 1, No. 2, or "Off Grades," according to the now generally adopted Canadian standards and definitions. The cheese were classified by the dealers who offered them to the commission, but the commission inspected every lot to see that the classification was according to quality, and a definite spread of a half cent per pound was made in the price as between first and second grades.

"Personally, I have not in the past been a very enthusiastic advocate for the adoption of a general system of grading, because I did not believe that this country was ready for it, but I will go farther than I did in opening and say that I believe now that the time has come when if we are to hold our own under the keen competition, keener than it has ever been before, we must take advantage of every means of placing our surplus of dairy produce on the world's markets under the most favorable conditions possible. A system of grading for export dairy produce, if adopted, would have in this country a three-fold object. First, it would be educational; second, it would facilitate trading and promote confidence in our produce; third, it would give the maker of the high-grade article full recognition and reward.

"In conclusion let me say this, that no one has a higher appreciation of the outstanding position which Canadian cheese has reached in the world's market than I have. It is the largest item in the international trade, and in the matter of quality it stands absolutely at the top. We have reached this position without any system of grading, but it must be remembered that while we were making our reputation no other country had such a system. Our position as the largest exporter of cheese in the world is being threatened to some extent by New Zealand, but I am of the opinion that it will be many years before New Zealand exports as much cheese as Canada does. At the present moment there is a tendency to swing back to butter-making in New Zealand. We cannot, however, continue to hold our position in the cheese trade unless we are prepared to meet our competitors on equal footing, and the development of the grading idea all over the world is something which we cannot afford to ignore.

Butter Export Small

"With regard to butter our position is very much weaker. The surplus for export is comparatively small. It will probably be in the neighborhood of 15 million pounds for the season of 1920. The quantity is irregular, and our reputation suffers from the fact that a great deal of the butter is held during the summer months for speculative purposes. There is every indication, however, that our exports of butter will show very considerable increase in future years, and if it is to win as favorable a position as our cheese has we must do everything in our power to meet a competition which is even keener in the case of butter than it is in that of cheese."

Ed. Smith, of the T. B. Escott Co., London, Ont., was in Toronto on business recently.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 16.—Perhaps the most important feature of the produce market this week is the further decline in the price of eggs. These lower prices are accounted for by the fact that there is an earlier increase in the production generally throughout the country and this seems to be continuing. There is also a decline in quotations on live hogs. There is no change in the quotations on smoked meats. The lard market is steady with a good demand for immediate requirements. The shortening market follows the lard market in its tendencies. The poultry market is strong in view of the shortage of supplies and the big demand for fresh killed poultry during the Lenten season. There is no change in the butter market and although the demand for supplies is not large the market rules steady. Cheese, however, is very strong with the big demand for both export and domestic trade. The Lenten season has caused even a bigger demand for fish than was expected. Supplies, however, are arriving sufficient to meet the demand and prices are unchanged.

Butter Holds Steady

Montreal.

BUTTER.—A steady feeling has prevailed in the market throughout the week and prices have shown no important change. The demand from local and outside buyers has not been quite up to expectations and the movement has not been as large as in the previous week.

Cheese Supplies Smaller

Montreal.

CHEESE.—There is nothing new to report in the cheese market this week. Stocks on the market at present are very light, they having been reduced considerably within the past two weeks by shipments to Europe. The market remains firm with a very fair demand for both domestic and foreign trade.

Barrel Meats Steady

Montreal.

BARRELLED MEATS.—The market for barrelled meat is steady with only a fair demand and no changes in price.

Cooked Meats Unchanged

Montreal.

COOKED MEATS.—The demand for cooked meats at this season is not large and the prices remain unchanged.

Another Decline on Eggs

Montreal.

EGGS.—A further decline of 14 to 17 cents per dozen is recorded on the egg market during the week. The big reduction in the price of eggs lately is accounted for by the fact that the increased production of eggs throughout the country is much earlier this year than previous years. The supply continues to arrive in ever increasing quantities. Strictly new-laid eggs are selling as low as 58 cents per dozen. This makes a decline of 26 cents during the past three weeks.

EGGS—

Strictly fresh	$ 58	0 60
Selects	0 52	0 54
No. 1	0 48	0 50

Big Demand for Fish

Montreal.

FISH.—Local fish dealers report that the demand for fish at the Lenten season is even greater than was expected. Supplies, however, are arriving sufficient to keep the trade supplied and the cold weather is facilitating the handling. Prices are holding firm and there are no changes to be recorded.

Lower Prices on Live Hogs

Montreal.

FRESH MEAT.—The striking feature of the fresh meat market this week is the decline of 25 cents per cwt. on the price of live hogs. Montreal is now quoting $16.75 and $16.50 per cwt. for live hogs. A weaker market prevailed throughout this week on live hogs as the result of the absence of outside competition for supplies and also on account of the fact that supplies were ample to meet immediate requirements. The price on spring lamb, carcass, is slightly advanced this week, now being quoted at from 24 to 30 cents per pound. There is no important change in the market for beef.

Lard Market Steady

Montreal.

LARD:—A fair trade in lard has been done during the past week and the undertone of the market is steady with perhaps a better prospect for the future market than has been evident for some time. There are no changes in quotations for this week.

LARD—

Tierces, 360 lbs.	....	0 20½

Poultry in Active Demand

Montreal.

POULTRY.—A very firm feeling prevails in the market for dressed poultry and the prospects are for higher prices a little later in the season owing to the fact that stocks in cold storage are smaller than they have been for some time. Supplies of fresh killed stock coming forward in the country are very light. Owing to the Lenten season there is an increased demand for poultry for immediate consumption and the market has a strong tone.

Shortening Unchanged

Montreal.

SHORTENING.—The shortening market is steady this week following the lard market, but there are no changes in quotations.

Smoked Meats Steady

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—The feeling in the market for smoked meats is steady with a fair trade for local and country accounts, notwithstanding the effects of the Lenten season and the market on the whole is fairly active. There are no changes in price this week.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—The butter market shows no tendency to firm up, in fact if anything butter has a slightly easier tone. There is a marked scarcity of cheese with indications of a famine before the new season's make arrives, according to some dealers. Lard and shortening are easy with prices further reduced during the week. Egg prices are considerably lower than they were a week ago, but the opinion is expressed that eggs have now reached a steadier price basis, for a time at least. Live hogs have been fairly steady during the week, but fresh pork cuts are lower. Barrel pork is reduced in price, also Wiltshire sides and salt meats. Chickens are higher under light receipts and a good demand.

Butter Market Fairly Easy

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The general tone of the butter market is slightly easier. This is more noticeable on the undergrades, which can be bought for as low as 50 cents per pound. The average quotation on the finest grade is 59 cents, although some brands of fresh made are bringing 60 to 63 cents. This last quotation, however, does not indicate the market price as the quantity is limited.

Egg Prices Steadier

Toronto.

EGGS.—Prices on eggs declined almost every day during the week, but it is now the opinion that prices have about reached a steadier basis. New laids are quoted at 50 cents per dozen.

Pork Cuts Reduced

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—Live hogs held fairly steady during the week with quotations practically unchanged. Fresh pork cuts are reduced one to two cents per pound.

Fish in Brisk Demand

Toronto.

FISH.—The Lenten season is satisfactory to the fish business, judging by the activity of the fish market these days. Orders for the city and also for outside points are arriving very freely. Heavy shipments are arriving every day and all lines are well represented. Quotations are steady and unchanged.

Lard Market Easy

Toronto.

LARD.—Quotations on lard on the tierce basis are down one to two cents per pound, bringing the price to 21 and 22 cents. One pound prints in cartons are unchanged at 25 cents.

Toronto.

SHORTENING.—Quotations on shortening continue on the down grade with the tendencies still weak. One pound prints are reduced two cents, bringing the price down to 15½ and 16 cents and on the tierce basis 13½ to 14 cents per pound.

Cheese Market Strong

Toronto.

CHEESE.—The cheese market has developed a strong tone. Stocks are very limited, and one dealer predicted a famine before the new season's make arrives. Brokers stated that they are in the market for three or four car loads and that their buyers are offering as high as 26½ cents per pound. Cheese in any quantity is hard to pick up, as practically all the supplies are now in the hands of wholesalers. Quotations to the retail trade are firm at 30 to 31 cents per pound.

Very few sheep and lambs are offered. Hogs are lower and selects are quoted at $13.75 per cwt. The demand for ham and bacon continues active and cooked meat continues steady. There is no change in the butter market and cheese is also steady. The egg market which was in an unsettled condition has shown an advance. Lard dropped during the week and shortening remains unchanged. The demand for fish during the Lenten season is very heavy.

Butter Continues Firm

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—Creamery butter continues firm and prices are fully maintained at 60 cents per pound. Dairy butter continues weak and is being quoted at 34 to 36 cents per pound.

Cooked Meats Steady

Winnipeg.

COOKED MEATS.—There is no change in quotations on cooked meats. The market is holding steady.

Cheese Market Steady

Winnipeg.

Winnipeg.

EGGS.—The egg market continues in a very unsettled condition. During the week eggs declined but have since advanced. American fresh candled are quoted at 52 cents per dozen.

Now as Never Before—

You Need Sound Financial Information

THERE never was a time when business merchants needed sound, sane, financial knowledge of commercial happenings on which to base present and future investments as they do right now.

For your business profits are not real profits until you have them safely invested in reliable securities.

Why not invest profits from your shop and the coupons from your Victory Bonds in genuine securities, news of which you will find every week in THE FINANCIAL POST Investor's Enquiry Service, a feature for subscribers which will give you the benefit of investigators in all the big financial centres? This service is just as if you paid a man $10,000 a year to be your own personal investigator in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg — in fact, every city in the Dominion.

But you cannot hire the services of this staff — you get them free with a subscription to THE FINANCIAL POST, through this splendid Investor's Enquiry Service, which is free to all readers.

But that is not the only thing — this commercial newspaper gives you the financial, industrial, banking news of the country in convenient readable form — just the data you need for your business — just the facts you need for your investments — in fact, a splendid partner of the ambitious merchant.

When 8,425 merchants, business executives, bankers, lawyers find in THE FINANCIAL POST the very facts which will help them in their business, will you not find a weekly reading of its pages very beneficial?

POTATO MARKET EASY AND LOWER

Potatoes continue to reach lower levels and with the large crop and no export demand there is a tendency for even lower prices.

FIRMER MARKET FOR FINE TEAS

Since the first of the year the demand for teas has been steadily increasing, particularly on the medium and the finer grades. As a result of this renewed buying activity stocks have been greatly depleted and critical buyers are finding it difficult to procure what they want. Prices in London and Colombo have also been rising rapidly and are now four to six pence per pound higher than at the close of the year.

Spot stocks are at fairly low ebb and as consumers are giving the better grades the preference, higher prices on teas showing good cup quality, can be expected.

These one-inch spaces only $2.20 per insertion if used each issue in the year.

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

QUALITY FRUIT JAMS

WELCH Lades Quality fruit jams are absolutely pure and more than comply with pure food laws in the Dominion. Peachlade, Plumlade, Grapelade, Cherrilade, Strawberilade contain only the choice fruit for which they are named —and from which they are made. Nothing but pure sugar is added to any of them.

And Welch Pure Fruit Jams are 100% value because they are 100% eatable products. All are smooth and spread like butter. All are free from seeds, skins and pits. All are distinctly different from ordinary jams, each product having a flavor all its own.

Retailers should stock now this line of Welch Pure Fruit Jams. The No. 16 glass jars in which these jams are packed are just the size for frequent buying. And this year the sales will be quickened by more extensive advertising than ever before.

Your jobber will gladly give you full information and is ready to supply you immediately.

Appearances Count Mightily

The successful dealer is the one who makes his store a shining example of neatness. He is every bit as jealous of the appearance of his goods as of their quality.

Imperial Floor Dressing aids the tidy storekeeper. It keeps down 90% of the atmospheric dust which is directly responsible for that undesirable, shop-worn appearance that repels the buying public.

Imperial Floor Dressing does more than reduce dust. It brightens floors and fixtures and gives them a like-new appearance that sells goods. It is the ideal cleaner and preservative for wood, linoleum or oil cloth.

One gallon of Imperial Floor Dressing is sufficient for treating upwards of 700 square feet. It does not gum or evaporate, consequently one application will last for weeks.

You will appreciate the sanitary, dust-killing qualities of Imperial Floor Dressing in your own place of business. It is also a profitable line for the dealer to stock.

Imperial Floor Dressing comes in one and four-gallon lithographed sealed cans, and in half-barrels and barrels. Ask the Imperial Oil salesman for prices and a demonstration.

PURITY

OLD COLONY MAPLE SYRUP

Satisfies Everybody

How do we know that Old Colony Maple Syrup satisfies customers?—We have proof in these facts:—Never have we received one complaint about it, and our sales are constantly increasing.

Tests of Purity and Quality

When we began to produce "Old Colony" we determined that it should be the best, purest, and most delicious Maple Syrup on the market. The favor it has won, proves our success.

Old Colony has passed every Government test for purity, imposed on products using the word "Maple." And we consistently maintain the original high standard of quality—the result of skill and care in production.

Delicious Maple Sugar

Our Maple Sugar is equally superior. It is of the same stock as Old Colony Maple Syrup, and by expert treatment retains enough moisture to prevent it becoming too hard and dry with age.

Small Sized Oranges are The Best Buy Now

Growing conditions in California this season have produced an orange crop with an unusually large proportion of the smaller sizes—216's, 250's, 288's and 324's are in plentiful supply, while the larger sizes are scarce.

Ask your Jobber for Prices on Small Sizes

Consider the attractive prices at which these small sizes can be sold and still net you a good profit. Note the selling prices on the chart below, which are figured to yield 25% margin on your selling price (which is equivalent to 33⅓% on your cost).

We wish to call your particular attention to the 216 size which is the most plentiful now. The 216 size and the 200 size are so nearly alike that it is difficult to tell them apart and the 216's contain 16 more oranges to a box. You can buy 216's at bargain prices.

These figures are selling price per dozen, NOT cost.

Size	Doz. in Box	$3.00 Box	$3.25 Box	$3.50 Box	$3.75 Box	$4.00 Box	$4.25 Box	$4.50 Box	$4.75 Box
216	18	23	25	26	28	30	32	34	36
250	21	20	21	23	24	26	27	29	31
288	24	17	19	20	22	23	24	25	27
324	27	15	17	18	19	20	21	23	24

THIS size situation is not a new one. Growing conditions vary each year. A similar situation existed several years ago, when there was an abundance of small sized oranges and a scarcity of the larger sizes. Merchants at that time learned how to turn it to their advantage. This is how they did it.

1. They bought at attractive prices the small sized oranges, which were then in most plentiful supply.
2. They displayed large quantities of the smaller sized oranges in the window all the time.
3. Instead of pricing the small oranges in the customary way, "by the dozen," they featured them in larger quantities by the peck, basket, bushel, half box and box.
4. Many offered odd quantities for even money, such as "19 oranges for 50c," "5 dozen for a dollar," etc., depending on size and cost per box, so that each customer bought more than the usual dozen.
5. Some made one day each week an "Orange Day" when they featured small oranges as "leaders" at bargain prices and thus attracted trade to their other lines.

This opportunity is here again. Use it to your advantage. Get quotations on all sizes and buy those which are cheapest. Try these plans in your business.

Flour Draws the Crowd

Purity Flour draws business for the retail grocer. The woman who bakes bread, cakes and pastry at home wants many more items than flour when she gets ready to bake—lard, raisins, baking powder, yeast, fruits, syrup, sugar, etc., etc. And, while she's making up her order for baking day needs, she thinks of other things her pantry lacks that your store can supply.

PURITY FLOUR

is a strong Western flour. You can recommend it for home baking of every kind.

Shirriff's
ORANGE MARMALADE

YEARS ago the dealer in foodstuffs had to create a reputation for the goods he sold. To-day he can sell goods that have earned a reputation for themselves.

Shirriff's Orange Marmalade is known throughout Canada for its unchangingly high quality. The wholesome goodness of Shirriff's Marmalade is responsible for the popularity it enjoys—and for the sure repeat orders that follow every sale.

It requires little more than a mention of the name "Shirriff's" to sell your customer absolute satisfaction and an abiding faith in your store. Surely it is worth a trial.

MACDONALD'S

The Best Known Tobaccos in Canada To-Day

THERE are eight kinds of tobacco pictured on this page. They are all Macdonald's. They are all made to meet somebody's idea of a perfect tobacco —and every smoker will find among them a tobacco to suit his taste.

These eight forms of Macdonald's are the best-known tobaccos in Canada. Their pictures are in the newspapers all over the country. The result—

More and more Macdonald's is being sold all the time. And the more Macdonald's sold the faster the retailer's turnover; the faster the turnover, the greater his profit.

And, after all, none of us are in business for our health.

A Stirring Instalment of Heming's Famous Story

ARTHUR HEMING continues his remarkable story of Canada's Northland in March 1 MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE. In "Wild Animals and Men" he tells how he and Oo-Koo-hoo tracked and trapped wolverine, lynx, and other wild animals, and tells fascinating stories of battles of wits between the hunters and the hunted. The wiles of the Indians and half-breeds are pitted against the amazing, almost superhuman craftiness of the animals—and sometimes the denizens of the forest wilds outwit their human antagonists.

Fun at Opening of Parliament

J. K. Munro sat in his seat in the Press Gallery, Monday, February 14, when Parliament opened, and looked down with the good-natured tolerance and contempt of an iconoclast and a satirist at the proceedings. The members invariably amuse "J. K."; it takes a really big man to elicit more than scant praise from his sophisticated pen. His March 1 article is entitled: "Funny, as the Owl is Funny."

"Wholesale Distribution the Cheapest"

Manufacturers Testify Before Court in Case Against Wholesale Grocers' Association That the Most Economic Method of Reaching the Consumer is Through the Wholesaler to the Retailer—Case is Adjourned for Two Weeks

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

TORONTO, Feb. 22—Evidence for the plaintiff in the action of the Attorney-General of Ontario against the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Canada, alleging a combine, was completed when the Court adjourned on Friday afternoon last. Mr. Justice Orde, who is hearing the case, adjourned for a couple of weeks, having to be out of the city, in the interim. When Court resumes, the defendants' witnesses will take the stand. Testimony in the last two days of the hearing last week included that of two representatives of two starch manufacturing companies, the general manager of the General Wholesalers', Ltd., and the president of the York Trading Co. These witnesses all testified in the hearing before the Board of Commerce in Hamilton a year ago, but in this hearing their evidence is more as to the direct relationship between certain manufacturers and of the wholesalers' association.

W. S. Ware, Canadian manager of the W. K. Kellogg Cereal Co., Toronto and Battle Creek, Mich., was the first witness on Wednesday morning last.

Mr. Roebuck produced some correspondence showing that Mr. Jolley had taken an order from Fearman Bros. for 100 cases of cornflakes in November, 1918. When Mr. Ware returned from the South in December he wrote to Mr. Jolley not to call on Fearman Bros. This, he said, was on account of instructions received from his head office. He did not recollect discussing the matter with any particular wholesaler.

"Do you know W. F. Morley?"—"Yes."

"Did you sell him at wholesale rates?"

"Yes."

"Was his financial standing satisfactory?"

"I never questioned it."

"Did you see anyone outside your own firm in regard to sales to Mr. Morley?"

"Mr. Morley's name had been mentioned to me by some wholesalers as a man who sold goods below the list price, but I don't recollect a specific instance."

"Did you have a discussion with Mr. Beckett?"

"Mr. Morley's name was mentioned by him."

"Was Mr. Morley continued on your list after that?"

"Yes, and until I received instructions from Battle Creek to close the account."

"The question came up in Mr. Beckett's office about selling to Mr. Morley. I pointed out that our competitors were selling him so Mr. Beckett wrote a letter to the London firm." Mr. Roebuck produced this letter and read it.

Mr. Beckett was ill and was not able to attend the investigation.

"Are you selling Mr. Morley now?"

"Yes, on instructions from head office received several months after the investigation last year."

"Are you selling Lumsden Bros. of Hamilton?"

"Yes, we are."

"Do you know when they became members of the association?"

"I do not."

"Have you received list of members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association."

"I think I did shortly after Mr. Pyke came to Toronto."

Did Not Have to Be Members

Answering Mr. Hellmuth, Mr. Ware stated his company sold to whomever head office put on their list regardless as to whether they were members of the Canadian or Ontario Association.

"You are selling to Mr. Morley now, although he is not a member of either association?"

"Yes, we are."

Evidence of J. Jolley

J. Jolley stated that in August, 1918, he was with the W. K. Kellogg Cereal Co. of Toronto and Battle Creek. He was calling on retail stores in Hamilton, taking orders to be filled through the wholesalers.

"What wholesalers were you authorized to sell?" asked crown counsel.

"W. H. Gillard & Co., Balfour, Smye & Co., Bristol, Somerville Co., James Turner & Co., and MacPherson-Glassco Limited. I was not permitted to sell Lumsden Bros. or Mr. Harris."

"When did you first sell Fearman Bros?"

"On November 13, 1918."

"Was that order filled?"—"Yes."

Mr. Jolley then recalled conversation he had had with Mr. Beckett in regard to selling "retailers." He considered Fearman Bros. were wholesalers. Mr. Beckett told him if he contined selling "retailers" he couldn't sell him.

Mr. Jolley referred to another conversation with Mr. Beckett later, in which he was told that Mr. Fearman had been to his house and had asked to be admitted to the association. Mr. Beckett had told him that if he conducted his business properly he would be admitted.

"Did you have any touch with the Attorney-General's Department."

"I saw a representative on December 8, 1919, in Hamilton, and I came down to Toronto at his request."

Mr. Beckett Favored Price Maintenance

Mr. McKay: "Was Mr. Beckett's contention that the manufacturer should establish his price from wholesaler to retailer and from retailer to consumer?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't he convinced that that would result in the cheapest method of getting goods to the consumer?"

"Yes; that was his argument."

"Didn't Mr. Beckett take the position that the manufacturer should not sell to wholesalers at a certain price and then sell to some retailers at the same price?"

"I couldn't say definitely as to that."

"He was contending that the Board of Commerce should regulate business on the above basis?"

"Yes."

Testimony of Mr. Adams

A. A. Adams, commission merchant, of Hamilton, followed.

"What lines do you carry?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Approximately 200 lines, but not all the general lines. I have about 400 customers. My business is to get hold of certain lines as exclusive agent for my territory. We sell, for instance, Lipton's tea to both the wholesale and retail trade."

"At different prices?"

"Yes, allowing us a profit in each case. We buy stocks outright from the manufacturer."

"Have you made application to purchase starch fram Canada Starch Co."

"I was purchasing a line in Chicago, but in 1918 the exchange made it difficult to compete. The duty is $1.50 per cwt. Then I wrote the Canada Starch Co., pointing this out, and made application for their product."

The reply was read by Mr. Roebuck, stating that the company did not feel like selling him, as they confined their sales to the regular wholesale grocery trade.

"Do you represent the T. A. Lytle Company?"

"Just two of their lines exclusively."

"Do you sell the others?"

"Yes, but only on a wholesale basis. I haven't the exclusive agency of these."

Cheapest Distribution Method?

"It has been given in evidence that the cheapest method of distribution is from wholesaler to retailer to consumer. What do you think of it?"

"There are firms who find selling from wholesaler to retailer the cheapest and best method. On the other hand there are large firms that have found they have to sell direct to the retailer to get their goods properly introduced."

"Do you think a wholesaler to be a wholesaler should sell all lines of goods?"

"No. I think it is a matter of choice. If I can make a living on selling a few lines I want to be able to do it."

"What is your overhead expense?"

"Seven per cent."

To Mr. McKay:

"You sell to both wholesaler and retailer at different prices?"

"Yes."

"You recognize the wholesaler has to sell what he buys to other retailers."

"Yes."

"You are one more link added to the chain of distribution. A manufacturer sells to you and you to a wholesaler and then the wholesaler to the retailer?"

"Yes, I admit that."

"Unless you perform a service you wouldn't exist?"

"Yes."

"In certain instances you have to do more than go round to wholesale houses?"

"Yes, we have to go to the retailers and endeavor to sell them the goods, either direct or they are placed through the wholesalers."

"Have you any idea as to what proportion your business is to the wholesaler and to the retailer?"

"I would say possibly one-eighth is to the wholesale trade."

"If you didn't have that wholesale business your percentage of cost would go up?"

"Yes. That business usually comes over the telephone and there is not much added expense to get it."

"If you handled all goods—such as bulk rice, tapioca, etc.—wouldn't your expenses go up."

"Yes, naturally they would."

"Since September of last year it has been more difficult to make a profit?"

"Yes, we have had to take some losses."

Mr. Hellmuth: "You have the exclusive agency for certain lines—Lipton's, for instance."

"Yes, also Dominion Match Co."

"The Dominion Match Co. appoint you to sell the trade and if anyone wants Dominion matches he must apply to you."

"Yes."

"And do you consider that is against the interests of the consumer?"

"Absolutely no."

"Could all the manufacturers sell direct to the retailer all over the country?"

"Not very well, although some manufacturers carry their own stocks and sell direct."

"You think the wholesaler is necessary?"

"Yes, I certainly do."

The Starch Business

"You are getting starch from the United States?"

"Yes, we sell both laundry and culinary starch to the grocery trade."

"Isn't there comparatively little laundry starch used in the average home?"

"Can't say about that, there is a lot sold."

"Would you be surprised if you heard that in Ontario there is only one-half pound per capita used?"

"No, that would still mean a lot of starch."

"Have you made any analysis between the United States and Canadian starch in so far as prices and quantity in cartons are concerned?"

"I found on Monday that the Canadian starches are underselling me about 5 per cent."

"In writing you about selling their starch, the Canada Starch Co. were honest in saying that they were confining their sales to the legitimate wholesale trade?"

"I have no doubt they were."

"You sell to whomever you please?"

"Yes, I maintain that right."

"Lists Only Form of Contract with Wholesaler" Says Manufacturer

"Wholesaler is Quite Essential to Our Distribution, Otherwise We Would have to Employ Travellers at Much Greater Expense," According to Testimony of Joseph Ruddy and Archibald Hutchison

Joseph Ruddy, vice-president of the Canada Starch Co., stated to Mr. Roebuck that his firm issued price lists advising the trade of changes.

"Are these price lists prepared in consultation with any one else?"

"Yes, with the St. Lawrence Starch Co."

"Are your prices and theirs similar?"

"We sell under different brands but our prices are similar for equivalent brands. We both make changes at same time; last time this was a reduction.

"We have no signed contract in effect with the wholesale trade but we refer in our price list to our terms. The price list is the only form of contract we have. There is nothing signed."

"What would happen if the list were broken?"

"I don't know, nothing has ever happened yet."

"Is there any understanding between you and the wholesaler re maintaining prices?"

"No, except I think they understand they would be cut off, although we have heard of some cutting but no action was ever taken by us."

"What discount do you allow?"

"Twelve and a half per cent."

Mr. Ruddy.—"I have told firms that when one wholesaler cuts others are liable to do the same and that would mean a cut in the profits to all concerned."

Little Change in 20 Years

"How long has your selling arrangement been in force?"

"About 20 years."

"What has been the increase in your price in the 20 years?" asked Mr. Justice Orde.

"Twenty-two years ago corn was 28 cents a bushel and our starch was selling at 6 cents. To-day corn costs us about $1 per bushel and the starch sells at 8½ cents per pound."

Mr. Ruddy reviewed the starch business for some years back and referred to a number of starch factories that had failed for one reason and another. "After the failure of the British American Starch Co.," he said, "we found that our present method of selling through wholesaler to retailer was the cheapest one. We cannot profitably sell the retailer direct because of the small quantity of starch used in the household. If we had to sell to the retailer direct we would have to keep many travelers on the road, which would increase the cost at least double. At one time we did sell a few of the larger retailers but the wholesalers objected to us selling preferred accounts and leaving the others for them. So we changed our method and have since sold entirely through the wholesaler."

Wholesaler Is a Necessity

When the court resumed for the afternoon session Mr. Ruddy again took the stand.

"Do you consider the wholesale grocer a necessity?" Mr. Roebuck asked.

"Speaking for our own business, the wholesale grocer is quite essential to our distribution. It is much more economic, because if we had to employ travelers to cover the whole of Canada, our expenses would be so heavy that we could not compete with the American manufacturers. The wholesale grocer solves the problem."

"Did you ever do business with Fearman Bros.?"

"Yes, sir."

"When did you first do business with them?"

"In January, 1920."

"When did they first make application to be placed on your selling list?"

"I think it was in November or the latter part of October."

"What response did you give to these applications?"

"I told them that I would make some investigation before deciding to sell to them. I later went to Hamilton and looked over their place, to ascertain just what the nature of their business was."

"Was any information supplied to you by the wholesale grocers' association?"

"None whatever."

"What is your definition of a wholesale grocer?"

"A wholesale grocer is one who conducts wholesale trading, selling to the retail trade."

"Is Mr. Adams, of Hamilton, a wholesaler?"

"Mr. Adams, from his evidence, I would say is a specialty man, handling only certain lines, and just going after the easy business in the city."

"Has the American price of starch any influence in connection with the setting of your price?"

"Sometimes when they make very low prices we have to meet them."

"Are your prices below American prices?"

"Yes."

Mr. Hellmuth then cross-examined Mr. Ruddy.

Most Economic System

"You went to Hamilton and looked over Mr. Fearman's place. You did this without the intervention of anyone?"

"Yes, sir."

"You don't allow anyone to dictate to you as to how your business is conducted?"

"I do not."

"You believe in the present system of distribution?"

"It is the most economic. I believe that the naming of prices by a manufacturer, at which a line should be sold, is in the best interests of the consumer."

"You had no complaints from the Board of Commerce about your price list?"

"None whatever."

"You did submit price lists to the Board of Commerce, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"It is a fact that from time to time you meet Mr. Hutchinson of the St. Lawrence Starch Co. and discuss with him prices on what you might call parallel lines?"

"It is."

Prices 25 Per Cent. Lower

"How do prices compare to-day with January, 1920?"

"Prices to-day are 25 per cent. lower."

"Haven't you a certain amount of stock made up from high-priced materials?"

"Yes."

"The consumer is getting the benefit now, isn't he "

"Yes, we are following the market downward. We adjust our prices from day to day according to the market prices of necessary materials."

"What proportion of your output does the wholesaler handle?"

"About 25 per cent."

"From your experience in the starch business you have found that this is the only way to distribute profitably?"

"Yes."

"Have either of these associations, the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association or the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Association ever asked you to fix your prices?"

"No."

Confer on Prices

A. Hutchison, vice-president of the St. Lawrence Starch Co., was the next witness called.

"Do I understand that your price list is made up in conference with Mr. Ruddy?" the examination began.

"Yes. Our prices are similar to Mr. Ruddy's, as near as possible."

"Have you received a list of wholesalers?"

"I have it. It is very useful."

"Is the wholesaler essential to your business?"

"I would say wholesalers are absolutely essential to our business."

"Why?"

"We would have to go out and sell ourselves, if not for the wholesalers."

"If you were excluded from that service, would it be possible for you to carry on business?"

"It would be more difficult."

"What is a wholesale grocer?"

"A wholesaler is a man who sells goods in a wholesale way."

"Do you know the York Trading Co.?"

"Not personally."

"Did the York Trading Co. apply for goods?"

"That letter (referring to one in Mr. Roebuck's hand) would indicate that they did."

The letter was one dated January 7, 1920, from Fearman Bros. to St. Lawrence Starch Co.

"Did you make any inquiries about the kind of business Fearman is carrying on?"

"No. On account of fire we were not running around finding out if Fearman was a wholesaler or otherwise but later when I knew he was a member of the wholesalers' association I knew he was generally recognized as a wholesaler."

Mr. Hellmuth questioned witness re the fire and the company's inability to take care of more business.

"You knew, of course, when Mr. Fearman had become a member of the association he must be a wholesaler?"

"Yes."

"There is no obligation to hold with Mr. Ruddy's prices, is there?"

"Supposing we wanted to be unfair we couldn't be. The import duty from either England or United States makes it absolutely necessary for us to be honest."

"What would be the effect of the Canada people putting up their prices and you not?"

"We would have all the business."

"Could you fill the orders?"

"No."

"You don't meet purposely to fix prices?" Mr. Hellmuth asked.

"No."

Membership Not Essential

Archibald Hutchison, vice-president of the St. Lawrence Starch Co., was recalled to the witness stand when the court resumed on Thursday morning. Mr. Mackay in his cross-examination asked:

"Have you made membership in the wholesale grocers' association a condition necessary before you sell goods to a man?"

"No. As vice-president and general manager of the St. Lawrence Starch Co. I dictate its policy."

Mr. Hutchison in the course of his examination explained that there were three means of distribution, namely, direct, through the jobber and through specialty men. The wholesaler serves all over the country. He looked upon the wholesaler as the real means of reaching the retailer.

"Are there persons on your selling list who could not qualify for membership in the wholesalers' association?" Mr. Roebuck asked.

"Not to my knowledge."

"Are you selling to Harris, of Hamilton?"

"No."

"Are you selling to Morley?"

"No."

"You have said that there is no agreement between you and Mr. Ruddy. When you meet to discuss prices, and after you have your discussion, does Mr. Ruddy know what your prices will be, and do you know what his will be?"

"From my experience I know his costs are the same as mine."

"What was your attitude towards the York Trading Co.?"

"They were a small means of distribution. We did not need them, as we had already a number of distributors in Toronto."

"Was there anything in their organization that prevented you from selling them?"

"I have no knowledge of their organization."

In answer to a question Mr. Hutchison stated that the St. Lawrence Starch Co. is a privately owned company, operating under a Dominion charter, of which he was the largest shareholder.

Gillett Co. Agreements

George MacFarlane, general manager of the E. W. Gillett Co., was the next witness called. He was questioned regarding two agreements of the company. With these two agreements in operation, the retailer was bound to get his goods at the same price. In some instances a rebate rate is preferable because customers are more likely to live up to it.

"Are Medland Bros. on your list?"

"No. They have been on it."

"Why are they not on it?"

"Medland Bros. complained that a jobber had been delivering goods contrary to agreement. They were taken off the list at their own request."

"Have Medland Bros. applied recently?"

"The last time they sent an order they sent a marked cheque. It was not accepted because they were not on our jobbing list."

"Do you do business with the York Trading Co.?"

"No. We consider them retailers and not entitled to jobbing prices. Regarding Fearman Bros. we did not sell them prior to January 7, 1920."

"Could you carry on your business were you excluded from the wholesale grocers' distribution?"

"The present method is the most economic. We could carry on without them, but it would be much more difficult. We have always carried on through the wholesalers."

Sells Outside Association

"You have sold to a large number who have not been members of the association?" Mr. Hellmuth asked.

"Yes."

"And you have never been disciplined or dictated to by the association for so doing?"

"No."

"No threats were ever made if you continued to do so?"

"None whatever."

"We sell very little to the retail trade, but when we do, we sell at retail prices," witness replied to Mr. Hellmuth.

"But your freedom of action is absolute, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"You have pretty keen competition, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Your prices are guided by current competition?"

"Yes."

"In handling these agreements, your policy is not to have prices cut?"

"Yes. Wholesalers are not permitted to sell at different prices. It tends to stabilize values. The channel through which goods must reach the retailer must be an even one."

"You believe you have a right to do this?"

"Yes."

"You don't feel, in doing so, you are holding up the consumer?"

"Certainly not."

"You claim the absolute right to choose your distributing medium and also to control the sale to the retail trade?"

"Yes."

Bought From Wholesalers When Manufacturers Refused Orders

H. R. Axton, Manager of General Wholesalers Ltd., Tells of Buying From Other Wholesalers Not in the Association When Unable to Get Goods From Manufacturers

H. R. Axton, president and manager of General Wholesalers, Ltd., was the next witness.

"How are your profits distributed?" was the first question Mr. Roebuck asked Mr. Axton.

"There are none to distribute. We sell at cost plus overhead."

Mr. Axton told the court that the authorized capital of the company was $50,000, all paid up, and the shareholders are the United Farmers' Co-operative Co. The company, however, is run separately from the U.F.O. "In the wholesale business we figure about 10 per cent. over cost. We issue a triplicate invoice. In selling to the members of the U.F.O. we issue these invoices. The first sheet is shorter than the other and does not have our name. It is returned to the U.F.O. and stamped with their name and sent to the consumer. At the end of each week we send them an invoice for these goods less 10 per cent. We do not make any money on these sales to the U.F.O. but we make a profit on goods sold to other retailers."

"What is your turnover?"

"Last year it ran slightly over one million dollars. Sixty thousand dollars was in groceries."

"Did you ever apply to the E. W. Gillett Co. for goods?"

"Yes."

"What was the result?"

"They said that they would consider it."

"Have you got their goods?"

"Yes, we bought them from other wholesalers."

"On what terms?"

"On an entirely different basis, of course. The wholesaler on transactions of this kind receives a margin of 7 or 7½ per cent."

"How about the Canada Starch Co.?"

"We obtained their goods in the same way as we got Gillett's."

350 Other Customers

"How many customers have you?"

"About 350, exclusive of co-operative stores."

"Do you buy from W. C. Macdonald Reg.?"

"We also handle their goods through the wholesale on a 7½ per cent. basis."

"The greater portion of the stock of your company is held by the U.F.O.?" asked Mr. Mackay.

"Yes."

"As far as your company is concerned, it is practically controlled by forty stores?"

"Our orders come from one source, the central organization of the U.F.O. The money from these stores is paid into the central organiation. So far as the U.F.O. business is concerned it is done strictly on the cost of doing business. Theoretically there are no profits. Losses are taken care of in the overhead."

"You say there are 350 retail stores your customers?" Mr. Hellmuth began.

"Yes."

"You do not keep travellers for the country?"

"No."

"Therefore with the exception of the U.F.O. stores you have little distribution in the country?"

"Yes."

"Is the treatment accorded city stores the same as U.F.O. stores?"

"There is a slight percentage of difference."

"In favor of the U.F.O.?"

"Yes."

"Then you do believe in giving the U.F.O. an advantage?"

"Yes."

Class Legislation

"That is class legislation, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"You hope your organization will grow?"

"Yes."

"And as you grow this discrimination will grow?" continued Mr. Hellmuth.

"I don't know," replied the witness.

"Why do you show any difference?"

"The business outside the U.F.O. stores is small as yet."

"But the outside retailer does help to pay for distribution to the U.F.O.?"

"Yes."

"Is each manager in these stores a salaried or a commission man?"

"Salaried."

"Then he has no incentive to make sales?"

"That is up to the manager."

"The directors of the U.F.O. and the General Wholesalers, Ltd., are the same?"

"Yes."

"It really is the aggregation of retail stores that run General Wholesalers, Ltd.?"

"The retail stores are branches of General Wholesalers, Ltd."

Believes There is a More Direct Method of Trading

Robert Dowson, of the York Trading Co., Tells the Court the Reason for This Organization's Existence And Its Experience With Manufacturers

Robert Dowson, president of the York Trading Co., told Mr. Roebuck his firm was a wholesale grocery company incorporated in May, 1919. He said the company came into existence through a number of retailers realizing that they could for their own benefit band together. They found, he said, that some of the manufacturers were selling to the large retail stores.

"Hence for our self-preservation and mutual assistance, we formed this company," he said. "It was formed with a subscribed capital of $14,000. They did not sell to the consumer."

Appealed to Board of Commerce

The Friday morning session opened with Robert McKay, K.C., continuing to cross-examine Robert Dowson, president of the York Trading Co. Mr. Dowson stated that he had applied to both the cost of living committee of the Dominion House of Commons and to the Board of Commerce, complaining that certain firms refused to place the York Trading Co. on their selling list. This was in 1919.

"Has the evidence of the Board of Commerce been recorded?" asked Justice Orde.

"The York Trading Co. made application that they should be sold to on the same terms as wholesale grocers. The Board of Commerce went into the matter and disposed of it by giving a decision adverse to the York Trading Co. Is that correct, Mr. Dowson?" Mr. McKay asked.

"What brought the York Trading Co. into existence? Was it that you believed that some manufacturers were selling departmental stores at a lower price—were treating large retailers as though they were wholesalers? Is that right?" Mr. Hellmuth asked.

"Quite correct," said Mr. Dowson.

"Then if all retailers were on the same footing and manufacturers sold to them and lived up to it, there would be no reason for the York Trading Co.?"

"No."

"Have you evolved a better method of distribution than the one now existing?"

"By a more direct selling method," replied Mr. Dowson. "The principle has been demonstrated all over the world."

"What is this system of direct selling?"

"By eliminating a certain amount of the machinery. By doing away with travellers."

"Then how is the manufacturer going to deal with the small outlying districts?"

"By selling more direct."

"You mean to say that the manufacturer could go into every city, town, country cross road and sell their goods? They would have to send out armies to do it."

"Manufacturers in England are dealing more direct with retailers."

Dealing More Direct

"Is a manufacturer of baking powder going to deal direct with the retailer?

"Yes."

How is he going to get his goods to the small merchant?"

"I will answer that by asking another question. How do the mail order houses, much to our chagrin, deal directly with the outlying districts?" Mr. Dowson retorted.

"Do you want to eliminate the small retailer in these small country places in favor of the mail order houses in Toronto?" asked Mr. Hellmuth.

"No, sir. But there could be more direct trading."

"Then you suggest that the manufacturer should have his customer send his order, accompanied with the cash, direct to the manufacturer, and eliminate the wholesaler? Is it your theory that the total or partial elimination of the wholesale grocer should be effected?" asked Mr. Hellmuth.

Mr. Dowson objected to answer this, but finally replied, "No, sir."

"Then if the wholesaler is to remain he must have proper distribution to the retailer. I take it then, that according to your views there might be, in certain instances, more direct trading between the manufacturer and the retailer."

"I suppose it comes to that," replied the witness.

"Then who should be the judge?"

"The Board of Trade should decide matters of that kind."

"Did you say that certain manufacturers would not sell to the York Trading Co.? Who are they?"

Mr. Roebuck—"I object."

Mr. Hellmuth—"You have manufacturers who do sell to you, and you take advantage of every wholesale price?"

"Yes."

"You think that perfectly reasonable?"

"Yes."

"How many manufacturers serve you?"

"About half a dozen."

"I want the figures. How many manufacturers can you deal direct with?" asked Mr. Hellmuth, with some heat.

"Maybe over a dozen. I cannot tell without the list before me," replied the witness.

"Then the great bulk of your goods are bought from other dealers. Do you make any difference in prices to your customers when you get goods at wholesale prices?"

"We treat all goods on their merits. If we get a large amount of profit on one line, it helps to make up on others that are not so profitable."

"You get an article at retail price from the manufacturer, what price do you charge your customer for it?"

"There are few instances where we buy from the manufacturer and are treated as retailers. In cases like that we buy mostly from jobbers."

"Do you buy anything from manufacturers?"

"Yes, some."

"Then supposing you buy an article for one dollar, what would you charge the retailer for it?"

"I have not the books here and cannot tell you."

"Are you a practical man at all? Can you not name one article that you are familiar with that you can tell us what you paid for it—and what you would charge the retailer for it," insisted Mr. Hellmuth.

"I cannot remember," stated Mr. Dowson.

"We have to take it that you can't give us a single article. Is that a fair way of stating your attitude?"

"I can't remember."

"Can you get the figures?" Mr. Roebuck asked.

Mr. Hellmuth—"I do not want the figures. I want to test this witness' knowledge."

"You buy from certain manufacturers. Is it your desire to eliminate anyone?"

"No."

"Is it your desire to put restrictions on trade?"

"No."

"Is it your desire to say who shall deal and who shall not?"

"No."

Mr. Justice Orde questioned the witness regarding being compelled to sell to anyone.

"Do you mean to say, if I walked into your store you are compelled to sell me?" asked Mr. Justice Orde.

"Yes," replied the witness.

"That's a new theory," said Mr. Justice Orde.

Declares Chain Stores the Most Economic Solution

James Knowles, in Testifying in Wholesale Grocers' Case, Tells the Court His Opinion in Solving Distribution Problems

James Knowles, of the Wholesale Grocers, Ltd., said that they had been in business for one year and that the stockholders were for the most part retail grocers.

"What is your percentage of overhead?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"About 6 or 6½ per cent.," replied the witness.

"Do you maintain strict selling prices on proprietary articles?"

"We do. At least 90 per cent. of them."

"How about the other items?"

"We meet competition."

"You sell some articles below?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes."

"Is that profitable?"

"No," replied the witness, "but the wholesale trade make it a practice to give special prices to favored customers."

"Name some wholesaler who cuts the price on proprietary articles," asked Mr. Roebuck.

"I would prefer not to give names because it applies to 75 per cent. of the trade," he replied.

Mr. Justice Orde:

"How do you know 75 per cent. of the wholesale trade cuts prices?"

"Because I know the trade," replied the witness.

"That statement is made on hearsay and is not founded on facts," remarked Mr. McKay.

"I have seen it through the retail trade," stated Mr. Knowles.

"How do you know it?" insisted Mr. Justice Orde.

"I have seen those invoices," replied Mr. Knowles.

Justice Orde could not see how this could be taken as evidence without producing the invoices and stated, "These people should be subpoenaed to be present and bring the invoices."

"Can you give any evidence as to cuts made by the manufacturers who are defendants in this action?" Mr. Roebuck asked.

"I do not think any manufacturers cut prices."

"Can you give an instance where the resale price as set by the manufacturer has been cut by the wholesaler?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"I prefer not to betray confidences," replied the witness.

Chain Stores the Solution

"What is the most economical method of distribution?"

"Chain stores," replied the witness.

"By buying from wholesalers or manufacturers?"

"Some wholesalers and some manufacturers."

Cross-examined by Mr. McKay, Mr. Knowles stated that he had been a convert to the chain store method of distribution for the past four years.

"Have you ever investigated the history of any chain store?" asked Mr. McKay.

"No."

"Would you be surprised to hear that many of the best writers in trade magazines maintain that the chain store is very expensive?"

Mr. Knowles intimated that he would and claimed the chain store eliminates the credit and delivery systems which are very expensive.

"No doubt you are aware that the proportion of individual retail grocers in Buffalo as compared to chain stores is very small, and it is the same in Cleveland," said Mr. Knowles.

"Yes, and I know that a great many people in Buffalo and Cleveland believe that it has led to a very evil condition," said Mr. McKay, who pointed out that the chain store system had resulted in state interference on account of five firms getting control of the chain store system, and to a large extent cornering food.

Mr. McKay pointed out that most retail grocers lived in their places of business and that naturally they could run their business cheaper than under paid management.

"A matter of opinion," said Mr. Knowles.

"Your idea is that a paid manager is more efficient than the man who owns the business, and has his own money invested?" said Mr. McKay.

"Usually, yes."

"Are you going to eliminate the delivery system?" asked Mr. McKay.

"To a great extent."

"So if you can get business down to a system when everyone will carry and pay cash, goods are going to be bought cheaper."

"It is being done."

"Only because another business alongside is doing business on the old plan," said Mr. McKay.

"Do you think business as a whole is going to be run cheaper under a separate management, from a central organization?"

"Yes."

"Then where is your competition?" asked Mr. McKay.

"From departmental stores and other chain stores."

"How is the retailer to be assisted to hold his present position?"

"By being able to buy as cheap as chain stores," replied Mr. Knowles.

The Cheapest Method

Mr. Knowles stated that the cheapest method of distribution was to sell direct to the retail trade and eliminate travellers.

"Then you don't consider travellers necessary?"

"No, not in our business. We do not consider them at all necessary," said Mr. Knowles.

"Then who will take his place?"

"The mail and telegraph."

"You mean to say that the retail grocer is going to sit down and write out his order and send it in? How is he going to find out who is selling raisins and currants the cheapest?"

"By circulars issued by the wholesalers and sent through the mail," said the witness.

"Your theory is that all lines could be sold cheaper if the travellers were eliminated, but retain the wholesale houses?"

"Yes."

Mr. McKay then asked the witness if he intended to eliminate his travellers.

Mr. Knowles stated that they were an unnecessary expense but they were keeping them to establish the business but he did not consider them absolutely necessary.

"Any manufacturer ever refused to sell you goods?" Mr. McKay continued.

"Some have on the grounds that they had a sufficient number of distributors," said Mr. Knowles.

"Have you made any distribution of profits?"

"No, we have not, but we have declared a dividend."

Witness stated that their overhead was 6¼ per cent. but on some lines their profit was only 2 per cent. He admitted that if goods were sold at less than 6¼ per cent. it would be at a loss but that the amount would be made up other ways.

Credit or Cash System?

I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., asked the witness if the credit business could be changed to a cash business.

"It can be changed," replied Mr. Knowles.

"Do you mean to say that all the business of the world could be done on a cash basis?"

"Retail business."

"Why should not wholesalers do business for cash? Should manufacturers pay cash for raw material?"

"That is his option. It would obviously be the outcome."

"Then the whole business of the world would be done on a cash basis. Did it ever occur to you that the actual cash is a mere fraction of the amount of business transacted? Do you realize the fact that the world could not go on for one day without credit? Do you know that?"

Mr. Justice Orde: "We could go further and ask where all the money would come from?"

"Cash business is being done to-day," said Mr. Knowles.

"Do you not recognize that the business done to-day is on credit?"

"Not as much," said Mr. Knowles.

"More to-day than ever," said Mr. Hellmuth. "Doesn't the British Empire do business on credit?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Knowles.

"Isn't France doing more and more on the credit basis?"

"Yes."

"Don't you know lots of people can't pay cash until they get the money?"

"Yes. Lots of people get credit when they could pay cash," replied the witness.

"Could the unemployed get groceries if they had to pay cash?" continued Mr. Hellmuth.

"Yes, if they were thrifty and had saved up money," replied Mr. Knowles.

"Then if a man had been steadily employed and was suddenly taken ill without sufficient money he must either do without food or borrow money from the bank. Do you know of none that deserves credit?" asked Mr. Hellmuth.

"No," replied Mr. Knowles.

Wholesaler and Jobber One

W. F. Morley, a Toronto grocery jobber, in his evidence stated that there was no difference between a wholesaler and a jobber. He sells to the retailer and sometimes to wholesalers.

"Do you sell the consumer?" asked A. W. Roebuck.

"No."

"Sell hotels or restaurants?"

"Only one," replied Mr. Morley.

"Could you fill what is termed an opening order?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes, I would accept any opening order. There may be a few articles that I do not carry in stock but I could get them from other wholesalers," replied Mr. Morley.

Mr. Roebuck: "Are you a member of the Wholesale Grocers' Association?"

"No."

"Did you make application for membership?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes.

"At what time was it you made application for membership in the association and to whom?"

"Mr. Pyke, shortly after I went into business."

"What occurred after that?"

"I told Mr. Pyke that if I joined the association I wanted the same privileges as other members," replied Mr. Morley.

"Was anything said that would indicate what you meant?"

"No."

"Are listed goods being sold at the list price?"

"Listed goods have been cut more or less and to-day listed goods are cut more than ever," replied Mr. Morley.

"How about Gillett's goods?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Well, I wouldn't say Gillett," said the witness.

"Ever asked to attend a meeting of the association?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes, I was asked to attend an association meeting," replied the witness.

"Who else was there?"

"Mr. Kinnear, Mr. Eby, Mr. Hudson, Mr. Sloan and Mr. Pyke," said Mr. Morley.

"Was Mr. Pafford there?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"I don't think so," replied witness.

"What happened at the meeting?"

"Discussion on selling the York Trading Co. and the U.F.O.," replied the witness.

"Anything else?"

"Mr. Eby had a list of the members of the York Trading Co. and was rather surprised that this company had so many," replied Mr. Morley.

Mr. Roebuck asked the witness if he sold corn flakes and what was the percentage of profit. Witness replied that they cost $4.25 per case less 60 cents, which would be about 14 per cent. Witness replied that he knew of some that were sold for $3.50 per case and that if a man was to buy 150 cases and paid for them in ten days, he would sell them for 2½ or 3 per cent. in order to compete with some of the other wholesalers.

"Do you know of your own knowledge where any cut that you have given retailers has been passed on to the consumer?"

"There is no doubt that some retailers would not, but there are others that would," replied Mr. Morley.

"Do you handle Gillett's goods?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Occasionally."

Turnover of $950,000

"What was your turnover last year?"

"$950,000," replied the witness.

"What was your cost of doing business?"

"Well, I haven't figured it out," replied the witness, "but I should say 3½ per cent."

"Your salary figured in this 3½ per cent.?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes," replied Mr. Morley, "and it is very respectable."

"Will you tell us how you do this business?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"By circulars," replied Mr. Morley.

"Any travellers?"

"No, but I sometimes travel myself."

"Then your sole method of getting business is through these circulars?" said Mr. Roebuck.

"Yes."

Mr. Morley stated that he carried a stock of $65,000 but it was not all in one place. He has three warehouses and orders are filled from them.

"If manufacturers refused to sell you, what would happen to your business?"

"Forced to go out of business," replied the witness.

"Supposing one-third were to refuse to sell you, what would happen?"

"It would be very serious," admitted the witness.

"Is there any change in so far as the association is concerned?" asked Mr. Roebuck.

"Well, they are not dangerous," replied Mr. Morley, "they are very quiet this last year. As tame as pussy cats."

"That is a very interesting answer. If there is no danger from the association why does the Attorney-General want an injunction?" said Mr. Justice Orde.

"Even if Mr. Morley is able to survive this competition, there are others who cannot and I submit that they should not be subjected to the strain," replied Mr. Roebuck.

Mr. Morley admitted that the largest profits are made on goods that are not listed, such as rice and tapioca. He stated that on listed goods the price was set by the manufacturer, but on the other lines he watched the markets carefully and bought according to market conditions.

Sells 500 Cases of Canned Goods

A Merchant Who Talks Quantity Sales Instead of Single Cans, Sold the Above Number of Cases in a Period of Five Weeks—Customers Use More When They Have a Quantity on Hand.

A MERCHANT in a midwestern Ontario city sold five hundred cases of canned vegetables during a period extending over just five weeks.

How?

Simply by talking quantity lots instead of the usual single can. This merchant figured that it cost no more to sell a dozen cans, or a case of canned goods, to one person than it did to sell one single can. The housewife, too, will use more, when there are a number of cans in the house. He therefore laid his selling plans accordingly, reducing the price a trifle and advertising, by newspaper and window displays, "to buy a case of canned vegetables."

Customers Use More

Some merchants might say that if it is necessary to reduce the price of an article in order to sell a quantity, it is better not to have a large turnover. This merchant did not figure that way. He figured his profit on turnover and proved that his theory was correct. His profit on the five hundred cases in five weeks' selling campaign was as large as he would ordinarily make in spreading the same number of cases over a period of six months, or that would be the length of time it would take to sell that number by the usual method of selling, one or two cans at a time. Not only that, but he found that his customers were using more, because it is human nature to use more when there are quantities around.

Pecks Instead of Pounds

During last spring when new potatoes were just arriving from the south, a merchant planned to sell a large quantity. His neighbors were also handling new potatoes and perhaps selling quite a lot by the usual method of placing a basketful at the front door and marking them up at so much a pound or a quart. This other merchant not being satisfied with just an ordinary turnover, decided to break away from the regular routine of selling new potatoes by the pound. He purchased twenty-five barrels, getting as an inducement 50 cents less per barrel on the regular purchase price by buying in that quantity. He dumped some five or six barrels of potatoes in one window, which made a striking exhibit. A price card was placed in the window with the price at so much a peck. The result was that every person bought a peck, whereas if this merchant had talked of pounds, his individual sales would have been very small. This merchant kept this up for a period of ten weeks and his weekly sales averaged twenty-two barrels.

The following autumn this merchant used this same idea with apples, only in the case of apples he marked them up at so much a box.

The experience of these merchants brings home the lesson that one of the surest ways to quicken the readjustment process, and to again bring confidence to the buyers, is to sell goods, placing them before the public in such an attractive manner, that the customers will be forced to take notice. Talk dozens and bushels instead of the usual single can or measure. It may be a little harder to do this to-day than it was a year ago, when prices were advancing, but if the merchant puts force and enthusiasm into his selling arguments, pointing out the advantage of buying in quantities, the saving a certain sum on the transaction as well as the convenience and satisfaction there is in having a supply in the house, he will inevitably reap his reward.

Recently the writer had occasion to visit some Ontario towns and during the trip got into conversation with a fellow-traveller who said that he had purchased a case of a certain brand of canned soup. He had no intention of buying it when he went into the store, but noticing a goodly pile on display, casually inquired the price of a case. The merchant waxed enthusiastic over the quality and in consequence a sale was made. When the traveller arrived home that evening his wife told him that he had been foolish in buying that case of soup. A few days later, however, this opinion was considerably altered when some friends unexpectedly arrived for dinner. The stores not being handy, the canned soup was called into use and the reputation of the house was saved. Since then this man said that he has purchased several cases of different kinds of canned vegetables. Do you get the idea?

Selling Whole Hams

Another merchant put an unique display in the window. In the centre of the window was a frying pan in which were several slices of ham. At one side was the balance of the ham from which the slices were cut. Arranged around were several whole hams neatly tied up. Cards were used urging customers to buy a whole ham and save money. This merchant said the display was a wonderful success and that more whole hams were sold the week of the display than they would ordinarily sell in a month.

Cuban Sugar Commission Now in Operation

Cuban Sugar Market Strong—Balance of Cuban Crop Under Control of Commission—Refined Sugar Firm at Present Prices

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—(Special.)—The prospects for a firm and stronger sugar market are more evident than ever this week. In view of the declining market for raw sugar and the acute financial state of Cuba, a Cuban commission has been formed and the sugar producers in that country have pooled all their supplies to be controlled by the aforementioned commission. For a few days prior to the 21st of February the raw sugar market declined slightly on account of several producers putting their raws on the market in an effort to get their money out of their sugar immediately and to avoid pooling their supplies. This did not last long, for on Monday the market firmed up to the price set by the commission. This will at least guarantee a steady market for some time, but it is doubtful whether or not the commission will be able to control the raw sugar market. It is simply an effort on the part of Cuban growers to stabilize the market and get a better price than they have been able to secure during the last few months. Most Canadian refiners, however, are not refining from day to day what they are buying, but have supplies on hand bought previously and at a higher price than is now quoted by the raw sugar market. For this reason there is not likely to be any immediate effect of the commission in Canada, but it will be felt by the American refiners, who are buying and refining almost directly from the raw sugar market. From this it is safe to conclude that refined sugar in Canada will at least be strong at prices now quoted and there is no doubt that this is a healthy condition of affairs both from the refiners' standpoint and from the standpoint of the retail merchant.

Aiming at a Welfare Fund to Protect the Merchant

It was decided at the Retailers' Vancouver Convention last summer that the time had arrived when, in the interests of the retail merchants of Canada, greater assistance was required to fight some of the battles of the R. M. A. To cite one instance: During the fight over the Board of Commerce it required the sum of $1,000 to have the case of the retailers prepared and presented. The decision to go ahead with the case had to be made in a hurry, and had to be made without seeing the money actually in sight. There have been many similar instances in the history of the R. M. A. during the last twenty-five years. Irreparable harm might be done to the cause of retail merchants throughout the country if provision is not made to have legislation watched very carefully and all the interests of the R. M. A. safeguarded. It is beyond the present power of the executive officers to do this work with the money at their disposal; the membership fee is not yet sufficient to cover necessary and advisable expenditures.

Consequently, a Welfare Fund is being solicited from merchants all over Canada. Committees are being, or have been, appointed in the several provinces and in several of the large cities whose business it is to canvass the retail trade. There is nothing obligatory about helping with this fund, but the officers of the association, both Dominion and Provincial, all feel that it will commend itself to the judgment and the generosity of the retail merchants of Canada.

BELIEVES THE TIME OPPORTUNE TO SELL "MADE IN CANADA" GOODS

The Editor, Canadian Grocer,—

Is the time not opportune to start a campaign for "Made in Canada" goods? The Americans are trying to cripple us by endeavoring to pass the Fordney Tariff, and the Fordney Tariff certainly does not look like a friendly act.

By "Made in Canada" I mean goods manufactured by Canadian workmen and financed by Canadian capital (or British capital). American goods may be manufactured in a branch factory in Canada, but even though they are, they are still American goods, and before they could be classed as Canadian, and before Canadians should buy any more of their goods, at least 51 per cent. of the capital stock of the company should be held by Canadians, and they should also declare themselves publicly as being opposed to the Fordney Tariff, and should use their influence at Washington to have the bill withdrawn.

If Canadian goods are not available, buy British goods and our money will soon be on a par with American.

The Canadian workmen who are working in branch factories of American firms will not suffer as they will then be required by Canadian firms.

Thanking you in advance for taking up so much of your valuable space, I remain,

A LONDON GROCER.

London, Feb. 2, 1921.

Editor's Note.—The point should always be kept in mind that quality and price are dominant factors in the buying and selling of an article. When a Canadian manufactured product possesses these two qualifications and they are made sufficiently well known in the proper channels, there is little need for worry.

In connection with Dollar Day at St. Marys this week the local grocers report a splendid turnover. The windows of J. P. Rogers & Co., L. H. Reesor and W. A. Butcher contained much to interest the thousands of farmers and their wives who came in by motor and train and many of them took home large supplies of merchandise.

According to investigations carried out by the Japanese Department of Agriculture and Commerce there were 994 houses engaged in the manufacture of vegetable wax at the end of 1919. The amount of crude and refined wax manufactured during 1919 totalled 1,581,494 kwamme valued at 1,483,129 yen, respectively showing a decrease of 39 and 20 per cent. compared with 1918. The decreased production of vegetable wax is believed to be due to the falling off in the export trade since the conclusion of the war.

Will Erect New Type Pure Food Building

Decision Arrived at Between Food Products Association and C.N.E. Board—To Be Ready for This Year's Exhibition—First of Its Type To Be Built in America

TORONTO, Feb. 24 (Special).—At a well-attended and representative meeting of the Food Products Association held jointly with the board of directors of the Canadian National Exhibition on Thursday last, an agreement was arrived at in connection with the type of new pure food building to be erected this year on the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition. It is now up to the Food Products Association to secure contracts from food exhibitors for space in the new building. When this has been done the city of Toronto will call for tenders and the erection will commence as soon after that as possible. At the joint meeting on Thursday, G. T. Irving, vice-president of the Canadian National Exhibition, presided. John G. Kent, manager, and a large number of the directors were present. The new building will be built after the model described in Canadian Grocer some weeks ago with some improvements suggested by the Food Products Association. The interior columns and entrances will be constructed of cream colored artificial stone. A false ceiling with an air space above to prevent the heat of the sun penetrating through the roof will be provided for if found necessary.

Open-Air Courtyards

One of the features of the building will be the nine courtyards. These are open air spaces inside the structure. The architects point out these will do away with the ventilation problem and will always mean that there will be plenty of fresh air through the building so that visitors will not have to go outside for it. They will be attractive in appearance with grass plots and fountains, clusters of electric lights, etc. The majority of the exhibit spaces will face these courtyards.

The accompanying illustrations will help the reader to visualize the interior and exterior of the building.

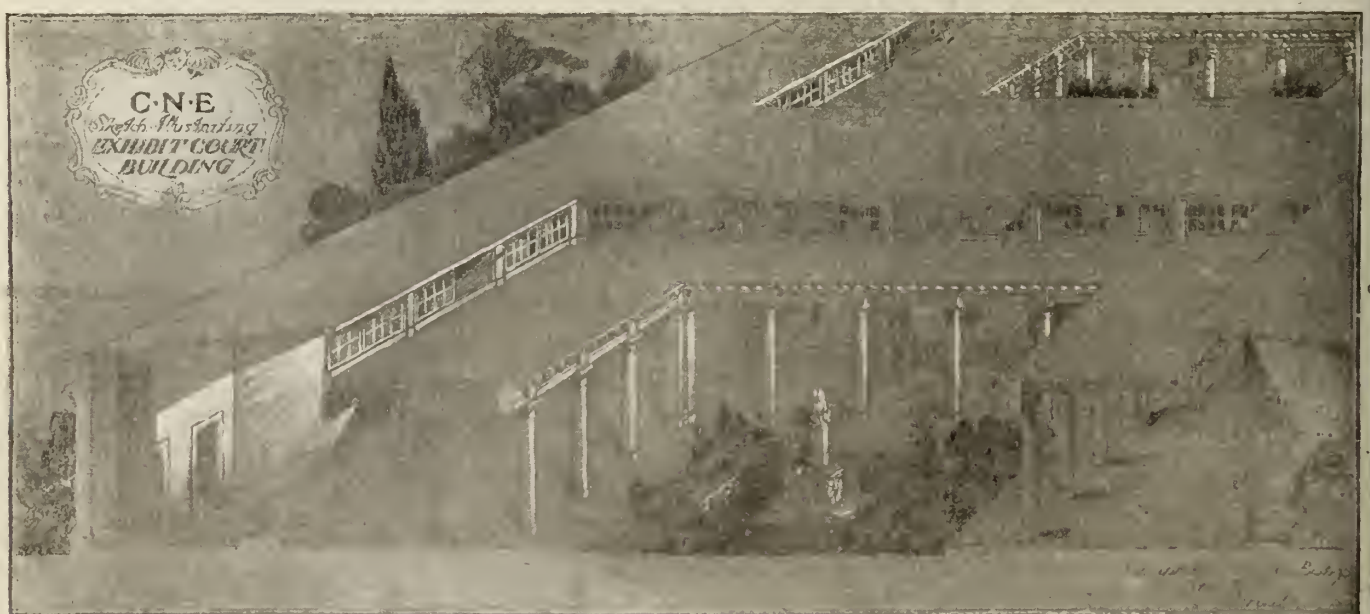
The approximate cost of the new building is $150,000 based on exhibit space of about 30,000 square feet. It was estimated by the city architect that the cost of the old type building with a similar amount of exhibit space would be approximately $275,000. It was felt that the new building, being an entirely new model, would be a great attraction and was finally decided on. The motion to this effect was made by H. C. Scully, of the Christie, Brown Company, and seconded by Thomas Shortiss, of the Quaker Candy Company. There will be trunk lines for electricity, gas, water and waste to each booth. The exhibitors erect their own booths and make their own connections. The unit of exhibit space is 12 feet by 16 feet in depth. Exhibitors may reserve two or more of these units as they desire. The 16-foot depth allows for a false wall at the rear of the building to permit of storage space, which has always been lacking in the manufacturers' building.

The following manufacturers were present at the meeting: H. N. Cowan, the Cowan Co.; James Wagstaffe, Wagstaffe, Ltd., Hamilton; Wm. H. Dunn, the Borden Co., Montreal; W. G. Patrick, W. G. Patrick & Co.; H. C. Scully, Christie, Brown Co.; M. Lennox, Gunns, Ltd.; Thomas Shortiss, Quaker Candy Co.; J. G. Harris, Langley, Harris & Co.; S. H. Moore and W. J. Briggar, T. Upton Co., Hamilton; Charles Miller, Red Rose Tea Co.; Dr. L. E. Pollock, City Dairy Co.; J. E. A. Kennedy and W. H. Hamilton, Wm. Paterson, Ltd., Brantford; Gerald Larkin, Salada Tea Co.; J. O. Elton, of Thos. J. Lipton; R. H. A. Sim, Swift Canadian Co.; Mr. Burbidge, Wm. Davies Co.; Mr. Scott, J. H. Wethey Co., St. Catharines; Alan F. Telfer, Telfer Bros.; W. George Varty, Walter Lowney Co. of Canada, Montreal; C. H. Ralph, the Bowes Co.; C. S. Anger, H. J. Heinz Co.; Mr. Levis, Canadian Milk Products Co.; R. P. Smith, Wm. Neilson, Ltd.; Harry Horne, Harry Horne Co.; Wm. Bowman, Holbrook's, Ltd.; H. C. Mendoza, Oliver Lee, Ltd.; Mr. Huycke, Canadian Maple Products, and the T. A. Lytle Co.

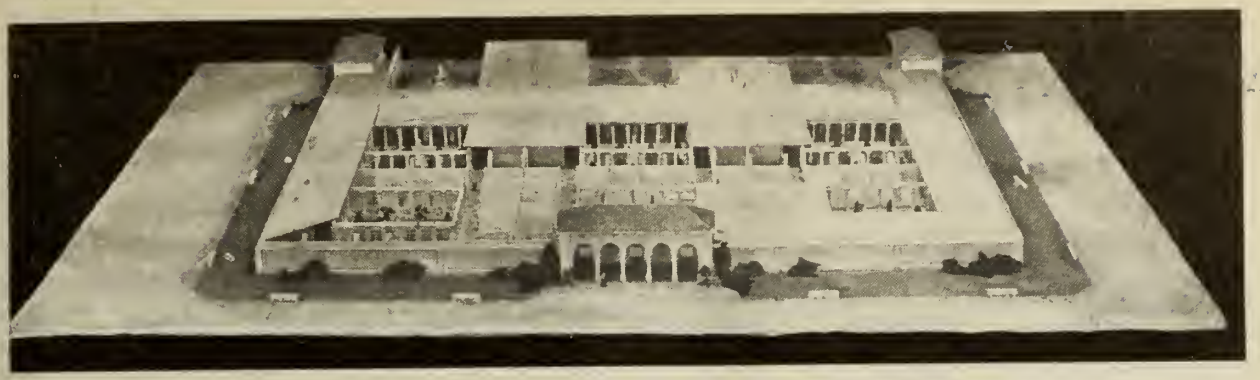
One-Third the Space Spoken for

The above firms were canvassed at the meeting to get an idea of the quantity of space they would require and 26 of them reserved approximately 10,000 square feet.

While the Food Products Association is securing contracts for the space, these will be passed over to the manager of the exhibition with whom the location of the exhibit will be taken up by each individual manufacturer.



This cut illustrates cross section of new Pure Food Building. One of the open-air courtyards is in the foreground. The pillars are shown between which visitors may walk to view the various exhibits. There will be nine of these courtyards. Decorative minarets on the top will give the building a more attractive appearance.



Above is from a photograph of the plaster paris model of the new Pure Food Building to be erected this year on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds. Part of the roof was taken off so that the location and arrangement of exhibit spaces may be seen. The cost is estimated at $150,000. Chapman, Oxley & Bishop are the architects.

Rain Does Much Damage to Rice

J. Howard O'Loane, of O'Loane Kiely Co., Ltd., Vancouver, Talks to Canadian Grocer on Crop Conditions in California

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 22.—J. Howard O'Loane, of O'Loane, Kiely Co., Ltd., this city, has returned after a visit to the firm's branches down the coast. Asked regarding trade conditions to the south, Mr. O'Loane said, "I was astonished to see the acres and acres of rice standing in the fields—fields too wet to permit of harvesting. In other fields the rice had been stooked, but not gathered. Even the rice that is harvested shows traces of rain damage. Prices on canned fruits are very unsettled. The prices at which various packs can be bought are not based on the market, or cost of production, but on how badly the owner needs the money.

"Raisins are in the best shape of any dried fruit. The home brew epidemic is credited with the way the price has been maintained in raisins. There is a big carry over in prunes. The steady rains are thought by some authorities to ensure big crops of prunes next year, too, and low prices are forecast. Peaches are long on the standard variety."

While many have been badly hit, especially in Oriental stocks, business is on the mend, says this merchant, and as values become deflated, there is a more general disposition to resume business.

New Groceteria Is Opened in Vancouver, B.C.

Vancouver (Special).—David Spencer & Co., Ltd., have opened their groceteria here. The first Saturday, the 12th, crowded the floor of the department to the limit. The same arrangement as in the Victoria store, described recently in Canadian Grocer, obtains in the Vancouver store. All articles are plainly marked with the price, as well as a large price ticket on each bin. The customer's basket is presented at a long counter for checking and wrapping; the bill, computed on an adding machine by items, is given to the customer. After paying at the cashier's desk, each customer presents his stub at the wrapping counter and receives the wrapped parcel.

Prices at Low Levels

The prices on many articles were noted to be below the present low level in Vancouver. Some grocers from the outskirts bought large orders for resale, stating that the prices were lower than wholesale. While some retail grocers deplore the practice of a retailer purchasing from a big competitor, and thus assisting him to buy more at quantity prices, others maintain that their business is "upon such trying times" that they need to buy where they can save a few cents, because of immediate need. Of course, that is exactly what their customers are also doing, buying where they can save a few cents on each item.

This is the second of the three big departmental stores to enter the groceteria field in Vancouver, and the small retailers are much perturbed.

Makes Pillars Attractive in A Novel Way

Montreal, Feb. 22.—A Montreal grocer has adopted a novel and attractive way of covering up what would otherwise be, to say the least, very unattractive pillars. At each side of both windows of a local grocery store stand out an iron pillar. They detract to some extent from the appearance of the window. Since these pillars could not be removed, the grocer obtained from a local manufacturing concern a number of their labels which they use on their canned goods. These labels were pasted on each of the pillars so that now it appears that four high columns of canned goods support the roof of the store. This idea of decorating the pillars is not only attractive but it is a good advertising scheme, both for the grocer and for the manufacturer whose labels are used. The size of the pillar to be covered will determine what is the best label to be used. In the case of this Montreal grocer the labels are so well placed on the pillar that it is very difficult to tell with the eye whether the roof is supported by a column of canned goods or by a pillar.

This method of using labels might be adopted in many places in the store. In some cases where displays are necessary labels might be substituted and give the appearance of a display of the goods themselves. In such cases the merchant will find the manufacturer is only too glad to supply the required number of labels to accomplish this purpose.

CATSUP DISPLAY IS REALIZING A STEADY TURNOVER

Scandrett Bros., of London, Ont., are featuring this week a display of catsup in one of their show windows. Bottles to sell at 20 cents each are very attractively arranged. In an adjoining window is a display of cans of corn, offered at two for 25 cents. Special attention is directed in both windows to the prices and that they carry a general appeal to shoppers is shown by the steady turnover.

Herbert C. Jay, grocer, Strathroy, Ont., was elected a member of the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce at the annual meeting last week.

PROBLEM OF TAXATION

WITH the date of the annual federal budget approaching, the whole problem of taxation is in the minds of business men and investors. And it may be taken for granted that Sir Henry Drayton echoed the spirit of the people when he stated, as his opinion that Canadians recognizing the necessity of raising government revenue, were prepared to pay such taxation as was necessary. While the imperative necessity of raising government funds is generally recognized, it is also asserted that the present system of taxation is unjust.

Economists and business authorities are agreed that the Business Profits Tax must be abolished. The idea of the tax as adopted in all countries was to apply extra profits derived from business increases due to war to the purpose of paying for the war. It was an erroneous system of taxation fastened on the country under the exigencies of war pressure.

While a cancellation of the income tax system is hardly to be expected nor even wanted at this time by reasonably minded observers, a revision of the conditions and method of application is insistently needed.

William C. Cornwell, editor of Bache Review, and an advocator of turnover tax, expresses the situation in the United States as follows. His view applies with equal force to Canada:

"There is but one way out; one source untapped; one reservoir with almost unlimited supply; one method, simple, smooth-working, practicable and businesslike, instantly available, easy and economically administered —the Tax on Turnover—which the business of the country is rising in its wrath to demand, and which will be enacted in response to that demand because it will inestimably benefit every citizen of every class."

THE FARMER AND THE MIDDLEMAN

THE Western Grain Growers' organizations have made a success of their ventures in handling wheat, says The Financial Post. Good. Co-operation, when it leads to real benefits to a section of the community, is to be encouraged. But it does not follow that the same success can be attained in other fields of business. The Western Grain Growers have sustained losses of a large portion of their grain-carrying profits in the past couple of years in competing with the establishment of implement houses and lumber yards and in Ontario the U. F. O. has had experiences with sugar and some other commodities which have destroyed some illusions as to the simplicities of merchandising.

In Ontario the appointment of a trained provision expert at a big salary indicates recognition that there can be no successful departure from the laws and rules evolved out of many years of commercial experience. In Western Canada the conclusion has been reached that fine theories as regards the marketing of lumber will have to be discarded in favor of the system of the established lumber companies. We find President Hon. T. A. Crerar, of the U.G.G., in his annual report, saying:

"It may as well be admitted that this method of operation offers very little promise of success, and your Board is now inclined to the view that it will be necessary for the Company to establish a number of retail yards at suitable points where sufficient promise of success offers."

Let us here repeat what we have previously said that co-operative effort is justified when it can stand on its own feet and fairly compete with private enterprise. But experience in highly specialized business should be a warning that great care should be exercised in running credits and other ventures in the field of finance, especially if it is proposed to reap benefits for one section of the community at the expense of another through class legislation.

SHATTERED almost in its inception, the United States Government employees' store scheme, which was expected to make the retail merchant superfluous to the army of Government clerks in Washington, D.C., already has begun to disintegrate. Its affairs, which have been going from bad to worse, have now reached the verge of a smash, in which the "co-oppers" face the necessity of putting up out of their own pockets a deficit of more than $8,000. Costs money to learn how to run a retail business.

Do Certain Prices Leave a Profit?

Foresight or Hindsight in Coping With Conditions?—Here Is An Example of Hindsight From an Eastern Ontario Merchant.

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

HERE is an example of hindsight from an Eastern Ontario merchant:

Dear Sir:—Here is a matter that has been a scourge each Christmas for the past eleven years. I don't know how long before that as I was not in business before then. This is the cutting of prices on Christmas groceries, such as currants, raisins, peels, candies, nuts, in fact all lines for which there is a big demand at that season. Every year in this town some fool starts the thing and sells these lines at and below what they cost wholesale Result is we all have to follow suit or lose our customers. Instead of making a good profit out of these goods at a time when everyone must have them, we spend the whole month working for the benefit of the public. There is no need of price cutting when everybody needs a thing. If some must do it in order to give vent to their disposition trying to rob their brother grocers of their customers, why not leave it until after new year when trade is liable to be dull?"

I call that hindsight because this man has had this experience for eleven years and now comes in with the proposal that "somebody do something about it" when we must wait a year to make our work effective. But let's examine a bit.

Every season in practically every community such conditions exist. Yet in every such community you will find certain merchants who are uninfluenced by it and go their way serenely making their own prices, serving their own customers. It is interesting to note that such merchants are the ones who make money. This because they compete on things other than price—goods, qualities, their kind of service—and they get away with it. This has always been so. It will always be so except in the few and far between places where all merchants know enough not to sell for less than they can afford to serve.

But, while I am flattered by the implication that I can do a lot toward changing things, I cannot see much that I can do. Some of those recreant grocers may see my stuff and those who see this may be led thereby to mend their ways. But the real work is up to my friendly correspondent—he is the somebody who must do something if he wants it done—and he must DO IT NOW.

Look Ahead a Year

You must follow out the plan of the politicians. You must prepare to carry the next election the minute this one is closed. You must prepare to forestall such conditions now, lest they recur next Christmas. How? Simple enough. You must investigate what it costs to handle goods in your town. Get it down pat so that you can show anybody that, say, the average expense of operation is 15 per cent.; that sugar, flour, butter, eggs, cereals, oil and gasoline, lard, compound and side meat, and many other heavy staples, must be handled for 5, 6, 7 to 10 per cent.—all less than the average cost of doing business; that, therefore, the luxuries, the semi-luxuries, the finer goods, must bear four classes of burden. They must bear expense, any special shrinkage characteristic of them, a loading to offset the low-end merchandise, and a profit. Christmas goods are high-grade merchandise, largely partaking of the luxury character. So this reasoning applies specifically to those goods.

When you have tabulated some of your figures so you know exactly what you are talking about, get the facts down by going over them yourself, so you can talk of them readily and clearly. Then take the dull days that are now upon us and go out to visit your neighbors. Let us say you visit Neighbor Spalding—I do not know whether that is his name or not, but let us play it is. Spalding is located on the next corner. You have seen the outside of his store many times as you passed and glanced at it sideways. He has seen your store the same way—for neither of you ever has turned frankly toward the other's window and taken a good look, open and above board. So neither of you know much about the inside of the other's store—and of course neither knows anything at all about the real man inside the other's exterior Each may wear horns for all the other knows—dare say he does, in fact!

Frank Friendliness Beginning of Co-operation

Well, take a chance. Determine to beard the devil in his den and gird up your loins for the fray! Go to the store and enter—just like that!—without hesitancy. Go in as if you belonged inside. Spalding may be a trifle startled. He may look up doubtfully, peer out under his glasses, hesitate a bit to see whether you are in your right mind and to give you a chance to retreat. But don't you care! Look back at him calmly and smile frankly—yes, smile right out at him, nod and go forward. Say to him:

"Neighbor Spalding, it has seemed to me for a long time that we ought to know each other better. I feel that maybe it is my fault that we do not, and decided I'd take time during these slow days to get acquainted with you. Fine winter we're having! You know, I never saw the inside of this store before. Those are dandy windows you have—wish I had some as good. Do you like that style of meat slicer? I've been thinking of changing mine."

So, not too fast, a word or two here and there, break the ice and get to know that neighbor of yours. Proceed to see Jenkins and Holloway the same day, and maybe say to them, or one of them, "It seems to me that we should all know each other—I confess I get plumb lonesome living beside so many others in the same line and not knowing one of them."

Say not a word about prices or Christmas things! Not on your life! No. You cannot tell what you may uncover if you do—probably the opinion that it was you who started the trouble, that you did not follow but led the dance to death of profits—and if you do that you will spill all the beans at once. No; get acquainted That is your one mission now. Invite them all to return the call. Maybe one will, maybe none. Never mind. Visit again and ask them again—and keep it up with good nature and good temper always.

Be frank in your approval of anything you see in the other stores, or ask how this or that works. Then first thing you know one will open up and relate to you the trouble he has had with this or that. You can help him by suggestion or by telling some similar experience of your own. Then the door toward frank discussion of mutual problems is open a tiny crack and can be forced ajar if you handle things right.

Never criticize anybody. Carry no tales. Just be frankly a good fellow and good friend all round.

Let's Quit Being Fools

After a month or two of this sort of thing, maybe you can say to one of them that you think it is about time "we merchants quit being fools about the cost of our labor and value of our service and began to get what our work is worth." Your listener will ask what you are driving at. Then you can say:

"This: I have just been looking over some of my expense accounts and cost and I have drawn up these figures. I find it costs 15 per cent. to do business on the average and that when you take out the handling charges against the low-end goods, the remainder has got to yield us as near to 25 per cent on the average as possible. That means that some things have to pay us 27½ per cent. and even 30 per cent. to make us any money!

MONTREAL GROCER GIVES SCARE TO THREE BURGLARS

Montreal, Feb. 23.—J. E. Harel, grocer, 92 Forfar street, Montreal, scared away three burglars and captured the fourth on Saturday evening last. The prisoner gave his name as Nick Scully, and address 36 Demontigny street east, Montreal.

According to the report made to the police, of the Grand Trunk street station, Harel was counting money in his shop when four men, one of whom was masked and carried a revolver, entered. The latter told Harel to hold up his hands. Instead of doing this, Harel drew a revolver from underneath the counter and pointed it at the men, who fled. The masked man dropped his own gun at the door. Harel rushed him and caught him outside the door. A clerk telephoned for the police and the prisoner was taken to the station.

ADDRESSES STRATFORD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Board of the Retailers' Association, Ottawa, recently addressed a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of Stratford, Ont. In the course of a review of present-day conditions he denounced socialism, Bolshevism, Kaiserism, etc., in no uncertain terms. He also declared that approximately three-quarters of the capital invested in Canada was in the retail trade, and that in spite of the cry to remove the middleman, "we are here to stay."

DO CERTAIN PRICES LEAVE A PROFIT?

"Butter, eggs, flours, sugar—those are things we cannot change, because custom has decreed that they must be sold on the slightest margin; but figs, raisins, canned salmon—in fact, all canned goods—must run us up as much above 20 per cent. on the sale price as possible. That is what I mean when I say I think we should study our costs and expenses and get over this idea of working for nothing and boarding ourselves!"

Don't look for any miracles. They have gone out of fashion in the grocery business. Just rely on the slow but sure working of friendly suggestion. And you can put this across provided you are genuinely friendly. If in your heart you want the listener to fail, you will not effect what you seek to put over. If you feel real desire to help the other fellow, you will succeed, for you will convince him, and then in helping him you help yourself!

Next Season Will Take Care of Itself

Under this system you will never have to mention any special thing. You will build co-operation on the foundation of mutual confidence and understanding. Soon you will find that you can ring up your neighbors and ask them what they are getting on this or that or what they expect to sell those new dates for. Then if they come back, as they likely will, by saying they are not sure, you can tell them how you have figured it and how they must bring so much to make any profit — shrinkage considered! Invite them to ring you for any information at any time. Keep it up! Do not get discouraged if the response is slow. Remember you have been looking sideways at each other a long time and confidence does not grow in a night. So KEEP IT UP!

Try this. Try it earnestly. See if it does not work. If you do this you will lay the foundation for a strong grocers' association in your town and when you have that, you will carry on this work of education on broad lines. For the cure for trade evils is not the calling of each other fools, but in learning the rudiments yourself and then unselfishly teaching them to your neighbors. Good Samaritanism pays!

Old Established Grocery Firm Is Going Out of Business

Wholesale and Retail House of M. and H. Gallagher, in Business for 54 Years in St. John, N.B., Will Be Dissolved on April First.

ST. JOHN, N.B., February 24.—(Special).—After being in business for fifty-four years here, the wholesale and retail grocery firm of M. & H. Gallagher will be dissolved on April 1. The existing stock is now being disposed of.

The business was initiated in 1867 by Michael and Henry Gallagher, young men who resided with the parents on a farm about thirteen miles from St. John. Two years later they engaged a lad, Michael Ryan, to assist them in the store. He was taken into the partnership in 1880 and is one of the two surviving members of the firm, Michael Gallagher having died in 1906.

Many Changes in Trade

Mr. Ryan, speaking to a representative of Canadian Grocer this week, said that he had seen many changes in the grocery business in the city. In the early days wines and liquors were included among the stock in trade, but in 1877 a provincial act prohibited the sale of liquors in grocery stores, and a separate shop was opened, connected with the grocery section by a doorway. About ten years ago a further law prohibited any connection between the shops and the doorway was closed.

From the Floor to Shelves

"We have seen the grocery business move from the floor to the shelves," Mr. Ryan said, remarking on the increase in the number of package goods now being displayed. They, having catered to a great extent to a rural population, were in a position to obtain liberal supplies of fresh eggs and butter in exchange for other goods and even to the present time, a great many of the local citizens depend on this firm for supplies for these commodities.

Paper Prices Rise While Cost of Living Declines

New York.—While the cost of living is sagging, and the cost of production in most lines of business is dropping, American publishers meet with still further price increases.

Newsprint paper contracts for the first quarter of 1921 call for $6.50 per hundredweight. This is the highest figure print paper ever has been sold by contract. The "spot" market price is considerably higher.

The largest price increase in history was scored during 1920, and is reflected in the $6.50 contract price American and Canadian paper mills are charging for January, February and March, 1921.

Before 1916 the price of newsprint maintained an almost even level at between $1.92 and $2.00. It did not pass the latter figure until July, 1916, when it began a steady climb, reaching $3.11 in April, 1917. About January, 1918, there was a slight drop, but by the end of the year the price had gone up to $3.73.

The first $4.00 contract paper price was reached in December, 1919.

In the latter part of 1920, when all other prices were starting downward print paper continued upward, going to $5.66 in November. The 1921 contract price (for January, February and March) is $6.50. This is 50 per cent. higher than the January, 1920, price; it is 100 per cent. higher than the 1918 average price, and is more than 200 per cent. higher than print paper ever sold at, under contract, before the war.

Plans of organization with other associations in the province were submitted by a special committee on organization and discussed by the meeting. A committee was struck off to meet with the United Farmers of Manitoba and the Grain Growers to plan co-operation in collective buying, and affiliation with the Canadian Co-operative Union.

A committee composed of W. R. Wood, R. McKenzie, F. H. Grainger, C. H. Burnell, and T. R. Young was named to wait on the government with proposed amendments to legislation.

The general store of W. H. Singer, Alexander Road, in the municipality of Langley, B.C., was completely destroyed by fire on the 12th inst. It appears that Mrs. Singer tripped with an oil lamp in her hand, the lamp falling and exploding. Only the prompt assistance of neighbors saved Mrs. Singer from death, as the shock rendered her unconscious.

WEEKLY GROCERY MARKET REPORTS

Statements from Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE sugar market is again attracting a great deal of interest in view of the appointment of a commission to market the balance of the Cuban crop. The raw sugar market during the past week has been entirely under the influence of the Cuba Commission, which is endeavoring to put into force some method of control, of which no definite plans, however, are as yet made public. In the meantime the market has shown a great deal of activity with quotations advanced to higher levels. The harvesting of the Cuban crop is progressing, but not to the same extent as at this time last year. There is now ready for shipment 325,012 tons of new crop sugar, and a balance of old crop of 107,316 tons, making a total of 432,328 tons of sugar in Cuban shipping ports available for immediate shipment. Refined sugar is firm at the refiners' price basis, and although there is nothing definite in regard to future prices there are indications that the trend will be upward rather than downward.

The markets are slowly coming back to a stabilizing basis, but there is still a certain amount of irregularity of prices, especially in wholesale circles.

Manufacturers report a better movement, not in any great volume, but a steady improvement is shown. Retailers are buying more frequently but in small quantities, which would indicate that goods that are moving are going into consumption.

Beans and cereals are in good demand at steady prices. Package cereals are fairly steady although there are some brands of cornmeal and pancake flour that show a slight reduction.

Coffees have a decidedly strong tone and spot stocks are considered to be the smallest on record. Teas continue with a firm tone under a strong demand for the better grades, prices in primary markets are steadily advancing but there has been little change as yet in quotations on spot.

Maple syrup is moving fairly freely and prices on some brands have been reduced.

There still appears to be a fair amount of honey in the country throughout Ontario, but dealers are showing little interest even at the lower prices as the consuming demand is limited. In Quebec, however, there is a good demand for honey and prices are holding fairly steady.

Spot stocks of shelled walnuts are very scarce under a strong demand. Primary markets are strong and higher. This condition also applies to almonds and pecans.

Southern rices are again reduced in price and comparison shows that prices are now slightly lower than in 1914. Potato values continue to reach lower levels.

The hog market is weak and unsettled with lower quotations during the week. Eggs show a slightly firmer tendency, while butter has a slightly easy undertone. Cheese is firm and supplies are very limited.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 23.—There is a stronger tone to the sugar market with a likelihood of an advance in price. This is based on the steps taken by Cuba to control this season's crop. There are many declines in the prices of dried and evaporated fruit this week, especially apricots, peaches, pears and prunes. Raisins are very scarce. The nut market is very firm with a good demand. There is no change in molasses or corn syrups. The cereal market is much stronger on rolled oats and standard oatmeal, with advances in quotations made by some local dealers. Pearl hominy in bulk, however, is reduced in price. There is little improvement in the tea market but the demand seems to be concentrating on the better grade teas and some improvement in the movement of stocks is evident. Carolina rice is again reduced in price. Potatoes are still easy and lower. There is a big movement of oranges and grapefruit.

Rolled Oats Stronger

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There are a number of changes this week in the cereal market. Oatmeal stands very firm with some advances made by wholesalers. One quotation given locally is $4.25 per bag, which is an advance of 15 cents on the price previously quoted by this house. Rolled oats also stands very firm and some dealers are quoting higher prices. The mills, however, have not changed their price, but quotations as high as $3.75 per 90-pound bag are made. Pearl hominy is reduced in price this week and is now quoted at $3.25 per bag. Gold Dust brand cornmeal is reduced to $3.25 per bag, a reduction of 65 cents.

CANNED GOODS.—There are no changes to quote this week on the canned goods market, except that new quotations are made on Clover Leaf salmon by some local dealers, which makes the price for half-pound tins $2.75, for one pound tall tins $5.20, and for the one pound flat $5.35. The movement of canned goods is reported to be very good.

Evaporated Fruit Lower

Montreal.

DRIED FRUIT.—There are a number of reductions in quotations on dried fruit. Apricots are reduced in price, the fancy are now quoted at 38 cents, choice at 34 cents, and slabs at 29 cents. Fancy peaches are also reduced, being quoted at 28 and 25 cents. Choice evaporated pears are reduced 2 cents per pound, making the price 22 cents, and the fancy are quoted at 28 cents per pound. The weakness of the prune market has resulted in still lower quotations being made on nearly all sizes. The reductions vary from one to three cents per pound. 90-100s are quoted at 9 cents per pound. The scarcity of raisins on the market has resulted in a very strong feeling and also in a bigger demand for currants.

NUTS.—There is no change in the nut market this week. The shortage of walnuts has resulted in a very firm tone to the market. The demand for nuts has been surprisingly large and a very firm feeling exists throughout. Peanuts in particular are in big demand with a steady market.

Carolina Rice Reduced

Montreal.

RICE.—The feature of the rice mar ket this week is the exceedingly low price quoted on Carolina rice. A quotation of 8 cents per pound is made by some of the local dealers. This is a new low level for Carolina rice and at presen quotations it is decidedly below the aver age value of that brand of rice. The rice market has been very quiet and unsettled for some time. It is expected tha the demand for rice will pick up shortly and it is unlikely that quotations will go much lower. Tapioca, seed, pearl and flake are advanced ½ cent per pound.

SPICES.—There is no change in the spice market this week. The demand for spices at this season is not large, although there is a steady call for supplies for immediate requirements. Most dealers have sufficient stock on hand to carry them until spring, and for this reason the quotations on spices do not fluctuate.

Sugar Stands Steady

Montreal.

SUGAR.—There is no change in the sugar market this week. Cuban Commission have taken over control of Cuban raws in an effort to stabilize the price and nearly all the stocks on hand are being pooled for this purpose. Better Grade Teas in Demand

Montreal.

TEA.—There is no change in the tea market. The same condition continues that has been characteristic of this market for some time. Cheap teas are still flooding the trade and have their weakening influence on the better teas. The biggest demand is, however, for the grade that comes just between the medium and the best grade teas and on this market there is a little firmer feeling with a better movement locally. On the whole the demand shows an improvement in the public's taste and merchants state that the influence of the cheap teas on the market has been to drive people to the better grade teas. There is no change in the condition of Japan teas. These teas are perhaps a little stronger than the Ceylon and Indian teas.

Potatoes are Lower

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—There is practically no change in the vegetable market this week. Potatoes are still arriving in good quantities and are selling at $1.20 per bag. Green Mountain potatoes are selling here ex-track as low as 90 cents per bag. This is a surprisingly low price for potatoes at this season. Tomatoes are arriving in small quantities but are high in price.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—Price changes are not numerous this week and the general tone is slowly coming back to a steadier basis. Sugar is firm at the refiners' price basis and there is little cutting on this commodity. Teas and coffees are strong under an active demand, especially for the finer grades. Shelled walnuts are in light supply, under a strong demand at firm quotations. Shelled almonds and pecans are also firm. Beans and cereals are unchanged but there is a good demand noted. Currants are weak with a tendency for lower prices. Blue Rose rice is quoted lower. Jams are in better demand, but orders are regulated by consumption. Smaller sizes of California navel oranges are reduced in price owing to the crop running mostly to small sizes, the larger sizes are firm at unchanged prices. Honey is quiet under reduced prices. One brand of maple syrup has declined. Potato values again reach lower levels.

Beans in Good Demand

Toronto.

Jams Show More Activity

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Jams are moving with better satisfaction to both wholesalers and manufacturers and as retailers are buying only in small quantities, but more frequently, the improved movement can be considered a consuming one. Some price changes have been effected on Welch's lades. The following are the new quotations: All lades in tins, fours are $1.07 each, 16-ounce jars $4.50 per dozen. No. 9 glass Grapelade, $2.20 per dozen. No. 1 tins (13 ounces), $2.25 per dozen. No. 2 tins (25 ounces), $4.37½ per dozen. No. 2½ tins (37 ounces), $6.25 per dozen. Canned vegetables are in active demand at firm quotations. Canned fruits, especially the fancy lines, are quiet and show little inquiry.

Currants Are Weak

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Prunes continue to move fairly well but retailers confine their orders to small amounts, but are ordering more frequently, which would indicate that prunes are meeting with a better consuming demand. Currants are weak and reductions are expected on some future shipments. Cooking figs in bags of 30 pounds are offered at a lower price of 10½ cents per pound. Raisins are holding firm at the high figures, but since the first of the year the demand has been very limited.

The larger sizes are scarce, 150s being quoted at $6 and 126s at $6.50. The smaller sizes of California lemons are also lower, 360s selling at $4.25 per case. Canadian apples are in fair demand at unchanged prices. British Columbia boxed apples are quoted at $3.85 and Washington at $4. Hot house rhubarb is in demand at $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen bunches. NUTS.—Shelled walnuts are very l and it is doubtful whether 50 cases co be picked up among the importers. T perhaps is an instance of where t wave of non-buying has reacted a wholesale men are finding themsel in a position where they are having d ficulty in filling orders. One of t heaviest importers stated that he h sold 100 cases to a Montreal firm, wh practically left him a stock of about cases. Other small shipments are the water but it will be some time fore they arrive. Shelled almonds also in a firm position and prices ran from 42 to 47 cents per pound. Shel pecans are firm and one house is off ing them at $1.15 per pound but general price appears to be around $1. Shelled brazils is about the weak spot in the nut market and althou prices generally have not been chan there is some irregularity.

Sugar Steady to Firm

Toronto.

SUGAR. — Freight rates have now been adjusted which brings prices to $10.83 for granulated. The market is firm and some wholesalers are predicting an advance. The attitude of the sugar refiners, however, is non-committal and nothing can be learned with definiteness as to future prices. Raw sugars are in a stronger position with prices advancing and now that the balance of this season's crop of Cuban sugar has been placed in the hands of a commission for marketing, the tendency will be inclined to be upward rather than downward.

Maple Syrup Lower

Toronto.

MAPLE SYRUP. — The demand for maple syrup is showing a steady improvement, but although no one is buying in large quantities, there is a good movement to the retail trade, which indicates that consumers have renewed interest in this commodity. Bowes' pure maple syrup is reduced as follows: Cases of 6 No. 1 tins, $14.90 per case. Cases of 12 No. 3 bottles, $7.60 per case. Cases of 24 No. 4 bottles, $8.50 per case. One-gallon tins, 6 to case, $19.10 per dozen. Five-gallon tins, $14.55 each.

Tippy Teas Advancing

Toronto.

TEAS.—The tea markets continue to rule with a firm tone. Spot stocks are not large and, although quotations are unchanged, higher prices, especially on the finer grades, are not unlikely in view of the scarcity and steadily advancing prices in primary markets. Cable advices from Calcutta report that tippy teas are rapidly advancing in price.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 23.—The market for general groceries during the week has shown a marked improvement in both city and country districts. Sugar remains steady. Canned vegetables continue to improve in demand and prices are now more in line with canners' lists. The dried fruit market shows no price changes, but wholesalers report a better buying movement. The demand for coffee locally has shown an improvement and coffee is quoted lower than replacement value. Tea is firmer. Peppers, both black and white, are higher. Jap rice has a firmer tone, while Siam is easier. The shelled nut market continues firm. Potatoes and other local vegetables continue on the downward trend. A drop of 50 cents per barrel is noted in flour.

C. jams, which opened at $18 per case of one dozen fours and later dropped to $11.50, are advanced this week $1.50 per case, making the present price $13 per case. Why Cold Storage Stabilizes Prices

Prevents Prices From Going to Extremes During Scarcity—What Is Speculation?—The Answer

By L. D. H. WELD in Forbes Magazine

A MERCHANT bought twenty carloads of eggs in May, and put them in cold storage. He paid 40 cents a dozen for them, making a total outlay of about $96,000. He didn't have the ready cash to invest, so he borrowed money from his bank up to 75 per cent. of the value of the eggs.

Easy money, you say? Buy a few carloads of eggs with borrowed money; nothing to do but sit tight and wait until the price goes up during the next fall and winter; then sell them out at a handsome profit — enough to keep a family in comfortable circumstances for the whole year. And if this "egg deal" doesn't yield enough, why, just buy a few carloads of butter, or of potatoes. Easiest kind of a life you can imagine!

Queer thing, though, about that fellow that bought the eggs. I saw him in the fall after he bought his twenty carloads, along about November, and he looked troubled and worried. I asked him, "What's the matter?" He told me that business didn't look very good.

I happened to know about his egg operations, and I said, "Why, I thought you always made money. Don't see why you should worry."

He told me that he guessed I was like most other people, and that I didn't know much about the egg business or the cold-storage business. And then he began to give me a few pointers that made me realize that there are a lot of things about speculation that I didn't understand.

He explained that he had paid 40 cents a dozen, and that his storage, interest and insurance amounted to 3 1/3 cents a dozen. "That means that if can get 43 1/3 cents a dozen, I'll just break even. But have you noticed the egg market, lately?" he asked. "The blooming things haven't gone above 41 cents since June, and if I had to sell out now, I'd lose $5,600 on the whole deal."

"But surely," said I, "the price will go up before the winter is over."

Good and Bad Years

"It may, and it may not," he answered. "I have only a couple of months longer, and if we have a warm winter there may be lots of eggs coming to market, especially from the south. You see, there are a few thousand other fellows in the same boat as myself, and the storage stocks are very large for this time of year. I can't possibly hold them until the heavy supply begins to come in. Eggs can't be held over from one season to another."

This set me to thinking, and I asked him if he didn't usually make a pretty good thing out of his egg business. He said that in the long run, year in and year out, he made a respectable living out of it, but that there were many bad years mixed in with the good ones. His story ran about as follows:

"Last year I made a clear profit of a cent and a half a dozen. That was pretty good; above the average. I made about $4,500 on the year's business. The year before I just barely broke even. I had all my trouble and worry for nothing. I tell you this is no business for a nervous man. The year before that I lost half-a-cent a dozen, and if I hadn't made a killing the year before, with a profit of over two cents a dozen, I wouldn't have had enough to live on, and I'd have had to go into some other business.

"You see, when a bad year comes along, lots of fellows get discouraged, and they don't put any eggs away the next season. That means that storage stocks are small, the price goes up, and those of us who stick to the game make a profit. I long ago learned that the only way to make a living out of this business is to stick to it year-in and year-out, and to accept the lean years as a part of the game. In the long run, I come out all right, but sometimes I think it isn't worth while to spend one's life taking such chances.

"But some one's got to do it, I suppose. About two-thirds of the eggs that are produced in the United States come to market in the four spring months of March, April, May and June. If there weren't some of us who run the risk of storing away the surplus, the price would be so low in the spring that it wouldn't pay farmers to raise them. And then there would be so few eggs the rest of the year that the price would be so high that only millionaires could afford to buy them. It's a mighty good thing all around that some one stores them up in the spring.

Average Profit Small

"Most people don't believe that the profits in this business are so small. But you can easily verify what I say. Government reports, and agricultural college bulletins, and trade papers give you the dope. Why, I recently saw where one of the biggest handlers of cold storage products in the country reported his profits to an investigating committee in Washington, and the average profit on eggs for the past six years was just about a cent a dozen; on butter it was six-tenths of a cent per pound; and on poultry, only three-sevenths of a cent per pound.

"The storage of eggs is a speculative business—more speculative than most."

After a pause, he went on: "It isn't generally realized that speculation permeates all business.

"When you take a new job, you are a speculator; you are running a chance that you may not fit your job, or that the boss won't be satisfied with you.

"When you buy a stock of merchandise for your store, you are speculating; you are running the risk of not being able to sell the goods at a profit. Or, in the case of some goods, you are running a risk that they may deteriorate, or spoil, before you can sell them to advantage.

"When you buy a carload of cotton or a block of securities, you are speculating; you are running the risk of not being able to sell them at a higher price than you paid; or, what amounts to practically the same thing, you are running the risk of having paid more than you might have paid a week later.

"Speculation is nothing but the running of chances, or the assumption of risks. Every one is speculating to a certain extent every day.

"But at some times you speculate more than you do at others. When you buy a stock of staple, advertised groceries, you do not have to speculate very much. The price is steady, the demand is known, and you are practically sure of being able to resell before they spoil.

"But when you buy a carload of eggs, you may have to resell at a loss, or you may find before you have sold out that you could have bought at least part of your supply at a lower price. The price fluctuates. Or, if you buy a dozen crates of cantaloupes or strawberries, a considerable portion may spoil before you have been able to sell out.

"It's a funny thing, but almost everybody seems to think that speculation has the effect of raising prices. That's the theory the people down in Washington, who are trying to reduce the cost of living, go on. I can't figure it that way, and I firmly believe that speculation actually reduces prices, or keeps them from going higher than they would otherwise go. It also tends to make prices more steady.

"I think I can prove that statement by just appealing to your common sense. I'll concede that speculation undoubtedly raises prices temporarily. Take the price of eggs, for example. The speculators who buy up eggs in the spring create a demand that otherwise wouldn't exist, and therefore the price is higher than it would be if eggs were bought only for current consumption.

"The more eggs that are put away, however, the lower the price will be during the other eight months of the year. And the higher price during the spring induces a greater production of eggs than would otherwise be possible. This means that the total supply of eggs for the whole year's consumption is greater than it would be if there were not a market for the surplus during the spring. A greater supply, of course, means a lower average price throughout the year.

"Another thing: lots of people seem to think that the price of an article can be raised by selling it back and forth, or from one to another. The newspapers come out with stories about how a carload of eggs was sold by one dealer or speculator to another half-a-dozen times, and that each time the price was raised.

"Now, it may happen that a carload of eggs occasionally changes hands a number of times; that sometimes happens to a car of eggs. But so far as raising the price is concerned, that's all bunk. A man can't sell an article for more than its market price at any time. If the price is steadily going up, a car of eggs may change hands six times, with a profit of half-a-cent a dozen at each sale. But if the original owner had held on long enough, he would have made the whole profit of three cents, instead of having that amount divided among six dealers.

How Public Is Benefited

"I could also tell you of plenty of cases where goods have changed hands frequently, but at a loss on each transaction. When speculative goods change hands a number of times, that merely means that a number of different people are dividing the risks of profit and loss. It isn't all borne by one person.

"Yes, you say, but if you had been the original owner of the car of eggs, you could have sold it at a profit of a cent or two for consumption instead of to some other speculator, and then you would have been holding the price down, and you would have benefited the public.

"My answer to that would be—'Yes, I'd have kept the price down, but only for the moment.' If some one hadn't held back the supply the price would have gone still higher later on. The funny thing about the food speculator is that if he makes a profit, he benefits the country! He has withheld goods from consumption at a time when they were less needed until a time when they were more needed. The fact that the price rises and he makes a profit proves that. If the price had fallen and the speculator had lost money, that would show that the need for the goods had been greater at the earlier time. In that case the speculator would have used poor judgment."

In conclusion, my friend, who seemed to be a close student of the whole system of speculation, explained that the common impression that speculative profits were made through manipulation or restraint of trade is without foundation; that there is just as much competition in the purchase and sale of storage products as in the purchase and sale of products for current consumption; and that in all its investigations the Government had not been able to unearth any instances where speculators had acted together to manipulate the price artificially either upward or downward.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Feb. 23.—The demand for eggs is practically concentrated on new laid as the storage are exhausted and prices are further reduced. Butter is lower in price. Cheese, however, is advanced owing to the depletion of stocks by big export orders. Much lower prices are paid for hogs this week and barrelled pork is reduced in price. The beef market is firm with higher quotations on plate beef. There is a big demand for fish. Poultry prices are unchanged although the poultry market is very strong. The lard and the shortening markets are unchanged this week. Although there are a number of reductions in the produce market this week the trade as a whole is in an excellent condition. The lower prices are stimulating the movement and the Lenten season is distributing the demand for the different products.

Creamery Butter Lower

Montreal.

BUTTER.—The feature of the week has been the easier feeling that has prevailed in the market for butter. The larger receipts of the week have resulted in a decline of from 1 to 1½ cents per pound. The market on the whole has been quieter, with sales of the finest grass creamery at 53 to 53½ cents per pound. The finest fresh made creamery is selling at 51 to 51½ cents per pound and the lower grades at from 45 to 48 cents per pound. Solid packages of butter are quoted at 55 cents per pound for the finest creamery and at 56 cents per pound in one pound blocks.

The demand for cheese for export business has been such that local stocks have been almost depleted. The market is strong, with a good demand from local buyers for home consumption and prices are a little stiffer than they have been.

Montreal.

EGGS.—The price of new-laid eggs has scored a further decline this week of 10 cents per dozen, making a total decline in the last month of from 36 to 44 cents per dozen. The prospects are, with continued favorable weather throughout the country, for a still bigger production. If this keeps up still lower prices will result in the near future. There is a good demand for supplies to meet actual want and an active trade is being done in new-laid stock at 48 cents per dozen. American new-laid eggs are also being laid down in this market at 46 cents per dozen. There are practically no storage eggs on the market of the No. 1 quality, but the lower grade eggs that are being offered are quoted at 35 cents per dozen. FRESH MEATS.—On account of the smaller demand for hogs from outside sources, the market locally is weaker. As a result the supplies offered are quite sufficient to meet local requirements, although the demand for hogs is heavy considering the season of the year. There is a decline of from 75 cents to $1.00 per hundred pounds in the prices paid for hogs in Montreal. $15.50 per hundred is the quotation made for hogs weighed off cars. The beef market stands firm this week, with no change in quotations.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—In the produce markets eggs continue to absorb a great deal of interest and prices are again reduced to lower levels. Consumption of eggs has steadily increased which has had a tendency to rather steady the market at the moment. A feature of the butter market is the revival of a shipment of Dutch butter. This butter is of a pale color and has somewhat of a flat flavor, and it is generally considered that it will not seriously affect the market. Another factor that is unfavorable to the Dutch butter is that it is packed in casks of 112 pounds, which makes it hard to cut into one pound prints. Hogs continue to be in a weak position with values reduced. Dressed hogs and fresh pork cuts are lower, also fresh beef cuts. Smoked hams and bacon are lower. Lard and shortening are reduced in price. Fish quotations are steady under a good demand. Poultry is moving fairly well under light receipts.

Butter Slightly Easier

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The tone of the butter market is slightly easier, although quotations are practically unchanged. The quantity of Dutch butter arriving is not considered to be sufficient to affect the market.

FRESH MEATS.—Live hogs continue to hold a weak position and prices have been again reduced during the week. The receipts have been light, but the big packers say that the prices are still too high for export business and are offering this week 50 cents per hundred less than last week's close. Dressed hogs are lower, now quoted at $19.00 to $21.00 per hundred. Loins of pork are quoted at 36 cents per pound, a reduction of four cents. Other pork cuts are down one to four cents per pound. It Pays to Read the Advertisements

THE MAIN thing an advertiser wants to do is to tell you plainly just how and why his goods are worthy of your consideration. You can learn a great deal from that alone, because many things you see advertised are the things you buy and use in your regular daily life. By reading the advertisements you can become familiar with the names and read descriptions of the things that are best and most satisfactory.

SHELLED NUTS HAVE FIRM TONE

Shelled Bordeau walnuts in primary markets are in a strong position with prices higher. Importers have not been buying heavily the past few months and consequently spot stocks are practically cleaned up. Future shipments to arrive are costing more than present stocks, and with the advance in exchange there are indications that quotations will be higher. Then again, many importers are not handling the Manchurian nut this season, which will create a bigger demand for the French variety.

Pecans, on account of the very small crop, have a stronger tone and in some instances quotations on spot have been advanced. Almonds and filberts are also firm under a good inquiry.

HOG MARKET TENDS DOWNWARD

The hog market continues with a downward trend and there are no indications this downward movement will be checked for some time, at least until packers get prices down to a level more in line with their ideas. They claim that prices are far too high for export purposes and are offering lower prices each week and only buy what they require for immediate use. This condition is reflected on bacon, lard and other hog products and has resulted in these lines being in an unsettled condition.

To Cure "Flabby" Service—More Daytons.

MR. RETAILER:

Is your service "FLABBY" as charged in the indictment?

"Guilty or not guilty?"

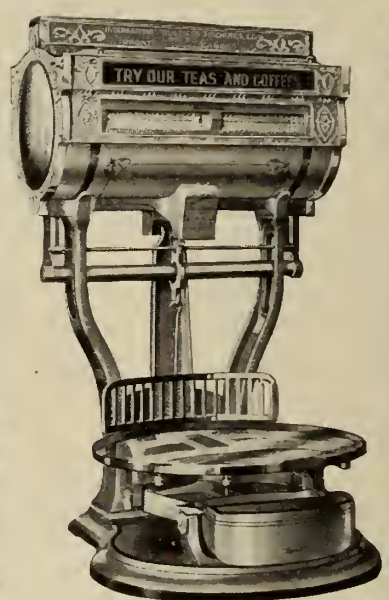
One of America's greatest sales experts is your accuser. He says that about four years ago you and your sales force "broke training"; that since then it has been easy to sell goods; that you've grown accustomed to telling the customer what goods you've been out of and making excuses for delays; in short that your vim had withered and you're "FLABBY."

Slow service and vexing delays mean "FLABBY" business.

If you've been guilty of them, Mr. Retailer, call a halt NOW. People no longer will beg you to sell them goods, nor will they waste their time in a "waiting line."

If your sales service is "FLABBY," now is the time to back it up with the latest and best service equipment—International Dayton Scales, Meat Slicers and Cheese Cutters."

The up-to-date Halifax grocery pictured above shows you how. Provide enough Daytons to handle your trade even at the peak of the rush hour—then you can insist that your clerks give SERVICE instead of EXCUSES.



$2,500 In Cash Prizes

Are You Entered Yet in the Great Dayton Scales Word Contest?

Here is your problem: How many words can you make up from the letters which make up the words D-A-Y-T-O-N S-C-A-L-E-S? Come in and win. The contest is open to merchants and their clerks all over Canada and Newfoundland who use scales. It costs you nothing to enter. Replies must be in before Mareh 15, 1921.

If you have not yet received circular with rules and entry blanks, write to-day to our Contest Department.

The Answer To A Need

No product ever "caught on" as Aladdin did, unless it fulfilled a real want on the part of the public.

The women of Canada wanted a Dye Soap that would be as easy to handle as ordinary soap and yet that would give results equivalent to those obtainable by professional dye experts.

We gave them just that—and the natural result is a sales response so immediate and so large that merchants are as enthusiastic in selling Aladdin as the women are in using it.

Long Established Quality, Convenience and Economy

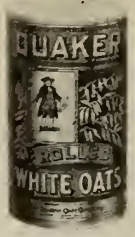
These are the three things that have made Borden's Milk Products so popular with women. They are the same factors that have made them the fastest selling milk products in the grocer's store.

And year after year Borden's National advertising is telling your customers about this QUALITY, CONVENIENCE and ECONOMY—constantly at work doing its share to help the grocer speed up turnovers and increase his profit.

The Borden Co., Limited

MONTREAL

You Take This Loss



On a sale of 90 lbs. of bulk Rolled Oats you won't average to-day over 65c gross profit.

You put up 90 lbs. of loose Rolled Oats in eighteen 5-lb. paper bags.

The lowest price at which any competitor is selling makes your market—be it 25c, 23c or even 20c.

One paper package is as good as another—no trade-mark on these packages to reassure your customers.

The quality and condition of the product is often doubtful. You have extra expense for paper bags, twine, time, shrinkage, etc.

From your gross margin—not over 65c—must be deducted all the usual as well as the extra overhead.

You can't make a net profit on that basis.. You are actually losing money.

Take This Sure Profit Instead

90 lbs. Rolled Oats make 26 packages of Qua ker Oats. They cost you no more than 28c each. Your selling price is 35c—a gross margin of 7c per package. Total gross margin, $1.82.

Quaker Oats require no twine, no paper bag, no time in filling, no shrinkage. Quality guaranteed, also condition of the product when your customer buys it.

You make at least three times as much profit from 90 lbs. of Quaker Oats than from same quantity of bulk oats.

It isn't difficult to choose which line you should get behind for best profit.

From a dollars and cents standpoint only, the housewife buys Rolled Oats cheaper in bulk, but she does so at your expense, which is not sound business.

The Quaker package contains the finest flake we make; does not break up, is sanitary and pure. The contents therefore are worth more per pound.

Would you go to a pawnshop to purchase a watch for your wife or daughter? No, you would not buy such an "unknown quantity." You go to a legitimate jeweler—someone you can trust—and you look for the maker's name on the case.

You get a watch that no one else has handled.

Show Quaker Oats in the window or in a prominent place in the store. Let your customers see you have the package for sale.

You exercise your option when buying—let your customer do the same.

Growers Brand brings you California-quality prunes—rich, full-flavored, full-meated—and priced a little lower, too!

True—most of the prunes packed under Growers Brand run to the medium and smaller sizes. But what of it? More and more of your customers are learning that the size of a prune does not necessarily affect its quality or its "eating value." As a matter of sales-fact, frequent tests have proved that the smaller-sized prunes are a "better buy." You get more "meat," more flavor, for the money—that's why! Ask your jobber about it—now!

Historic Facts

IN 1876 the packing of salmon began on the Fraser River, British Columbia.

In 1913 seventy-six modern canneries were packing salmon along the Coast line of B.C. from Fraser River to Naas River—500 miles.

The total pack of Pacific Coast in 1915 was 7,639,592 cases, valued at nearly 40,000,000 dollars.

The British Columbia Packers Association, now the B. C. Fishing and Packing Co., Ltd., in the same year were operating 24 canneries.

14 canneries on the Fraser River, 1 on the Bella Coola
4 canneries on the Skeena River, 1 on the Lowe Inlet
2 canneries on the River Inlet, 1 on the Alert Bay
1 cannery on the Naas River—24 in all

The Question of Price

Quality is the foundation of the Red Rose Tea business. That's a better basis for building trade than Price.

The fact that Red Rose Tea consists chiefly of blended Assam teas, the strongest in the world, makes the cost of Red Rose Tea per cup lower than teas selling at less per pound. Red Rose Tea is actually more economical.

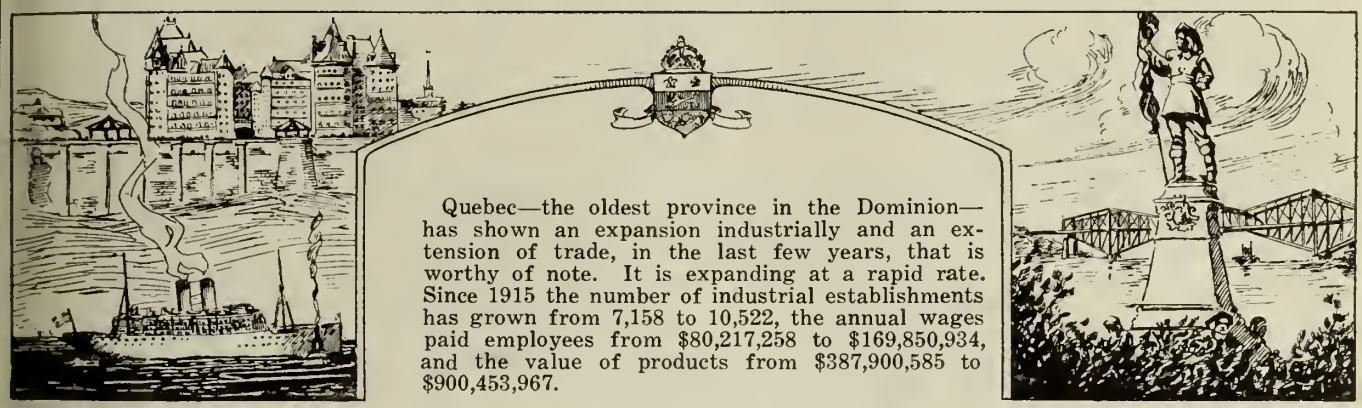
VOL. XXXV. TORONTO, MARCH 4, 1921 No. 9



Quebec—the oldest province in the Dominion—has shown an expansion industrially and an extension of trade, in the last few years, that is worthy of note. It is expanding at a rapid rate. Since 1915 the number of industrial establishments has grown from 7,158 to 10,522, the annual wages paid employees from $80,217,258 to $169,850,934, and the value of products from $387,900,585 to $900,453,967.

Demand for Quality Is True Economy

Montreal Grocers are Finding That People To-day More Than Ever Before are Buying the Better Quality Goods—Quality is Of More Importance Than the Price

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL.—Reports from retail grocers in different districts show that a new element characterizes the grocery trade which indicates a very healthy condition in the business. This element is a widespread demand on the part of the customers for quality. One grocer says that to-day, as never before, people are looking for quality in their foodstuffs and are quite willing to pay for it. He also added that it may seem to be to the contrary, but in the majority of cases it is true economy, an economy that the grocer has been advocating for some time, that only the best is cheap. Provision merchants state that this has done much to make easier the grocer's buying and has relieved him of some of his load of responsibility in buying.

In proof of this one of the grocers in this city said to Canadian Grocer representative: "Just before the war we put in an order for a small shipment of a new line of goods, which although it was of high quality seemed to be expensive in comparison with the prices on the same line prepared by another manufacturer. We felt at the time that we were taking a big chance but it was a new brand on the market and we decided to experiment with it. The shipment of the goods was delayed for some time on account of the outbreak of the war and many months elapsed, in which time we endeavored to cancel the order, fearing depressed times ahead. We were unsuccessful, however, and the goods were delivered. They were put on our shelves. At first the customers shied at the prices asked but after a little salesmanship they gave the goods a trial, on the merit of their quality. To-day, although the same goods are fifty per cent. dearer, we cannot get enough of them to supply the demand. We have found the same thing to be true in other lines in which the price is backed up by real quality."

Customers Demand Quality

A similar report was given to Canadian Grocer by A. Pigeon, the manager of Thos. F. Hannan's store, on St. Catherine St. W. Mr. Pigeon said: "Our customers demand above all quality in their provisions. For this they are willing to pay a little more. This is perhaps most evident in canned goods and preserved fruits. For instance if we show a customer two brands of olives, that are at a glance of the same size and quality but one is about twenty or thirty per cent. dearer than the other, in the majority of cases the customer will choose the dearer brand on account of the better quality implied by the price. In almost all the lines we carry it seems that the people are to-day prepared to pay more for the line that shows quality than for one in which the quality is doubtful. This has helped us in our buying. We know pretty well just what to buy and what not to buy. If a grocer is buying for customers who think of nothing but price he is very apt to be led astray and find on his hands a stock that does not meet with the tastes of his customers. When a man is buying for quality he only needs to be convinced that the quality is there and he is able then to recommend it without fear to his customers. We have found that buying for quality is by far the most satisfactory to the grocer and that it is the easiest line to turn over. During the last year we have not kept our stock as large as it has been but by a careful arrangement we have found that it improves the appearance of the store, our stock turns over quicker and so is in better condition, it does not take as much capital to run the business, and we are able to take advantage of the readjustments of the market. I doubt if the time will ever come when the grocer will buy as heavily again as he was tempted to do at one time, on account of the rising prices. I believe that it is to the advantage of all to buy in smaller quantities and buy oftener."

Quality Means More Than Price
